 among the trees 2150:6
 and the rain 2150:6
 arose among the pines 2150:6
 arose and rush'd upon south 2150:6
 as w. shifts, shift sails 2150:6
 beat of off-shore w. 2150:6
 between w. and nobility 2150:6
 between w. and water 2150:6
 blow, blow, thou winter w. 2150:6 blow blustering w. 2150:6
 blow w. gone wreck 2150:6
 blow w. swell billow 2150:6
 bloweth where it listeth 2150:6
 boots not to resist w. 2150:6
 by w. is fire fostered 2150:6 can't catch w. in net 2150:6 cold blows the w. 2150:6
 doth play the trumpet 2150:6
 east w. made flesh 2150:6
 east w. may never blow 2150:6
 ends the work by w. 2150:6
 endure w. and weather 2150:6
 every w. of criticism 2150:6
 fellow called the W. 2150:6
 fly upon wings of w. 2150:6
 from Kingdom of Heaven 2150:6 gather w. in net 2150:6
 God tapers the w. to the shorn lamb 2150:6
 gyrate w. goes down night 2150:6
 he that observeth the w. 2150:6 shall not sow 2150:6
 bear the w. among the trees 2150:6
 bend the w. go Yoo-o-o 2150:6
 I fly with the w. 2150:6
 I was but as the w. 2150:6
 ill blows the w. 2150:6 ill w. bloweth no good 2150:6 in the east 2150:6
 into the pain 2150:6
 inevitable and creeping w. 2150:6
 is awake, pretty leaves 2150:6
 is in the palm-trees 2150:6

Wind, continued

is never weary 2150:1
 is passing by 2150:1
 is the w. at that door 2150:1
 it is the w. of March 2150:1
 like W. I go 2150:1
 little w. kindles fire 2150:1
 little w. that hardly shook 2150:1 long enough to say prayers 2150:1
 loud w., strong w. 2150:1
 making w. my post-horse 2150:1
 midnight w. doth sigh 2150:1 means like a long wail 2150:1 no w. but brings rain 2150:1
 no w. that has no port 2150:1
 no w. when port unknown 2150:1
 north w. is blowing 2150:1
 O wild West W. 2150:1
 of accident 2150:1
 of aery threats 2150:1
 of complication 2150:1
 of criticism 2150:1
 of doctrine 2150:1
 of the sunny south 2150:1
 of the western sea 2150:1
 old w. in the old anger 2150:1 one foul w. no more makes winter 2150:1
 pass by me as idle w. 2150:1
 passeth over m. it is gone 2150:1 puffs up empty hadders 2150:1
 ran before the w. 2150:1 searches for flowers 2150:1
 sits the w. in that corner 2150:1 soft south w. 2150:1
 soft w. blowing 2150:1
 sorrow's w. and rain 2150:1
 south w. brings wet 2150:1
 South W. he was dressed 2150:1
 sown w. reap whirlwind 2150:1 speeches which are as w. 2150:1
 stayeth his rough w. 2150:1 sweeps the broad forest 2150:1
 swell'd with w. 2150:1
 that grand old harper 2150:1
 that sighs before dawn 2150:1
 that wafts us toward the port 2150:1
 they have sown the w. 2150:1
 this w. is called Zephyrus 2150:1
 three sorts of w. 2150:1
 tidings how the w. went 2150:1
 too much w. to sail 2150:1
 'twixt w. and water 2150:1
 walls in winter 2150:1
 walketh upon wings of w. 2150:1
 warm w. the west w. 2150:1
 was a torrent of darkness 2150:1
 was down, but sea ran high 2150:1
 way of the w. strange 2150:1
 we run before the w. 2150:1
 weigh the w. 2150:1
 whether to the parching w. 2150:1
 what is lighter than w. 2150:1
 what w. blew you hither 2150:1
 when the w. is in East 2150:1
 when w. blows, cradle will rock 2150:1
 when w. in odors dying 2150:1 which way does w. set 2150:1 which way the w. is 2150:1 which way w. blew 2150:1
 which way w. blows 2150:1
 who can win back the w. 2150:1 who has seen the w. 2150:1
 will have its way 2150:1
 wings of the w. 2150:1
 winnow'd with so rough w. 2150:1 winter's powerful w. 2150:1 within her womb 2150:1
 woos like a lover 2150:1
 Wind's bride 2150:1
 Wind-flower 2150:1

 weather 2150:1
 Window-blind: snapping
 W. 2150:1
 Window-panes are white 2150:1
 Windows dark and dull 2150:1
 don't fall out of w. 2150:1
 her two blue w. 2150:1
 how great w. for my soul 2150:1
 let fall w. mine eyes 2150:1
 net by eastern w. 2150:1
 of another world 2150:1
 of latten 2150:1
 of my eyes 2150:1
 of the sky 2150:1
 of the soul 2150:1
 of thine age 2150:1
 of those who sleep 2150:1
 saw from his w. nothing save his own 2150:1
 shut w. of sky 2150:1
 shut w. to light house 2150:1 storied w. richly light 2150:1

 do surely rattle 2150:1
 do ye dare, O w. 2150:1 felon w. 2150:1
 from prison w. loosed 2150:1
 from w. my passions free 2150:1 futile w. to heart in port 2150:1
 great w. shorewards blow 2150:1
 great w. utter prophecies 2150:1
 have talked with him 2150:1
 high w. on high hills 2150:1
 hollow w. begin to blow 2150:1
 March w., April showers 2150:1
 of all the corners 2150:1
 of doctrine let loose 2150:1
 of heaven might whistle 2150:1
 of life come strong 2150:1
 rived motley sails 2150:1
 rocking w. are piping loud 2150:1
 rushing w. and gloomy
 skies 2150:1
 sometimes w. shall grin 2150:1

I—Tailor: Apothegms

¹ Great is the Tailor, but not the greatest.
CARLYLE, Essays: Goethe's Works.

² Sartor resartus. (The patched-up tailor.)
THOMAS CARLYLE, Title of book, 1833.

³ The tailor that makes not a knot loseth a stitch.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 4786.

⁴ A tailor, though a man of upright dealing,—
True but for lying,—honest but for stealing.
SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Of a Precise Tailor.

⁵ Be sure your tailor is a man of sense;
But add a little care, a decent pride,
And always err upon the sober side.
O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 425.

⁶ Tailor, thou art a vermin, Worse than the same thou prosecut'st and prick'st
In subtle seam.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News, Act i, sc. 1.

⁷ I cannot abide a talking tailor.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News, Act i, sc. 1.

⁸ There is knavery in all trades, but most in tailors.

ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Æsop, 161.

⁹ Truth among clothiers has less harbor than a louse upon a threadbare cloth.

WILLIAM SPELMAN, Dialogue, p. 116. (1580)

¹⁰ Let every tailor keep to his goose.

W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 800.

¹¹ Lie ten nights awake, carving the fashion of a new doublet.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, Act
ii, sc. 3, l. 18.

¹² II—Tailor: The Tailor Makes the Man
God makes and the tailor shapes.

JOHN BULWER, Anthropomet., 256. (1650)

¹³ God makes and apparel shapes, but 'tis money that finishes a man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 1680.

¹⁴ A man made by God and not by a tailor.

ANDREW JACKSON, referring to Sam Houston.
(McELROY, Grever Cleveland, ii, 258.)

¹⁵ For though the tailor makes the man, the cook yet makes the diabol.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Bloody Brother, Act iii,
sc. 2. (1616)

Believe it, sir,

That clothes do much upon the wit, as weather
Does on the brain; and thence, sir, comes your proverb,
The tailor makes the man.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News, Act i, sc. 1.
(1625)

¹⁶ What a fine man Hath your tailor made you!
MASSINGER, City Madam, Act i, sc. 2. (1658)

¹⁷ By a new creation of my tailor's
I've shook off old mortality.

JOHN FORD, Fancies Chaste and Noble, Act i,
sc. 3.

¹⁸ Thy tailor! . . . that poor shred
Can bring more to the making up of a man, Than can be hoped from thee; thou art his creature;
And did he not, each morning, new create
thee,
Thou'dst stink and be forgotten.

MASSINGER, The Fatal Dowry, Act iii, sc. 1.

¹⁹ Get me some French tailor
To new-create you.

MASSINGER, The Renegade, Act iii, sc. 1.

²⁰ Yes, if they would thank their maker,
And seek no further; but they have new creators,
God tailor and god mercer.

MASSINGER, A Very Woman, Act iii, sc. 1, l. 161.

²¹ Thy tailor, rascal, . . . made those clothes,
Which, as it seems, make thee.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, Act iv, sc. 2, l. 61.

²² Cornwall: Thou art a strange fellow: a tailor make a man?

Kent: Ay, a tailor, sir; a stone-cutter or a painter could not have made him so ill, though he had been but two hours at the trade.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, Act ii, sc. 2, l. 61.

III—Tailor: Nine Tailors Make a Man

²³ They say three tailors go to the making up of a man.

DEKKER AND WENSTER, Northward Hoe, Act
ii. (1607)

²⁴ Two tailors go to a man.

UNKNOWN, Tailor's Jest, p. 20. (1611)

²⁵ Some foolish knave at first began the slander that three tailors are one man.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-PORTR, Works, p. 73.
(1630)

²⁶ Like to nine tailors, who, if rightly spell'd
Into one man are monosyllab'd.

JOHN CLEVELAND, Poems, p. 23. (1639)

Just like the manhood of nine tailors.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. 1, canto 2, l. 22. (1663)

Nine tailors make but one man.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. (1670)

Does it not stand on record that the English Queen Elizabeth, receiving a deputation of eighteen tailors, addressed them with a "Good morning, gentlemen both!"

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. III, ch. 11.

Thou wretched Fraction, wilt thou be the ninth part even of a tailor?

CARLYLE, Francia.

It takes nine tailors to make a man. (Il faut neuf tailleurs pour faire un homme.)

UNKNOWN. A Breton proverb, quoted by Comte de la Villemarqué.

TALE

I—Tale: Apotegms

Tell me the tales that to me were so dear,
Long, long ago,—long, long ago.

THOMAS HAYNES BAYLY, Long, Long Ago.

The story always old, and always new.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book. Pt. II, l. 214.

A tale of the times gone by. (Ein Märchen aus alten Zeiten.)

HEINE, Die Lorelei.

Unwritten, half-forgotten tales of old.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Life and Death of Jason. Bk. xi, l. 464.

'Tis an old tale, and often told.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto II, st. 27.

But now the mystic tale that pleas'd of yore

Can charm an understanding age no more.

ADDISON, An Account of the Greatest English Poets, l. 23.

I wrote tales beside,
Carved many an article on cherry-stones
To suit light readers.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. III, l. 317.

Who will, may hear Sordello's story told.

Who would has heard Sordello's story told.

ROBERT BROWNING, Sordello. First and last lines. It was Tennyson who remarked that he had been able to understand only two lines of Sordello, the first and the last, and both of them were lies.

When we meet next we'll have a tale to tell.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto V, st. 84.

Story! God bless you! I have none to tell, Sir,

GEORGE CANNING, The Friend of Humanity and the Knife Grinder.

Let every fellow tell his tale about.

CHAUCER, The Knights Tale, l. 32.

Sey forth thy tale, and tarry not the time.

CHAUCER, The Reevers Prologue, l. 51.

For though myself be a full vicious man,
A moral tale yet I you telle can.

CHAUCER, The Pardoner's Prologue, l. 131.

Listen, every one

That listen may, unto a tale

That's merrier than the nightingale.

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: Pt. III. The Sicilian's Tale.

This tale's a fragment from the life of dreams.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Phantom or Fact?

Believe not every tale.

APOCRYPHA: Ecclesiasticus, xix, 15.

This story will never go down.

HENRY FIELDING, Tumble-Down Dick. Air 1.

The tale runs as it pleases the teller.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4783.

Lest men suspect your tale untrue,

Keep probability in view.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Painter Who Pleased Nobody, l. 1.

A good tale ill told is a bad one.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 135.

No tale so good but may be spoiled in the telling.

W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 817.

Mar a curious tale in telling it.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act I, sc. 4, l. 35.

A tale never loses in the telling.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 6.

Soft as some song divine, thy story flows.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 458. (Pope, tr.)

Why do you laugh? Change but the name and the tale is told of you. (Quid rides? Mutato nomine de te Fabula narratur.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1, l. 69.

How strive you? De te fabula!

ROBERT BROWNING, The Statue and the Bust, last line.

I am always at a loss to know how much to believe of my own stories.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Tales of a Traveller: Preface.

A story without a head (or beginning).

(Ἀκέφαλος μῦθος.)

PLATO, Phaedrus. Sec. 264.

And thereby hangs a tale.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, II, 7, 28; IV, 1, 60; Merry Wives of Windsor, I, 4, 189;

Othello, III, 1, 8; Taming of Shrew, IV, 1, 60.

Mark now, how a plain tale shall put you down.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act II, sc. 4, l. 281.

I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act I, sc. 3, l. 90.

And what so tedious as a twice told tale?
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xii, last line. (Pope, tr.)

1 Often would he tell the same tale in other words. (Ille referre aliter sæpe solebat idem.)
OVID, Art Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 128.

2 A good tale is none the worse for being twice told.
SCOTT, Old Mortality. Ch. 7.

3 Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 108.

IV—Tale: Long-Winded Tales

See also Brevity

4 Various and strange was the long-winded tale.
JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, l. 383.

5 Three stories high, long, dull, and old
As great lords' stories often are.
GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Maid of the Moor.

6 A story, in which native humour reigns,
Is often useful, always entertains:
A graver fact, enlisted on your side,
May furnish illustration, well applied;
But sedentary weavers of long tales
Give me the fidgets, and my patience fails.
COWPER, Conversation, l. 203.

A tale should be judicious, clear, succinct;
The language plain, and incidents well link'd;
Tell not as new what every body knows;
And, new or old, still hasten to a close.
COWPER, Conversation, l. 235.

7 It is a foolish thing to make a long prologue,
and to be short in the story itself.
APOCRYPHA: II Maccabees, ii, 32.

This is a long preamble of a tale.
CHAUCER, Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 831.
"Skoall to the Northland! skoall!"
—Thus the tale ended.

8 LONGFELLOW, The Skeleton in Armor.
O, Sir! the story will make your heart bleed,
... but it is too long to be told now.
STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. ii, ch. 17.

But that's another story.
RUDYARD KIPLING, Soldiers Three: Mulvaney.

V—Tale: Sad Tales

9 All the piteous tales that tears
Have water'd since the world was born.
THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Melancholy, l. 11.

10 The tale is worth the hearing; and may move Compassion, perhaps deserve your love
And approbation.

MARSHALL, Believe as You List: Prologue.

11 I will tell ye now
What never yet was heard in tale or song.

From old or modern bard, in hall or bower.
MILTON, Comus, l. 43.

12 Masters, I have to tell a tale of woe,
A tale of folly and of wasted life,
Hope against hope, the bitter dregs of strife,
Ending, where all things end, in death at last.
WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: Prologue. St. 6.

13 I could a tale unfold whose lightest word
Would harrow up thy soul.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 15.

I had as lief you would tell me of a mess of porridge.
SHAKESPEARE, Merry Wives of Windsor, iii, l. 64.

A sad tale's best for winter: I have one
Of sprites and goblins.
SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 25.

14 Come listen to my mournful tale,
Ye tender hearts and lovers dear;
Nor will you scorn to heave a sigh,
Nor need you blush to shed a tear.
WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Jemmy Dawson.

For seldom shall she hear a tale
So sad, so tender, yet so true.
WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Jemmy Dawson.

Listen to my tale of woe.
EUGENE FIELD, See 1475:15.

15 A lamentation and an ancient tale of wrong,
Like a tale of little meaning tho' the words are strong.
TENNYSON, The Lotus-eaters, l. 118.

16 I shudder as I tell it. (Horresco referens.)
VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 204.

TALENT

See also Genius and Talent

17 To do easily what is difficult for others is the mark of talent.
AMIEL, Journal, 17 Dec., 1856.

Talent is habitual facility of execution.
EMERSON, Essays: Natural History of Intellect.

18 Her talents were of the more silent class.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 49.

19 Few boys are born with talents that excel,
But all are capable of living well.
COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 509.

20 The difference between talents and character is adroitness to keep the old and trodden round, and power and courage to make a new road to new and better goals.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Circles.

Profound sincerity is the only basis of talent, as of character.

EMERSON, Essays: Natural History of Intellect.

Talent is developed in retirement; character is formed in the rush of the world. (Es bildet ein Talent sich in der Stille, Sich ein Charakter in dem Strom der Welt.)

Goethe, Tasso. Act I, sc. 2.

Each man has his own vocation. The talent is the call.

Emerson, Essays, First Series: Spiritual Laws.

Each man has an aptitude born with him.

Emerson, Society and Solitude: Success.

Every man has his gift, and the tools go to him that can use them.

Charles Kingsley, Saint's Tragedy. Act II, sc. 6.

Talents differ; all is well and wisely put; If I cannot carry forests on my back, Neither can you crack a nut.

Emerson, Fable.

And sure th' Eternal Master found His single talent well employ'd.

Samuel Johnson, On the Death of Mr. Robert Levett. St. 7.

That one talent which is death to hide.

Milton, Sonnet: On His Blindness.

And I was afraid, and went and hid thy talent in the earth.

New Testament: Matthew, xiv, 25.

Let us not overstrain our talents, lest we do nothing gracefully. (Ne forçons point notre talent; Nous ne ferions rien avec grâce.)

La Fontaine, Fables. Bk. IV, fab. 5.

Let the path be open to talent.

Napoleon Bonaparte, Sayings of Napoleon.

Hidden talent counts for nothing. (Occultæ muneris nullum esse respectum.)

Nero, quoting a Greek proverb, when arranging to make his début as a singer.

Suetonius records that the début was made at Naples. The theatre was shaken by an earthquake shock while Nero was singing, but he finished the number. The theatre collapsed just after the audience dispersed.

Hide not your talents, they for use were made.

What's a Sun-dial in the Shade?

Benjamin Franklin, Poor Richard, 1750.

The Faides were invited to be present at the birth of my son, and each one conferred a talent on him—he possesses them all. Unfortunately we had forgotten to invite an old fairy, who, arriving after all the others, exclaimed, "He shall have all the talents, except that to make good use of them."

Duchess d'Orléans, referring to the Duc d'Orléans, Regent of France during the minority of Louis XV. (Livy, The Great Mississippi Bubble.)

Often the greatest talents lie unseen. (Sæpe summa ingenia in occulto latent.)

Plautus, Capitula, I, 163. (Act I, sc. 2.)

Nathaniel: A rare talent!

Dull: If a talent be a claw, look how he claws him with a talent.

Shakespeare, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 2, 64.

Talents angel-bright, If wanting worth, are shining instruments In false ambition's hand, to finish faults Illustrious, and give infamy renown.

Young, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 273.

TALK

See also Conversation, Speech

I—Talk: Definitions

A great thing is a great book, but greater than all is the talk of a great man.

Benjamin Disraeli, Comingby. Bk. III, ch. 1.

The most fluent talkers or most plausible reasoners are not always the justest thinkers.

William Hazlitt, Essays: On Prejudice.

Talking is like playing on the harp; there is as much in laying the hands on the strings to stop their vibration as in twanging them to bring out their music.

Holmes, Anticrop of Breakfast-Table. Ch. 1.

The man who talks to unburthen his mind is the man to delight you.

Samuel Johnson, (Boswell, Life, III, 247.)

A good talker, even more than a good orator, implies a good audience.

Leslie Stephen, Life of Samuel Johnson. Ch. 3.

All natural talk is a festival of ostentation; and by the laws of the game each accepts and fans the vanity of the other.

R. L. Stevenson, Memories and Portraits: Talk and Talkers.

II—Talk: Apophthegms

Two great talkers will not travel far together. George Borrow, Lavengro. Ch. 33. Cited as a Spanish proverb.

"The time has come," the Walrus said,

"To talk of many things:

Of shoes—and ships—and sealing-wax—

Of cabbages—and kings—

And why the sea is boiling hot—

And whether pigs have wings."

Carroll, Through the Looking-Glass. Ch. 4.

When I can't talk sense, I talk metaphor.

John Philipot Curran. (Moore, Life of Sheridan, II, 29, note.)

True he can talk, and yet he is no speaker. (Αληθὴς ὁμιλεῖς, ἀδυνατῶντας λέγειν.)

Eupolis, Demos. (Plutarch, Lives: Alcibiades, XIII, 2.) Of Alcibiades.

Talkative rather than eloquent. (Loquax magis quam iacundus.)

SALLUST, History. Bk. iv, sec. 43.

Time will explain it all. He is a talker, and needs no questioning before he speaks.

EURIPIDES, Alcibiades. Fragment 38.

People may come to do anything almost, by talking of it.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (Boswell, Life, v, 286.)

You talk just like a book. (Vous parlez tout comme un livre.)

MOLIERE, Don Juan. Act I, sc. 2, l. 100.

Strange the difference of men's talk!

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 1660.

A hotch-potch of talk. (Sartago loquendi.)

PERCIVAL, Satires. Sat. i, l. 80.

You are talking cobble-stones. (Lapides loqueris.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 152. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

This is idle talk. (Verba multa facinus.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 638. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

The talk of the lips tendeth only to penury.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiv, 23.

I'll talk a word with this same learned Theban.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 162.

And all talk died, as in the grove all song

Beneath the shadow of some bird of prey.

TENNYSON, Pelleas and Ettarre, l. 594.

III—Talk: Table-Talk

In dinner talk it is perhaps allowable to fing any faggot rather than let the fire go out.

J. M. BARRIE, Tommy and Grizel, p. 34.

A civil guest

Will no more talk all, than eat all the feast.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 51.

A table-talk rich in sense,

And witty without wit's pretence.

COTTON MATHER, Epiaph on Anne Bradstreet.

And not to serve for table-talk.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

Let it serve for table-talk.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 93.

In after dinner talk,

Across the walnuts and the wine.

TENNYSON, The Miller's Daughter. St. 4.

IV—Talk: Asmonitions

Talk often, but never long: in that case, if you do not please, at least you are sure not to tire your hearers.

Lord CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 19 Oct., 1748.

Men of your kidney talk little; they glory in taciturnity, and cut their hair shorter than their eyebrows. (Rarus sermo illis et magna libido tacendi Atque supercilio brevior coma.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 14.

We know well enough that we should not talk of our wives, but we seem not to know that we should talk still less of ourselves. (On sait assez qu'il ne faut guère parler de sa femme, mais on ne sait pas assez qu'on devrait encore moins parler de soi.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 364.

Let your talk be such as is worthy of belief, and your words such as are commonly used. (Sit tibi credibilis sermo, consuetaque verba.)

QVINT, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 467.

Talk to every woman as if you loved her, and to every man as if he bored you.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act iii.

V—Talk: Familiar Talk

The charm and playfulness of his talk. (Lepos et festivitas orationis.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. ii, sec. 36.

They would talk of nothing but high life, and high-lived company; with other fashionable topics, such as pictures, taste, Shakespeare, and the musical glasses.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 9.

No season now for calm, familiar talk.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxii, l. 169. (Pope, tr.)

And the talk slid north, and the talk slid south,

With the sliding puffs from the hookah-mouth.

Four things greater than all things are,—

Women and Horses and Power and War.

KIPLING, Ballad of the King's Jest.

To beguile with talk the slow-moving hours. (Tarde tempora narrando fallat.)

QVINT, Tristia. Bk. iii, eleg. 3, l. 11.

We were wont to spend long hours in talking, the day not sufficing for our discourse. (Solebamus consumere longa loquendo Tempora, sermonem deficiente die.)

QVINT, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 13, l. 28.

His talk was like a stream which runs

With rapid change from rocks to reeds:

It slipped from politics to puns:

It passed from Mahomet to Moses:

Beginning with the laws which keep

The planets in their radiant courses,

And ending with some precept deep

For dressing eels or shoeing horses.

WINTEROP MACKWORTH PRATT, The Vicar.

1 Come, let's now talk with deliberation, fair and softly, as lawyers go to heaven.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. v, ch. 28.

2 Let's talk of graves, of worms, and epi-taphs; . . .

Let's choose executors and talk of wills.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 145.

3 I am not one who oft or much delight
To season my fireside with personal talk.

WORDSWORTH, Personal Talk. No. 1.

VI—Talk: Loquacity

See also Speech: Loquacity;

4 The talk of empty-headed, vain and tiresome babblers . . . has justly been thought to come from the lips and not from the heart.
The tongue ought not to be unrestrained and rambling, but guided by cords connected with the inmost breast.

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. i, ch. 15,
sec. 1.

5 It would talk; Lord, how it talked!

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Scornful Lady.
Act iv, sc. 1.

NATHANIEL LEE, Alexander the Great. Act i,
sc. 1.

How you do talk!

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 44.

Poor prattler, how thou talk'st!

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 64.

8 Folded his two hands and let them talk,
Watching the flies that buzzed! and yet no fool.

ROBERT BROWNING, An Epistle, l. 123.

9 So much they talked, so very little said.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rascals, l. 550.

10 He who talks much says many foolish things.
(Qui parle beaucoup dit beaucoup de sottises.)

CORNELIUS, Le Menteur: Sequel. Act iii, sc. 1.

Much talk, much foolishness.

The Talmud.

11 But far more numerous was the herd of such,
Who think too little, and who talk too much.

DRYDEN, Abraham and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 533.

Those that merely talk and never think.

BEN JONSON, An Epistle, Answering One that asked to be Sealed of the Tribe of Ben, l. 9.

They never taste who always drink;

They always talk who never think.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Upon a Passage in the Scaligeriana. The French say, "Moin on pense, plus on parle" (The less people think,
the more they talk).

10 Though I'm anything but clever,
I could talk like that for ever.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act ii.

11 He who talks much cannot always talk well.
(Chi parla troppo non può parlar sempre bene.)

GOLDONI, Pamela. Act i, sc. 6.

12 And there's our well-dressed gentleman, who sits,

By right divine, no doubt, among the wits,
Who airs his tailor's patterns when he walks,
The man that often speaks, but never talks.

O. W. HOLMES, The Banker's Secret, l. 63.

13 Whom the disease of talking still once possesseth, he can never hold his peace. Nay, rather than he will not discourse, he will hire men to hear him.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Optanda: Thersites Homeri.

14 Oft has it been my lot to mark

A proud, conceited, talking spark.

JAMES MERRICK, The Chameleon.

15 You interrupt him with your talking. (Sermone huic obsonas.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus. Act i, sc. 2, l. 74.

16 Talkativeness has another plague attached to it, even curiosity; for praters wish to hear much that they may have much to say.

PLUTARCH, Morals: Of Talkativeness.

17 Talk thy tongue weary: speak.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 115.

18 If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me;
I had it from my father.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 4, l. 26.

19 The red wine first must rise
In their fair cheeks, my lord; then we shall have 'em

Talk us to silence.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 4, l. 43.

20 For the watch to babble and to talk is most tolerable and not to be endured.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
iii, sc. 3, l. 37.

With volleys of eternal babble.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto 2, l. 453.

They only babble who practise not reflection.

SKRIBMAN, Pisarro. Act i, sc. 1.

21 A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk, and will speak more in a minute than he will stand to in a month.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act II, sc. 4, l. 155.

¹ In my youth people talked about Ruskin; now they talk about drains.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD, Robert Elsmere. Bk. II, ch. 12.

TARIFF, THE

² Protection and patriotism are reciprocal. This is the road that all great nations have trod.

J. C. CALHOUN, Speech, House of Representatives, 12 Dec., 1811.

³ It is a condition that confronts us—not a theory.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Annual Message, 1887, referring to the tariff.

There's one more President for us in Protection.

JAMES G. BLAINE, Letter, Dec., 1887, after Cleveland's tariff message.

⁴ Free trade is not a principle, it is an expedient.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech on Import Duties, 25 April, 1843.

Protection is not a principle, but an expedient.

DISRAELI, Speech, 17 March, 1845.

⁵ Free-trade, they [parties] concede, is very well as a principle, but it is never quite time for its adoption.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

⁶ What more incongruous than the administering of custom-house oaths and the searching of trunks and hand-bags under the shadow of "Liberty Enlightening the World"?

HENRY GEORGE, Protection or Free Trade. Ch. 9.

⁷ The tariff question is a local question.

WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK, Interview, Paterson, N. J., Daily Guardian, 8 Oct., 1880, during his campaign for the Presidency, a remark widely ridiculed and which helped to lose him the election.

⁸ Our interest will be to throw open the doors of commerce, and to knock off all its shackles, giving perfect freedom to all persons for the vent of whatever they may choose to bring into our ports, and asking the same in theirs.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. II, p. 240.

We should encourage home manufactures to the extent of our own consumption of everything of which we raise the raw material.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. XII, p. 236.

I do not mean to say that it may not be for the general interest to foster for awhile certain infant manufactures, until they are strong enough to stand against foreign rivals, but when evident that they will never be so, it is against right to make the other branches of industry support them.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xv, p. 432.

⁹ It accorded well with two favorite ideas of mine, of leaving commerce free, and never keeping an unnecessary soldier.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xvii, p. 330.

¹⁰ I have come to a resolution myself, as I hope every good citizen will, never again to purchase any article of foreign manufacture which can be had of American make, be the difference of price what it may.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xix, p. 223.

¹¹ Free trade, one of the greatest blessings which a government can confer on a people, is in almost every country unpopular.

MACAULAY, Essays: Milford's History of Greece.

¹² The tariff is the Gulf Stream of politics. It flows through both parties, and each is trying to catch the other in bathing and steal his clothes.

PATRICK FRANCIS MURPHY, Speech, at Manhattan Club.

ARTEMUS WARD, Things in New York.

TASTE

¹⁴ Every one carries his own inch-rule of taste, and amuses himself by applying it, triumphantly, wherever he travels.

HENRY ADAMS, Education of, p. 162.

¹⁵ Want of taste plays the chief part among men and plethora of words. (Ἀνομία τὸ πλεον μέτρον ἐν βραβοῖσι, λόγων τε πλεόνος.)

CLEOBULUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Cleobulus. Bk. I, sec. 91.)

¹⁶ Other virtues are in request in the field and workyard, but a certain degree of taste is not to be spared in those we sit with.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

Those who are esteemed umpires of taste are often persons who have acquired some knowledge of admired pictures or sculptures, and have an inclination for whatever is elegant; but if you inquire whether they are beautiful souls, and whether their own acts are like fair pictures, you learn that they are selfish and sensual.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

¹⁷ Men lose their tempers in defending their taste.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. II, p. 147.

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. II, epis. 2, l. 58.

There are as many thousands of tastes as there are living men. (Quot capitum vivunt, totidem studiorum Mûia.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. II, sat. 1, l. 27.

Such and so various are the tastes of men.

AKENSIDE, Pleasures of Imagination, iii, 567.

Now who shall arbitrate?

Ten men love what I hate.

Shun what I follow, slight what I receive.

RONALD BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Esra. St. 22.

In different courses different tempers run;

TAXES

¹⁶ Neither will it be that a people over-laid with taxes should ever become valiant. . . . No people over-charged with tribute is fit for empire.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of the True Greatness of Kingdoms.

¹⁷ To tax and to please, no more than to love and to be wise, is not given to men.

EDMUND BURKE, On American Taxation.

We ought not to be quite so ready with our taxes, until we can secure the desired representation.

EDMUND BURKE, State of the Nation. (Works, II, 138.) 1769.

Taxation without representation is tyranny.

JAMES OTIS, Argument on the Illegality of the Writs of Assistance, Feb., 1761. See APPENDIX, p. 2296.

The corruption of democracies proceeds directly from the fact that one class imposes the taxes and another class pays them. The constitutional principle, 'No taxation without representation,' is utterly set at naught.

DEAN W. R. INGE, Outspoken Essays, I, 11.

¹⁸ [Lord Suffolk] at last paid his tribute to the common treasury to which we all must be taxed.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons, 11 Feb., 1780.

- 1 What is't to us if taxes rise or fall?
Thanks to our fortune, we pay none at all.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, Night, l. 264.
- No statesman e'er will find it worth his pains
To tax our labours, and excise our brains.

Is not to be express'd,
When he that takes and he that pays
Are both alike distress'd.
COWPER, The Yearly Distress. St. 5.
- 4 Of all debts men are least willing to pay the taxes. What a satire is this on government!
Everywhere they think they get their money's worth, except for these. Hence the less government we have the better—the fewer laws and the less confided power.
EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Politics.
- 5 Was it Bonaparte who said that he found vices very good patriots?—"he got five millions from the love of brandy, and he should be glad to know which of the virtues would pay him as much." Tobacco and opium have broad backs, and will cheerfully carry the load of armies.
EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Civilization.
- 6 But in this world, nothing is certain but death and taxes. (Mais dans ce monde, il n'y a rien d'assuré que la mort et les impôts.)
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to Leroy, 1789.
- "It was as true," said Mr. Barkis, . . . "as taxes is. And nothing's truer than them."
DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 21.
- 7 Taxation must not lead men into temptation,
by requiring trivial oaths, by making it profitable to lie, to swear falsely, to bribe or to take bribes. . . . Taxation must not take from individuals what rightfully belongs to individuals.
HENRY GEORGE, The Condition of Labor, p. 11.
- 8 No one should be permitted to hold natural opportunities without a fair return to all for any special privilege thus accorded to him, and that value which the growth and improvement of a community attaches to land should be taken for the use of the community. . . . We are in favor of raising all public revenues by a single tax upon land values.

CHIEF JUSTICE JOHN MARSHALL, Decision,
McCulloch v. Maryland. 1819. (Wheat., iv, 427, 431.) Usually quoted, "The power to tax is the power to destroy." Marshall was echoing Daniel Webster, who, during his argument in the case (p. 327), stated, "An unlimited power to tax involves, necessarily, the power to destroy."
- The power to tax is not the power to destroy able consequences of being too fond of glory:

—Taxes upon every article which enters the mouth, or covers the back, or is placed on the foot . . . taxes on everything on earth, and in the waters under the earth.

SYDNEY SMITH, Essays: Review of Seybert's Statistical Annals of the United States.

The schoolboy whips his taxed top, the beardless youth manages his taxed horse with a taxed bridle, on a taxed road; and the dying Englishman, pouring his medicine, which has paid seven per cent., flings himself back on his chintz bed, which has paid twenty-two per cent., and expires in the arms of an apothecary, who has paid a license of a hundred pounds for the privilege of putting him to death.

TEA

The would-be wits and can't-be gentlemen, I leave them to their daily "tea is ready," Smug coteries, and literary lady.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 76.

Teal thou soft, thou sober, sage, and venerable liquid, . . . thou female tongue-running, smile-smoothing, heart-opening, wink-tipping cordial, to whose glorious insipidity I owe the happiest moment of my life, let me fall prostrate.

COLLEY CIBBER, The Lady's Last Stake. Act i, sc. 1.

Free yourselves from the slavery of tea and coffee and other slop-kettle.

WILLIAM CORBETT, Advice to Young Men. Ch. 1.

Oh some are fond of Spanish wine and some are fond of French, And some 'll swallow tay and stuff fit only for a wench.

JOHN MASSEFIELD, Captain Stratton's Fancy.

Retired to tea and scandal, according to their ancient custom.

WILLIAM CONDEVE, The Double-Dealer. Act i, sc. 1.

Love and scandal are the best sweeteners of tea.

FIELDING, Love in Several Masques. Act iv, sc. 2.

Now stir the fire, and close the shutters fast, Let fall the curtains, wheel the sofa round, And, while the bubbling and loud hissing urn Throws up a steamy column, and the cups, That cheer but not inebriate, wait on each, So let us welcome peaceful ev'ning in.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 36. (1785)

[Tar water] is of a nature so mild and benign and proportioned to the human constitution as to warm without heating, to cheer but not inebriate.

BISHOP GEORGE BERKELEY, Siris. Sec. 317. (1744) Quoted by SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well: Heading, ch. 7.

Polly put the kettle on, we'll all have tea.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 17.

Tea, though ridiculed by those who are naturally coarse in their nervous sensibilities, . . . will always be the favourite beverage of the intellectual.

RUDYARD KIPPLING, Natural Theology.

Soft yielding minds to water glide away, And sip, with Nymphs, their elemental tea.

POPE, Rape of the Lock. Canto i, l. 61.

Here, thou, great Anna! whom three realms obey, Dost sometimes counsel take—and sometimes tea.

POPE, Rape of the Lock. Canto iii, l. 7. It should be remembered that in Pope's day, tea was pronounced tay.

Thank God for tea! What would the world do without tea? how did it exist? I am glad I was not born before tea.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. i, p. 383.)

Venus her myrtle, Phoebus has his bays; Tea both excels, which she vouchsafes to praise. . . .

The Muse's friend, tea does our fancy aid, Repress those vapours which the head invade, And keeps that palace of the soul serene.

EDMUND WALLER, Of Tea.

For her own breakfast she'll project a scheme, Nor take her tea without a stratagem.

² Beside yon straggling fence that skirts the way,

With blossom'd furze unprofitably gay,
There, in his noisy mansion, skill'd to rule,
The village master taught his little school;
A man severe he was, and stern to view;
I knew him well, and every truant knew;
Well had the boding tremblers learn'd to trace

The day's disasters in his morning face;
Full well they laugh'd, with counterfeited glee,

At all his jokes, for many a joke had he;
Full well the busy whisper, circling round,
Convey'd the dismal tidings when he frown'd;

Yet he was kind; or if severe in aught,
The love he bore to learning was in fault.

chain?

The tear most sacred, shed for other's pain,

That starts at once—bright—pure—from pity's mine,

Already polish'd by the hand divine!

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto II, st. 15.

13 There is a tear for all that die,

A mourner o'er the humblest grave.

BYRON, On the Death of Sir Peter Parker, Bart.

14 No radiant pearl, which crested Fortune

wears,

No gem that twinkling hangs from Beauty's ears,

Not the bright stars which Night's blue arch adorn,

Nor rising suns that gild the vernal morn,

Shine with such lustre as the tear that flows

Down Virtue's manly cheek for others' woes,

ERASMUS DARWIN, The Botanic Garden. Pt. II, canto 3, l. 459.

15 Ope the sacred source of sympathetic tears.

THOMAS GRAY, Progress of Poetry, l. 94.

16 The tribute of a tear is all I crave.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. II, l. 89. (Pope, tr.)

None are so desolate but something dear,

Dearer than self, possesses or possess'd

A thought, and claims the homage of a tear.

BYRON, Childs Harold. Canto II, st. 24.

17 If you would have me weep, you must first feel grief yourself. (Si vis me flere, dolendum est Primum ipsi tibi.)

HORACE, Art Poetica, l. 102. See also under

FEELING.

18 He must not float upon his watery bier

Unwept, and welter to the parching wind,

Without the meed of some melodious tear.

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 12.

19 The glorious Angel, who was keeping

The gates of Light, behold her weeping;

And, as he nearer drew and listen'd

To her sad song, a tear-drop glisten'd
Within his eyelids, like the spray
From Eden's fountain, when it lies
On the blue flow'r, which—Bramins say—
Blooms nowhere but in Paradise.
THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Paradise and the Peri, l. 28.

A tear so limpid and so meek
It would not stain an angel's cheek.
SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto ii, st. 22.

And wiped our eyes
Of drops that sacred pity hath engender'd.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 122.

Those that can pity, here
May, if they think it well, let fall a tear.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII: Prologue, l. 5.

Those eyes of thine from mine have drawn salt tears,
Shamed their aspect with store of childish
drops.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 2, l. 154.
And wet his grave with my repentant tears.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 2, l. 216.

My tears that fall Prove holy water on thee.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 5, l. 268.

Then can I drown an eye, unurs'd to flow,
For precious friends hid in death's dateless
night,
And weep afresh love's long since cancell'd
woe,
And moan the expense of many a vanish'd sight.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xxx.

I so lively acted with my tears
That my poor mistress, moved therewithal, Wept bitterly.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act iv, sc. 4, l. 174.

Who in telling such things can refrain from tears? (Quis talia fando . . . Temperet a lacrimis?)

Our funeral tears, from diff'rent causes, rise.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 522.

VI—Tears of Men

Talk not of grief till thou hast seen the tears of warlike men!

FELICIA HEMANS, Bernardo del Carpio, l. 26.

A child will weep a bramble's smart,
A maid to see her sparrow part,
A stripling for a woman's heart;
But woe awaits a country when
She sees the tears of bearded men.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto v, st. 16.

Thrice he assay'd, and thrice, in spite of scorn,

Tears, such as angels weep, burst forth.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 619.

Look, they weep;
And I, an ass, am onion-eyed; for shame,
Transform us not to women.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv,
sc. 2, l. 34.

Too much of water hast thou, poor Ophelia,
And therefore I forbid my tears: but yet
It is our trick; nature her custom holds,
Let shame say what it will.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 186.

All my mother came into mine eyes
And gave me up to tears.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 6, l. 31.

See, see what showers arise,
Blown with the windy tempest of my heart.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 85.

What I should say
My tears gainsay; for every word I speak,
Ye see, I drink the water of mine eyes.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 4, l. 73.

Cromwell, I did not think to shed a tear
In all my miseries; but thou hast forced me,
Out of thy honest truth, to play the woman.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 428.

O, I could play the woman with mine eyes.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 230.

These foolish drops do something drown my manly spirit.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii,
sc. 3, l. 13.

Did he break into tears? . . . There are no faces truer than those that are so washed.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
i, sc. 1, l. 24.

One whose subdued eyes,
Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees
Their medicinal gum.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 348.

Scorn the proud man that is ashamed to weep.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 108.

VII—Tears of Women

A lady's tears are silent orators.
BRAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act iii,
sc. 3.

With the persuasive language of a tear.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Times, l. 308.

Tears are sometimes as weighty as words. (Interdum lacrimae pondera vocis habent.)
OVID, Epistulae ex Ponto. Bk. iii, epim. 1, l. 158.

So bright the tear in Beauty's eye,

Love half regrets to kiss it dry.

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto I, st. 8.

For Beauty's tears are lovelier than her smile.

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. I, l. 180.

There shall be love, when genial morn appears,
Like pensive Beauty smiling in her tears.

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. II, l. 95.

Yet ah, how lovely in her tears!

SAMUEL ROGERS, Jacqueline. Pt. I, l. 10.

Oh! too convincing—dangerously dear—

In woman's eye the unanswerable tear!

That weapon of her weakness she can wield,

To save, subdue—at once her spear and shield.

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto II, st. 15.

What lost a world, and bade a hero fly?

The timid tear in Cleopatra's eye.

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto II, st. 15.

And the tear that is wip'd with a little address,
May be follow'd perhaps by a smile.

COWPER, The Rose, l. 19. See also SMILE AND TEAR.

Then Niobe dissolves into a tear.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. I, l. 168.

Like Niobe, all tears.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act I, sc. 2, l. 149.

She would have made a splendid wife, for crying only made her eyes more bright and tender.

O. HENRY, Options.

Women laugh when they can and weep when they will.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jaculo Prudentum.

She has an abundant supply of tears always ready, awaiting her command to flow. (Uberibus semper lacrimis semperque paratis in statione sua atque expectantibus illam, Quo jubeat manare modo.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 273.

She makes a shower of rain as well as Jove.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act I, sc. 2, l. 156.

She's somewhere in the sunlight strong,

Her tears are in the falling rain.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, Song.

By ready tears a woman can always gain a respite for her soul's suffering.

ALEXANDER, Fragments. No. 599.

Why do you spoil those tender eyes with tears? (Quid teneros lacrimis corrumpis ocellos?)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. I, l. 129.

Tears too are useful; with tears you can melt iron. (Et lacrimæ prosunt: lacrimis admanata movebia.)

Let your eyes learn to drop tears at command. (Quin etiam discant oculi lacrimare coacti.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. I, eleg. 8, l. 83.

Do not be moved by women's tears; they have taught their eyes to weep. (Neve puellarum lacrimis moveare, caveto; Ut ferent, oculos erudiere suos.)

OVID, Remedium Amoris, l. 689.

For women, when they list, can cry.

POPE, January and May, l. 786.

When the big lip and wat'ry eye

Tell me the rising storm is nigh,

PRIOR, The Lady's Looking-Glass, l. 33.

Many indeed shed tears for show, and as soon as an onlooker is gone they have dry eyes. (Plerique enim lacrymas fundunt, ut ostendant; et toties siccos oculos habent, quoties spectator defuit.)

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Sec. 15.

Tears, . . . the best brine a maiden can season her praise in.

SHAKESPEARE, AR's Well that Ends Well. Act I, sc. I, l. 55.

I will weep for nothing, like Diana in the fountain, and I will do that when you are disposed to be merry.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act IV, sc. I, l. 156.

At a few drops of women's rheum, which are as cheap as lies.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act V, sc. 6, l. 46.

Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears

Had left the flushing in her galled eyes.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act I, sc. 2, l. 154.

Then fresh tears

Stood on her cheeks, as doth the honey-dew

Upon a gather'd lily almost wither'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act III, sc. I, l. 111.

O father, what a hell of witchcraft lies

In the small orb of one particular tear!

SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 288.

Women's weapons, water-drops.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act II, sc. 4, l. 280.

And he, a marble to her tears, is washed with them, but relents not.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act III, sc. I, l. 239.

If that the earth could teem with woman's tears,

Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act IV, sc. I, l. 256.

I loved thee for the tear thou couldst not hide.

TENNYSO, The Bridenmaid.

Why wilt thou ever scare me with thy tears?

TENNYSO, Tithonus, l. 46.

One small pretended tear, which, with grievous rubbing of the eyes, she could scarcely squeeze out by force. (Una falsa lacrimula, Quam oculos terendo misere vix vi expressit.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 67. (Act I, sc. 1.)

Grief is the unhappy charter of our sex: The gods who gave us readier tears to shed, Gave us more cause to shed them.

WILLIAM WHITEHEAD, Cressa.

Crying is the refuge of plain women, but the ruin of pretty ones.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act I.

It is as great pity to see a woman weep as a goose to go barefoot.

UNKNOWN, A Hundred Merry Tales, x, 20. (1526)

VIII—TEARS: Tearlessness

A stoic of the woods—a man without a tear.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt. I, st. 23.

Mute and magnificent, without a tear.

DAYDEN, Threnodia Augustalis, l. 52.

He bids me dry the last—the first—

The only tears that ever burst

From Outalissi's soul.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt. III, st. 39.

I wept not, so of stone grew I within. (Io non piangeva, sì dentro impietrai.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxxiii, l. 49.

"Oh, weep with me, Daphne," he sighed, "for you know it's A terrible thing to be pestered with poets!" But, alas, she is dumb, and the proverb holds good.

She never will cry till she's out of the wood!

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 71.

Tell me, you winged winds,

That round my pathway roar,

Know ye not some spot

Where mortals weep no more?

CHARLES MACKAY, Tell Me Ye Winds.

Nothing is here for tears, nothing to wail Or knock the breast.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 1721

I cannot weep; for all my body's moisture

TEMPERAMENT

Scarce serves to quench my furnace-burning heart.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act II, sc. 1, l. 79.

No, I'll not weep:

I have full cause of weeping; but this heart Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws Or ere I'll weep.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act II, sc. 4, l. 286.

Hush'd be that sigh, be dry that tear, Nor let us lose our Heaven here.

Dry be that tear!

R. B. SHERIDAN, Dry be That Tear.

Weep no more, lady, weep no more, Thy sorrow is in vain,

For violets pluckt, the sweetest showers

Will ne'er make grow again.

UNKNOWN, The Prior of Orders Gray. (Percy, Reliques. Ser. I, bk. 2, No. 18.)

Oh! sing unto my roundelay;

Oh! drop the briny tear with me;

Dance no more at holiday;

Like a running river be.

THOMAS CHATFIELD, Ellis: Minstrel's Song.

Weep no more, nor sigh, nor groan,

Sorrow calls no time that's gone:

Violets pluck'd the sweetest rain

Makes not fresh nor grow again.

JOHN FLETCHER, Queen of Corinth. Act IV, sc.

1. Perhaps a spurious addition to the play.

Weep no more, my lady, oh! weep no more to-day!

STEPHEN COLLINS FOSTER, My Old Kentucky Home.

TEMPERAMENT

Perhaps he confuses temperament, character and individuality? . . . Individuality is a matter of psychology; temperament, a matter of sensation or æsthetics; character alone is a matter of morals.

AMEL, Journal, 30 Aug., 1869. Referring to Schopenhauer.

So well she acted all and every part

By turns—with that vivacious versatility,

Which many people take for want of heart.

They err—'tis merely what is call'd mobility,

A thing of temperament and not of art,

Though seeming so, from its supposed facility;

And false—though true; for surely they're sincerest

Who're strongly acted on by what is nearest.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xvi, st. 97.

The nerves, they are the man.

CABANIS. (EMERSON, Montaigne.)

Betsy, like all good women, had a temper of her own.

WILL CARLETON, Betsy and I Are Out.

Of all bad things by which mankind are cursed,
Their own bad tempers surely are the worst.

RICHARD CUMBERLAND, Menander.

A lady of what is commonly called an uncertain temper—a phrase which being interpreted signifies a temper tolerably certain to make everybody more or less uncomfortable.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge, Ch. 7.

Good temper is an estate for life.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Plain Speaker: On Personal Character.

Our temperatures differ in capacity of heat, or, we boil at different degrees.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Eloquence.

It is often temperament which makes men brave and women chaste. (Le tempérament font souvent la valeur des hommes et la vertu des femmes.)

LONGFELLOW, The Courtship of Miles Standish: Pt. ix, The Wedding Day, St. 3.

Though I am not splenitive and rash,
Yet have I something in me dangerous.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, Act v, sc. 1, l. 284.

You know the fiery quality of the duke.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, Act ii, sc. 4, l. 93.

He's full of alteration and self-reproving.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, Act v, sc. 1, l. 3.

Who can be wise, amazed, temperate and furious,

Loyal and neutral, in a moment?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, Act ii, sc. 3, l. 114.

Were not I a little pot and soon hot, my very lips might freeze to my teeth.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, Act iv, sc. 1, l. 5.

These flashes on the surface are not he.
He has a solid base of temperament.

Health, longevity, beauty, are other names for personal purity; and temperance is the regimen for all.

A. B. ALCOCK, Table Talk: Habits.

Temperance is a bridle of gold.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, Pt. ii, sec. ii, mem. 1, sub. 2.

Let us become more cheerful and we will become a more temperate people. . . . Men cannot be driven into temperance.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, Works, p. 112.

Temperance is the firm and moderate dominion of reason over passion and other unrighteous impulses of the mind. (Temperantia est rationis in libidinem atque in alios non rectos impetus animi firma et moderata dominatio.)

CICERO, De Inventione Rhetorica, Bk. ii, ch. 54, sec. 164.

Temperance consists in foregoing bodily pleasures. (Temperantia autem constat ex prætermittendis voluptatibus corporis.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum, Bk. iii, ch. 15, 38.

Temperate in every place—abroad, at home, Thence will applause, and hence will profit come;

And health from either he in time prepares

For sickness, age, and their attendant cares.

CRABBE, The Borough, Letter xvii, l. 198.

Eat not to dullness; drink not to elevation.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography, Ch. I. Temperance, the first of thirteen virtues which Franklin tried to practise. The others were silence, order, resolution, frugality, industry, sincerity, justice, moderation, cleanliness, tranquillity, chastity, humility.

If we give more to the flesh than we ought, we nourish an enemy; if we give not to her necessity what we ought, we destroy a citizen.

St. GREGORY, Homilies, No. 3.

Drink not the third glass, which thou canst not tame,

When once it is within thee; but before Mayst rule it, as thou list: and pour the shame,

Which it would pour on thee, upon the floor. It is most just to throw that on the ground, Which would throw me there, if I keep the round.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch, St. 3.

If all the world Should in a pet of temperance feed on pulse, Drink the clear stream, and nothing wear but freeze,

Th' all-giver would be unthank'd, would be unprais'd, . . .

And we should serve him as a grudging master, . . .

And live like Nature's bastards, not her sons.
MILTON, Comus, l. 720.

¹ Importor do not charge most innocent Nature,
As if she would her children should be riotous
With her abundance; she, good cateress,
Means her provision only to the good
That live according to her sober laws,
And holy dictate of spare Temperance.
MILTON, Comus, l. 762.

² Temperance controls our desires; some it hates and routs, others it regulates and restores to a healthy measure. Temperance knows that the best measure of the appetites is not what you want to take, but what you ought to take.

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epis. 88, sec. 29.

³ Though you can guess what temperance should be,

You know not what it is.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii,
sc. 13, l. 121.

Make less thy body hence, and more thy grace;
Leave gormandizing.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 5, l. 56.

Ask God for temperance; that's the appliance only

Which your disease requires.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 1, l. 124.

⁴ I prefer temperance hotels—although they sell worse liquor than any other kind of hotels.

ARTEMUS WARD, Temperance.

⁵ Temperance is the nurse of chastity.

WILLIAM WYCHELEY, Love in a Wood. Act
iii, sc. 3.

TEMPTATION

⁶ It is good to be without vices, but it is not good to be without temptations.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Biographical Studies, p. 237.

⁷ If thou wilt go seek for a thief, no wonder if thou be robbed. . . . If thou wilt go seek fire to put in the thatch, no wonder if thy house be burned. . . . If thou canst not keep at a distance nor forbear the presence of the bait, thou art not like to forbear the sin.

RICHARD BAXTER, Works. Vol. iii, p. 447.

⁸ Why comes temptation but for man to meet
And master and make crouch beneath his foot,

And so be pedestaled in triumph?

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book:
The Pope, l. 1125.

⁹ What's done we partly may compute,

But know not what's resisted.

BURNS, Address to the Unco Guid, l. 63.

¹⁰ So you tell yourself you are pretty fine clay
To have tricked temptation and turned it away,

But wait, my friend, for a different day;

Wait till you want to want to!

EDMUND VANCE COOKE, Desire.

¹¹ The subtlest tempter has the smoothest style;
Sirens sing sweetest when they would betray.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Legend of Mollida the Fair.

¹² As the Sandwich Islander believes that the strength and valor of the enemy he kills passes into himself, so we gain the strength of the temptation we resist.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

¹³ How much, preventing God, how much I owe
To the defences thou hast round me set;
Example, custom, fear, occasion slow,—
These scorned bondmen were my parapet.

I dare not peep over this parapet

To gauge with glance the roaring gulf below,
The depths of sin to which I had descended,
Had not these me against myself defended.

Is that temptation that doth goad us on
To sin in loving virtue.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 181.

¹ The fiend is at mine elbow and tempts me.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act II, sc. 2, l. 2. See also under DEVIL.

Well, my conscience says, "Launcelot, budge not."
"Budge," says the fiend: "budge not," says my conscience. "Conscience," say I, "you counsel well." "Fiend," say I, "you counsel well."
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act II, sc. 2, l. 19.

² I never tempted her with word too large;
But, as a brother to his sister, show'd
Bashful sincerity and comely love.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act IV, sc. 1, l. 53.

³ Tempt not a desperate man.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act V, sc. 3, l. 59.

Sometimes we are devils to ourselves,
When we will tempt the frailty of our powers,
Presuming on their changeful potency.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus and Cressida. Act IV, sc. 4, l. 97.

⁴ Never resist temptation: prove all things:
hold fast that which is good.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

⁵ Many men have too much will power. It's won't power they lack.

JOHN A. SHEDD, Said from My Attic, p. 16.

⁶ Let a man be but as earnest in praying against a temptation as the tempter is in pressing it,
and he needs not proceed by a surer measure.
BISHOP ROBERT SOUTH, Sermons. Vol. vi, sermon 10.

⁷ Ay me! how many perils do enfold
The righteous man, to make him daily fall,
Were not that Heavenly Grace doth him uphold

And steadfast Truth acquit him out of all SPENCER, Faerie Queene. Bk. I, canto viii, st. 1.

⁸ For how many years did Mr. Pepys continue to make and break his little vows? And yet
I have not heard that he was discouraged in the end.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. II.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act I.

The only way to get rid of a temptation is to yield to it.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 2.

TENNYSON, ALFRED

¹⁵ Of borrowed notes, the mock-bird's modish
tune,

The jingling medley of purloined conceits,
Out-babbling Wordsworth and out-glittering Keats;

Where all the airs of patchwork pastoral chime

To drown the ears in Tennysonian rhyme!

BULWER-LYTTON, The New Timon. Pt. I, sec. 6.

You talk of tinsel! why, we see

The old mark of rouge upon your cheeks.

You prate of Nature! you are he

That split his life among the cliques.

TENNYSON, The New Timon and the Poets.

Tennyson's rejoinder to Bulwer-Lytton's attack. Published in Punch, 28 Feb., 1846. See also SOULS: GOOD AND BAD.

Ah God! the petty fools of rhyme

That shriek and sweat in plummy wars

Before the stony face of Time,

And look'd at by the silent stars;

Who hate each other for a song,

And do their little best to bite

And pinch their brethren in the throng,

And scratch the very dead for spite.

TENNYSON, Literary Squabbles. Originally printed in Punch, 7 March, 1846, entitled After-thought. Referring to the attack by Bulwer-Lytton.

¹⁶ He [Tennyson] has a great deal to say; but he had much more power of expression than was wanted for anything he had to say. He could not think up to the height of his own towering style.

G. K. CHESTERTON, The Victorian Age in Literature, p. 165.

¹ Brother of the greatest poets, true to nature,
true to art;
Lover of Immortal Love, uplifter of the human heart;
Who shall cheer us with high music, who shall sing, if thou depart?

HENRY VAN DYKE, Tennyson.

² Death's little rift hath rent the faultless lute:
The singer of undying songs is dead.

WILLIAM WATSON, Lacrimæ Musarum.

³ Now finalè to the shore.
Now land and life finalè and farewell,
Now Voyager depart, . . .
Embrace thy friends, leave all in order,
To port and hawser's tie no more returning,
Depart upon thy endless cruise old Sailor.

THANKSGIVING DAY

¹³ Come, ye thankful people, come,
Raise the song of Harvest-homel
HENRY ALFORD, Thanksgiving Day.

Heap high the board with plenteous cheer, and gather to the feast,
And toast the sturdy Pilgrim band whose courage never ceased.
Give praise to that All-Gracious One by whom their steps were led,
And thanks unto the harvest's Lord who sends our "daily bread."

ALICE WILLIAMS BROTHERTON, *The First
Thanksgiving Day*.

¹⁴ Thanksgiving-day, I fear,
If one the solemn truth must touch,
Is celebrated, not so much
To thank the Lord for blessings o'er,
As for the sake of getting more!
WILL CARLETON, Captain Young's Thanksgiving.

¹⁵ Over the river and through the wood,
Now grandmother's cap I spy!
Hurrah for the fun!
Is the pudding done?
Hurrah for the pumpkin pie!
LYDIA MARIA CHILD, Thanksgiving Day.

¹⁶ So once in every year we throng
Upon a day apart,
To praise the Lord with feast and song
In thankfulness of heart.
ARTHUR GUITHAMAN, The First Thanksgiving.

WHITTIER, For an Autumn Festival. St. 12.

Ah! on Thanksgiving day, when from East and from West,
From North and South, come the pilgrim and guest,
When the gray-haired New Englander sees round his board
The old broken links of affection restored,
When the care-wearied man seeks his mother once more,
And the worn matron smiles where the girl smiled before.

What moistens the lip and what brightens the eye?
What calls back the past, like the rich Pumpkin pie?

[Thoreau's] father was a manufacturer of lead-pencils, and Henry applied himself for a time to this craft, believing he could make a better pencil than was then in use. After completing his experiments, he exhibited his work to chemists and artists in Boston, and having obtained their certificates to its excellence and to its equality with the best London manufacture, he returned home contented. His friends congratulated him that he had now opened his way to fortune. But he replied that he should never make another pencil. "Why should I? I would not do again what I have done once."

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: Thoreau.

He was a protestant à outrance, and few lives contain so many renunciations. He was bred to no profession; he never married; he lived alone; he never went to church; he never voted; he refused to pay a tax to the State; he ate no flesh, he drank no wine, he never knew the use of tobacco; and, though a naturalist, he used neither trap nor gun. He chose, wisely no doubt for himself, to be the bachelor of thought and Nature.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: Thoreau.

I love Henry, but I cannot like him; and as for taking his arm, I should as soon think of taking the arm of an elm-tree.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: Thoreau. Quoting a friend of Thoreau.

Whatever question there may be of his talent, there can be none, I think, of his genius. It was a slim and crooked one, but it was eminently personal. He was imperfect, unfinished, inartistic; he was worse than provincial—he was parochial.

HENRY JAMES, Hawthorne, Ch. iv, p. 94. (Referring to Thoreau.)

Men's thoughts are much according to their inclination, their discourse and speeches according to their learning and infused opinions.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Custom and Education.

And inasmuch as feeling, the East's gift,
Is quick and transient—comes, and lo, is gone,
While Northern thought is slow and durable.

ROBERT BROWNING, Luria. Act v.

7
Thought is valuable in proportion as it is generative.

BULWER-LYTTON, Cantoniana. Essay 14.

The blight of life—the demon Thought.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto I, st. 84.

9
It is the Thought of man; the true thaumaturgic virtue; by which man works all things whatsoever. All that he does, and brings to pass, is the vesture of a Thought.

CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters.

One thought includes all thought, in the sense that a grain of sand includes the universe.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Additional Table Talk: Thought.

Our thought is the key which unlocks the doors of the world. There is something in us which corresponds to that which is around us, beneath us, and above us.

SAMUEL MCCORD CROTHERS. (NEWTON, My Idea of God, p. 211.)

The art of meditation may be exercised at all hours, and in all places; and men of genius, in their walks, at table, and amidst assemblies, turning the eye of the mind inwards, can form an artificial solitude; retired amidst a crowd, calm amidst distraction, and wise amidst folly.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character. Ch. 11.

Man carries the world in his head, the whole astronomy and chemistry suspended in a thought.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

Thought makes everything fit for use. The vocabulary of an omniscient man would embrace words and images excluded from polite conversation.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

Nothing in the universe so solid as a thought.
EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

As certainly as water falls in rain on the tops of mountains and runs down into valleys, plains and pits, so does thought fall first on the best minds, and run down, from class to class, until it reaches the masses, and works revolutions.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: The Man of Letters.

¹ A rush of thoughts is the only conceivable prosperity that can come to us.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Inspiration.

It takes a great deal of elevation of thought to produce a very little elevation of life.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. iv, p. 441.

² The senses collect the surface facts of matter. . . . It was sensation; when memory came, it was experience; when mind acted, it was knowledge; when mind acted on it as knowledge, it was thought.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

³ Thought is the property of him who can entertain it and of him who can adequately place it.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Shakespeare.

⁴ Thought, the gaseous ashes of burned-out thinking, the excretion of mental respiration.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 1.

⁵ Thinkers help other people to think, for they formulate what others are thinking. No person writes or thinks alone—thought is in the air, but its expression is necessary to create a tangible Spirit of the Times.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Pig-Pen Pete: The Bee.

⁶ In the sunshine, by the shady verge of woods, by the sweet waters where the wild dove sips, there alone will thought be found.

RICHARD JEFFERIES, Pigeons at the British Museum.

If any imagine they will find thought in many books, certainly they will be disappointed. Thought dwells by the stream and the sea, by the hill and in the woodland, in the sunlight and free wind.

RICHARD JEFFERIES, Pigeons at the British Museum.

⁷ The thoughts that come often unsought, and, as it were, drop into the mind, are commonly the most valuable of any we have.

¹⁷ Thought depends absolutely on the stomach, but in spite of that, those who have the best stomachs are not the best thinkers.

VOLTAIRE, Letter to d'Alembert, 20 Aug. 1770.

One of their [Continental] philosophers has lately discovered that "as the liver secretes bile, so does the brain secrete thought," which astonishing discovery Dr. Cabanis . . . has pushed into his minutest developments. . . . Thought, he is inclined to hold, is still secreted by the brain; but then, poetry and religion (and it is really worth knowing) are "a product of the smaller intestines."

If we chance to fix our thoughts elsewhere,
Though our eyes open be, we cannot see.

SIR JOHN DAVIES, Noise Telsprum. Sec. II, st.
15. See also ABSENCE OF MIND.

The profound thinker always suspects that he is superficial.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Contarini Fleming. Pt.
IV, ch. 5.

The happiest person is the person who thinks the most interesting thoughts.

TIMOTHY DWIGHT, Happiness.

Concentration is the secret of strength in politics, in war, in trade, in short, in all management of human affairs.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Power.

Think alone, and all places are friendly and sacred.

EMERSON, *Nature, Addresses and Lectures:
Literary Ethics*.

There are thoughts that moan from the soul of the pine

And thoughts in a flower bell curled;

And the thoughts that are blown with scent of the fern

Are as new and as old as the world.

SAM WALTER FOSB, The Bloodless Sportsman.

He is a fool that thinks not that another thinks.

GABRIEL HINEMER, Jacobs Frustration.

A moment's thinking is an hour in words.

THOMAS HODG, Hero and Laender. St. 41.

What others feel more fitly can express.
O. W. HOLMES, Poetry: A Metrical Essay.
St. 7.

² But men at whiles are sober
And think by fits and starts,
And if they think, they fasten
Their hands upon their hearts.
A. E. HOUSMAN, Could Man Be Drunk Forever.

³ He had a wonderful talent for packing thought close, and rendering it portable.
MACAULAY, Essays: Mackintosh's History of the Revolution.

⁴ I have some naked thoughts that rove about
And loudly knock to have their passage out.

⁷ If I have done the public any service, it is due to patient thought.

SIR ISAAC NEWTON, Remark to Dr. Bentley.

⁸ There needs but thinking right and meaning well.

POTER, An Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 32.

It is too difficult to think nobly when one only thinks to get a living. (Il est trop difficile de penser noblement quand on ne pense que pour vivre.)

ROUSSEAU, Confessions. Bk. II, ch. 9.

⁹ On the sudden
A Roman thought hath struck him.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act I, sc. 2, l. 86.

I am afraid His thinkings are below the moon.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act III, sc. 2, l. 133.

I do begin to have bloody thoughts.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act IV, sc. 1, l. 220.

Sudden a thought came like a full-blown rose,
Flushing his brow.

KRATZ, The Eve of St. Agnes. St. 16.

¹⁰ Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look;
He thinks too much: such men are dangerous.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act I, sc. 2, l. 194.

¹¹ Divinely bent to meditation;
And in no worldly suit would he be moved,
To draw him from his holy exercise.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act III, sc. 7, l. 61.

Happy the heart that keeps its twilight hour,
And, in the depths of heavenly peace reclined,
Loves to commune with thoughts of tender power,—

Thoughts that ascend, like angels beautiful,
A shining Jacob's-ladder of the mind!

PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, Sonnets. No. 12.

¹² If I could think how these my thoughts to leave,
Or thinking still, my thoughts might have good end;

If rebel sense would reason's law receive,
Or reason foil'd would not in vain contend;
Then might I think what thoughts were best to think;

Then might I wisely swim, or gladly sink.
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Sonnet.

On thy cold gray stones, O Sea!
And I would that my tongue could utter
The thoughts that arise in me.
TENNYSON, Break, Break, Break.

¹⁴ Wrapt in thought as in a veil.
JAMES THOMSON, The City of Dreadful Night.
Pt. II.

¹⁵ And yet, as angels in some brighter dreams
Call to the soul when man doth sleep,
So some strange thoughts transcend our wonted dreams,
And into glory peep.

HENRY VAUGHAN, Ascension Hymn.

Thoughts whose very sweetness yieldeth proof
That they were born for immortality.

WORDSWORTH, Inside of King's College Chapel.
Sonnet I.

¹⁶ I heard a thousand blended notes,
While in a grove I sate reclined,
In that sweet mood when pleasant thoughts
Bring sad thoughts to the mind.
WORDSWORTH, Lines Written in Early Spring.

Yet sometimes, when the secret cup
Of still and serious thought went round,
It seemed as if he drank it up—
He felt with spirit so profound.
WORDSWORTH, Matthew. St. 7.

X—Thought: Its Difficulty

¹⁷ To the vast majority of mankind nothing is more agreeable than to escape the need for mental exertion. . . . To most people nothing is more troublesome than the effort of thinking.

JAMES BRYCE, Studies in History and Jurisprudence: Obedience.

¹ There is no expedient to which a man will not go to avoid the real labor of thinking.

THOMAS A. EDISON. Posted on signs about the Edison laboratories.

² What is the hardest task in the world? To think.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Intellect.

Thinking is the hardest work there is, which is the probable reason why so few engage in it.

HENRY FORD, Interview, Feb., 1929.

³ I never could find any man who could think for two minutes together.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy. Lecture 19.

Though man a thinking being is defined,

Few use the great prerogative of mind;

How few think justly of the thinking few,

How many never think who think they do!

JANE TAYLOR, Essay on Morals and Manners. St. 45.

XI—Thought: Its Futility

⁴ The extra calories needed for one hour of intense mental effort would be completely met by the eating of one oyster cracker or one half of a salted peanut.

FRANCIS G. BENEDICT, The Energy Requirements of Intense Mental Effort.

⁵ Thought is the work of brain and nerve, in small-skulled idiot; poor and mean;

In sickness sick, in sleep asleep, and dead when Death lets drop the scene.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, Kasidah. Pt. vii, st. 13.

⁶ Why should I disparage my parts by thinking what to say? None but dull rogues think.

CONGREVE, The Double-Dealer. Act iv, sc. 2.

⁷ Do not craze yourself with thinking, but go about your business anywhere. Life is not intellectual and critical, but sturdy.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

⁸ A man may dwell so long upon a thought that it may take him prisoner.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 249.

⁹ He that thinks amiss concludes worse.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

¹⁰ And which of you with taking thought can add to his stature one cubit?

New Testament: Luke, xii, 25.

¹¹ "I think till I weary of thinking."

Said the sad-eyed Hindu king.

ALFRED LYALL, Meditations of a Hindu Prince.

¹² Wise wretch! with pleasures too refin'd to please;

With too much spirit to be e'er at ease;

With too much quickness ever to be taught;

With too much thinking to have common thought.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epia. ii, l. 95.

¹³ I think that naught is worth a thought

And I'm a fool for thinking.

W. M. PRAED, Chant of the Brasen Head. St. 6.

¹⁴ Drown consideration.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, iv, 2, 45.

Make not your thoughts your prisons.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, v, 2, 185.

You do unbend your noble strength, to think so brainlessly of things.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 45.

¹⁵ Thinking is but an idle waste of thought, And naught is everything, and everything is naught.

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Cui Bono. St. 8.

¹⁶ Men suffer from thinking more than anything else.

LEO TOLSTOY, Sevastopol.

¹⁷ Beauty ends where an intellectual expression begins. Intellect destroys the harmony of any face. The moment one sits down to think, one becomes all nose.

¹⁸ Threats without power are like powder without ball.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Definition.

¹⁹ If it is not right to hurt, it is neither right nor wise to menace.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons, 1773.

²⁰ Do not use threats to anyone, for that is womanish.

CHILON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Chilon. Sec. 3.)

²¹ To freemen, threats are impotent. (Nulla enim minantis auctoritas apud liberos est.)

CICERO, Epistole ad Familiares. Bk. xi, epis. 3.

²² Many a one threatens while he quakes for fear.

W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 807. After the French, "Tel menace qui a grand peur." The Dutch say, "Dreigers vechten niet" (Threateners don't fight).

²³ Truly you had the look of one threatening many and excellent things. (Atqui vultus erat multa et præclara minantis.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 9.

²⁴ He threatens many that hath injured one.

BEN JONSON, Fall of Sejanus. Act ii.

²⁵ Nor think thou with wind Of airy threats to awe whom yet with deeds Thou canst not.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vi, l. 282.

¹ Even though I should live to extreme old age, the time would be short for enduring what you threaten me with. (Etsi pervivo usque ad summam etatem, tamen Breve spatium est perferendi que minitas mihi.)

PLAUTUS, Capitoli, l. 742. (Act iii, sc. 5.)

² Threatened folks live long.

HENRY PORTER, Two Angry Women. (1599)
The proverb says that threatened men live long.
DICKENS, Edwin Drood. Ch. 14.

There are more men threatened than stricken.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jocula Prudentum. The Dutch say, "Van dreigen sterft man niet" (A man does not die of threats).

³ There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats, For I am arm'd so strong in honesty That they pass by me as the idle wind, Which I respect not.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 66.
Before I be convict by course of law, To threaten me with death is most unlawful.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 192.

⁴ I'll make a sop o' the moonshine of you.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 34.
I will tread this unbolted villain into mortar, and dash the walls of a jakes with him.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 70.

If ever henceforth thou These rural latches to his entrance open, Or hoop his body more with thy embraces, I will devise a death as cruel for thee As thou art tender to 't.
SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 447.

¹³ Live with a thrifty, not a needy fate;
Small shots paid often waste a vast estate.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides. No. 28.

¹⁴ He who adds to what he has will keep off bright-eyed hunger; for if you add only a little to a little and do this often, soon that little will become great. (Συμψύειν ὅτι συμψύει.)
HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 361. See also under TRIFLES.

¹⁵ When thrift and you fell first at a fray,
You played the man and made thrift run away.

JOHN HAYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11.

¹⁶ Even as the tiny, hard-working ant drags all she can with her mouth, and adds it to the heap she is building, because she is not heedless of the morrow.

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1, l. 32.

¹ Resolve not to be poor: whatever you have, spend less.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (Boswell, Life, iv, 137.)

Do not discourage your children from hoarding, if they have a taste to it; whoever lays up his penny rather than part with it for a cake, at least is not the slave of gross appetite.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol 1, p. 251.

SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 28. King Charles II to Dr. Rochecliffe.

⁵ Thrift, thrift, Horatio! the funeral baked meats

Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 180.

⁶ What piles of wealth hath he accumulated To his own portion! . . . How, i' the name of thrift

Does he rake this together?

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, Act iii, sc. 2, l. 107.

⁷ Have more than thou showest,

Speak less than thou knowest,

Lend less than thou owest, . . .

And thou shalt have more

Than two tens to a score.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 4, 131. See 1931:1.

II—Thrift: Pins and Pennies

⁹ A pin a day is a groat a year.

JOSEPH ANDERSON, The Spectator. No. 295.

A penny saved is two pence clear,

A pin a day's a groat a year.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Necessary Hints to Those that Would be Rich.

He that will not stoop for a pin will never be worth a pound.

SIR WILLIAM COVENTRY, to Charles II. (Papers, Diary, 3 Jan., 1668.)

See a pin and pick it up,
All the day you'll have good luck;

See a pin and let it lie,

You'll want a pin before you die.

UNKNOWN, Old Nursery Rhymes. (Notes and Queries. Ser. iv, vol. 10, p. 477.)

¹⁰ Who will not lay up a penny Shall never have many.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6383.

A penny spared is twice got.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Penny and penny laid up will be many.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 130.

¹¹ Take care of the pence, and the pounds will take care of themselves.

WILLIAM LOWNDES, Secretary of Treasury under William III.

I knew once a very covetous, sordid fellow who used to say, "Take care of the pence, for the pounds will take care of themselves."

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters. 6 Nov., 1747; also 5 Feb., 1750. Quoting Lowndes.

¹² A penny in the purse is better than a friend at court.

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 126. Quoted as "a true saying."

THRUSH

7 Hark, where my blossomed pear-tree in the hedge

Leans to the field and scatters on the clover Blossoms and dewdrops—at the bent spray's edge—

That's the wise thrush: he sings each song twice over

Lest you should think he never could recapture
 The first fine careless rapture!

R. BROWNING, Home Thoughts from Abroad.

8 No voice awoke. Dwelling sedate, apart,
 Only the thrush, the thrush that never spoke,
 Sang from her bursting heart.

LAURA BENET, The Thrush.

9 God's poet, hid in foliage green,
 Sings endless songs, himself unseen;
 Right seldom come his silent times.

Linger, ye summer hours, serene!
 Sing on, dear Thrush, amid the limes!
 MORTIMER COLLINS, My Thrush.

10 Through the wood's full strains I hear
 Thy monotone deep and clear,
 Like a sound amid sounds most fine.
 DINAH M. M. CRAIG, A Rhyme About Birds.

11 The full notes clearer grow;
 Hark, what a torrent gush!
 They pour, they overflow—
 Sing on, sing on, O thrush!
 AUSTIN DEXTER, Ballad of the Thrush.

12 An aged thrush, frail, gaunt, and small,
 In blast-beruffled plume,

Had chosen thus to fling his soul
 Upon the growing gloom. . . .
 And I could think there trembled through
 His happy good-night air
 Some blessed Hope, whereof he knew
 And I was unaware.

THOMAS HARDY, The Darkling Thrush.

13 Full lasting is the song, though he,
 The singer, passes: lasting too,
 For souls not lent in usury,
 The rapture of the forward view.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Thrush in February.

14 A voice peals in this end of night
 A phrase of notes resembling stars,
 Single and spiritual notes of light.

What call they at my window-bars?

The South, the past, the day to be,
 An ancient infelicity.

ALICE MEYNELL, A Thrush Before Dawn.

15 O thrush, your song is passing sweet,
 But never a song that you have sung
 Is half so sweet as thrushes sang
 When my dear love and I were young.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Other Days.

16 In the gloamin' o' the wood
 The throssil whusslit sweet.

WILLIAM MOTTERWELL, Jeanie Morrison.

The throstle with his note so true.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
 Act III, sc. 1, l. 130.

Sing clear, O throstle,
 Thou golden-tongued apostle
 And little brown-frocked brother
 Of the loved Assisian!

T. A. DALY, To a Thrush.

17 At earliest dawn, his thrilling pipe was heard;
 And, when the light of evening died away,
 That blithe and indefatigable bird
 Still his redundant song of joy and love preferred.

ROBERT SOUTHBY, A Tale of Paraguay: Dedication. St. 4.

18 Sing, sweet thrushes, forth and sing!
 Meet the moon upon the lea.

THOMAS TOD STODDART, The Angler's Trysting-Tree.

19 Hush! With sudden gush
 As from a fountain sings in yonder bush
 The Hermit Thrush.

JOHN BANISTER TARA, Overflow.

20 Blow softly, thrush, upon the hush
 That makes the least leaf loud,
 Blow, wild of heart, remote, apart—
 From all the vocal crowd,

Apart, remote, a spirit note
That dances meltingly adnat,
Blow faintly, thrush!
JOSEPH RUSSELL TAYLOR, Blow Softly, Thrush.

1 When rosy plumelets tuft the larch,
And rarely pipes the mounted thrush.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xci.

2 Oh, hark to the brown thrush! bear how he sings!
How he pours the dear pain of his gladness!
What a gush! and from out what golden springs!

What a rage of how sweet madness!
DAVID ATWOOD WASSON, Joy-Month.

3 And hark! how blithe the throistle sings!
He, too, is no mean preacher:
Come forth into the light of things,
Let Nature be your teacher.

WORDSWORTH, The Tables Turned.
At the corner of Wood Street, when daylight appears,
Hangs a thrush that sings loud, it has sung for three years.
WORDSWORTH, The Reverie of Poor Susan.

TIDE

- 3 Now the great winds shorewards blow,
Now the salt tides seawards flow;
Now the wild white horses play,
Champ and chafe and toss in the spray.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, The Forsaken Merman, l. 4.
4 Now morn has come,
And with the morn the punctual tide again.
SUSAN COOLIDGE, Flood-Tide.
5 The tide turns at low water as well as at high.

8 The western tide crept up along the sand,
And o'er and o'er the sand,
And round and round the sand,
As far as eye could see.
The rolling mist came down and hid the land:
And never home came she.
CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Sands of Dee. St. 2.
The tide rises, the tide falls,
The twilight darkens, the curlew calls;
Along the sea-sands damp and brown
The traveller hastens toward the town,
And the tide rises, the tide falls.
LONGFELLOW, The Tide Rises, the Tide Falls.
9 A single breaker may recede; but the tide is evidently coming in.
MACAULAY, Essays: Southey's Colloquies.

(Nullum animal nisi aestu recedente expirat.)
PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. II, ch. 101.
11 A' parted even just between twelve and one,
even at the turning o' the tide.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act II, sc. 3, l. 12.
"People can't die along this coast," said Mr.
Peggotty, "except when the tide's pretty nigh out. They can't be born, unless it's pretty nigh in—not properly born, till flood. He's a-going out with the tide."

a shout.
WILLIAM SHARP, An Old Tale of Thres.
13 No motion but the moving tide, a breeze,
Or merely silent Nature's breathing life.
WORDSWORTH, Elegiac Stanzas, Suggested by a Picture of Pele Castle in a Storm, l. 27.
14 Tide flowing is fear'd, for many a thing,
Great danger to such as be sick, it doth bring;
Sea ebb, by long ebbing, some respite doth give,
And sendeth good comfort to such as shall live.
THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry. Ch. 14.

TIGER

- 15 Tiger! Tiger! burning bright
In the forests of the night,
What immortal hand or eye,
Could frame thy fearful symmetry?
WILLIAM BLAKE, The Tiger. St. 1.
16 If a man proves too clearly and convincingly to himself that the tiger is an optical illusion —well, he will find out that he is wrong. The tiger will himself intervene in the discussion.
G. K. CHESTERTON, Illusions.
17 When did the tiger's young ones teach the dam?
SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act II, sc. 3, l. 142.
18 Tigers, of course, have solitary habits
And haunt where brown and yellow leaves are strewn.
They're not companionable beasts like rabbits
And much prefer to eat their meals alone.
W. C. SMITH, A Heretic.
The Tiger, on the other hand, is kittenish and mild;
He makes a pretty playfellow for any little child;
And mothers of large families (who claim to common sense)

Will find a Tiger well repay the trouble and expense.

HILAIRE BELLOC, The Tiger.

Or if some time when roaming round,
A noble wild beast greets you,
With black stripes on a yellow ground,
Just notice if he eats you.

This simple rule may help you learn
The Bengal Tiger to discern.

CAROLYN WELLS, How to Tell Wild Animals.

I—Time: Definitions

² Time which is the author of authors.

BACON, Advancement of Learning Bk. i.

³ Time is the greatest innovator.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Innovations.

It were good therefore, that men in their innovations would follow the example of time itself, which indeed innovateth greatly, but quietly and by degrees scarce to be perceived.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Innovations.

⁴ Wherever anything lives, there is, open somewhere,
a register in which time is being inscribed.

HENRI BERGSON, Creative Evolution. Ch. 1.

⁵ That great mystery of TIME, were there no other; the illimitable, silent, never-resting thing called Time, rolling, rushing on, swift, silent, like an all-embracing ocean-tide, on which we and all the Universe swim like exhalations, like apparitions which are, and then are not: this is forever very literally a miracle;
a thing to strike us dumb,—for we have no word to speak about it.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lecture 1.

⁶ Old Time, that greatest and longest established spinner of all! . . . His factory is a secret place, his work is noiseless, and his Hands are mutes.

DICKENS, Hard Times. Bk. i, ch. 14.

⁷ Time, to the nation as to the individual, is nothing absolute; its duration depends on the rate of thought and feeling.

JOHN WILLIAM DRAPER, History of the Intellectual Development of Europe. Vol. i, ch. 1.

⁸ Time dissipates to shining ether the solid angularity of facts.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: History.

The surest poison is time.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Old Age.

⁹ Time is itself an element. (Die Zeit ist selbst ein Element.)

GORTIL, Sprüche in Prosa. Pt. iii.

Time is a noiseless file.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Time is the rider that breaks youth.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

¹⁰ Made, bitter-sweet, from fruits of life
There is a wine;
It quenches every human thirst—
We call it Time.

JEAN HERSCHEL, Time.

¹¹ Old Time, in whose bank we deposit our notes,
Is a miser who always wants guineas for groats;

He keeps all his customers still in arrears

By lending them minutes and charging them years

O. W. HOLMES, Our Banker. St. I.

¹² What is time? The shadow on the dial, the striking of the clock, the running of the sand, day and night, summer and winter, months, years, centuries—these are but arbitrary and outward signs, the measure of Time, not Time itself. Time is the Life of the soul.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. ii, ch. 6.

¹³ Time is not progress, but amount;
One vast accumulating store,
Laid up, not lost!

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Time. St. 3.

¹⁴ For the just, Time is the best of champions.
(Ἀνδρῶν δικαίων χρόνος αὐτῶν ἀριστός.)

PINDAR, Fragment. No. 159

Time brings everything. (Αἶψα πάντα φέρει.)

WORDSWORTH, Sonnet: Mutability.

III—Time: A Time for All Things

11 A time to love, and a time to wed, and a time to seek rest. ("Ἦναι ἄρα, ἄρα δὲ γάμος, ἄρα δὲ ἡσυχία.")

DIODORUS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 38.)

Though credited to Dionysius in the Anthology, this line was really spoken by Timon of Dionysius of Heraclea, a Stoic philosopher who deserted to the Epicureans in his old age. It was preceded by the punning line, "Now when it is time for him to act, he begins to seek pleasure." ("Ἦναι δὲ χρόνος ἵνα ποιεῖ, οὐκ ἀρχεται φιλῶντας.")

To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven:

A time to be born, and a time to die; a time to plant, and a time to pluck up that which is planted;

A time to kill, and a time to heal; a time to break down, and a time to build up; a time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn, and a time to dance; . . .

A time to get, and a time to lose; a time to keep, and a time to cast away;

A time to rend, and a time to sew; a time to keep silence, and a time to speak;

A time to love, and a time to hate; a time of war, and a time of peace.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, iii, 1-8.

Of a Monday I drive the coach, of a Tuesday I drive the plough, on Wednesday I follow the hounds, a Thursday I dun the tenants, on Friday I go to market, on Saturday I draw warrants, and a Sunday I draw beer.

FARQUHAR, The Beau's Stratagem. Act iii, sc. 3.

For holy offices I have a time; a time

To think upon the part of business which

I bear i' the state; and nature does require

Her times of preservation.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 144.

12 But all thing hath time,

WILLIAM LANGLEND, Richard the Redeless. Pt. iii, l. 278. (c. 1399)

Everything has time.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, All Fools. Act v, sc. 2.

Everything hath its time, and that time must be watch'd.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1466.

13 There's a time for all things.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 65.

There is a time for some things, and a time for all things; a time for great things and a time for small things.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote, Pt. ii, ch. 35.

IV—Time: A River

14 Time's waters will not ebb nor stay.

JOHN KEBLE, Christian Year: First Sunday after Christmas.

15 Time is a river of passing events, aye, a rushing torrent. (Ποταμός τις ἐν τῷ γιγνόμενῳ καὶ ᾄοντι βλάσῃ δὲ αἰῶν.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec. 43.

Time is a flowing river. Happy those who allow themselves to be carried, unresisting, with the current. They float through easy days. They live, unquestioning, in the moment.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Where the Blue Begins, p. 81.

16 The stream of time glides smoothly on and is past before we know. (Labitur occulta fallitque, volubilis ætas.)

OWN, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 49.

Time glides by with constant movement, not unlike a stream. For neither can a stream stay its course, nor can the fleeting hour. (Adsiduo labuntur tempora motu, Non secus ac flumen; neque enim consistere flumen Nec levis hora potest.)

1 OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xv, l. 179.

A wonderful stream is the River Time, As it runs through the realm of Tears, With a faultless rhythm, and a musical rhyme, And a broader sweep, and a surge sublime, As it blends with the Ocean of Years.

8 The wisest thing is Time, for it brings everything to light. (Σοφώτατος χρόνος, ἀνυπόκριτος γὰρ πάντα.)

THALES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Thales. Bk. i, sec. 35.)

Time will bring to light whatever is hidden; it will cover up and conceal what is now shining in splendor. (Quidquid sub terra est, in apricum proferet ætas; Defodiet condetque nitentia.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 6, l. 24.

VI—Time: Its Flight

9 Alas! how swift the moments fly!

How flash the years along!

Scarce here, yet gone already by,

The burden of a song.

See childhood, youth, and manhood pass,

And age with furrowed brow;

Time was—Time shall be—drain the glass—

But where in Time is now?

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. viii, epist.

14, sec. 4.

The clock does not strike for the happy. (Die Uhr schlägt keinem Glücklichen.)

SCHILLER, Piccolomini. Act III, sc. 3.

¹ Time, like a flurry of wild rain,
Shall drift across the darkened pane!
CHARLES G. D. ROBERTS, The Unsleeping.

² Time flies on restless pinions—constant never.
Be constant—and thou chainest time forever.
SCHILLER, Epigram.

³ All past time is lost time; the very day which we are now spending is shared between ourselves and death. (Quicquid transit temporis, perit; hunc ipsum, quem agimus, diem cum morte dividimus.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliū. Epis. xxiv, 20.

⁴ Infinitely swift is the flight of time, as they see who look back at it. (Infinita est velocitas temporis, quæ magis apparet respicientibus.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliū. Epis. xlix, 2.

Note the rapidity of Time—that swiftest of things. (Respice celeritatem rapidissimi temporis.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliū. Epis. xcix, 7.

⁵ Time rolls swiftly ahead, and rolls us with it.
(Agit nos agiturque velox dies.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliū. Epis. cviii, 24.

The wheel of time rolls downward through various changes. (Per varios præceps casus rota volvitur.)

SILVIUS ITALICUS, Punica. Bk. vi, l. 121.

Time rolls his ceaseless course.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto iii, st. 1.

⁶ The inconstant hour flies on double wings.
(Volat ambiguis mobilis alis Hora.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 1141.

Time's fatal wings do ever forward fly;
To every day we live, a day we die.

CAMPION, Divine and Moral Songs. No. 17.

Time, as he passes us, has a dove's wing,
Unsoil'd, and swift, and of a silken sound.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 211.

⁷ See the minutes, how they run,
How many make the hour full complete;
How many hours bring about the day;
How many days will finish up the year;
How many years a mortal man may live.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 25.

So minutes, hours, days, months, and years,
Pass'd over to the end they were created,
Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave.
Ah, what a life were this! how sweet! how lovely!

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 38.

⁸ Time is like a fashionable host That slightly shakes his parting guest by the hand,

And with his arms outstretch'd, as he would fly,
Grasps in the corner: welcome ever smiles,
And farewell goes out sighing.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iii, 3, 165.

⁹ Too late I staid, forgive the crime,— Unheeded flew the hours;
How noiseless falls the foot of Time
That only treads on flow'rs! . . .

Ah! who to sober measurement
Time's happy swiftness brings,
When birds of Paradise have lent

Their plumage for his wings?
WILLIAM ROBERT SPENCER, To the Lady Anne Hamilton.

¹⁰ Go to my love, where she is careless laid
Yet in her winter's bower, not well awake;
Tell her the joyous time will not be staid,
Unless she do him by the forelock take.

SPENCER, Amoretti. Sonnet lxx. See also under OPPORTUNITY.

¹¹ I hate all times, because all times do fly
So fast away, and may not stay'd be,
But as a speedy post that passeth by.

EDMUND SPENCER, Daphnida, l. 411.

¹² Let us alone. Time driveth onward fast,
And in a little while our lips are dumb.
Let us alone. What is it that will last?
All things are taken from us, and become
Portions and parcels of the dreadful past.
Let us alone.

TENNYSOON, The Lotus-Eaters, l. 43.

¹³ Our time is a very shadow that passeth away.
Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, ii, 5.

¹⁴ God stands winding His lonely horn,
And time and the world are ever in flight;
And love is less kind than the grey twilight,
And hope is less clear than the dew of the morn.

W. B. YEATS, Into the Twilight.

¹⁵ How swift the shuttle flies, that weaves thy shroud!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 809.

Time flies like a weaver's shuttle. (Jih tsū ju so.)
UNKNOWN, A Chinese proverb.

¹⁶ Laurel-crowned Horatius,
True, how true thy saying:
Swift as wind flies over us
Time, devouring, slaying.

(Lauriger Horatius,
Quam dicisti verum;

Fugit Euro citius
Tempus edax rerum.)

UNKNOWN, Lauriger Horatius. (Symonds, tr.)

VII—Time: Its Delay

¹⁷ Time goes, you say? Ah no!
Alas, Time stays, we go.

AUSTIN DOBSON, The Paradox of Time.

¹ One would think that time stood still, so slowly does it move. (Stare putes, adeo procedunt tempora tarde.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 10, l. 5.

² The small intolerable drums
Of Time are like slow drops descending.
E. A. ROBINSON, The Poor Relation.

³ Threifold the stride of Time, from first to last:

Loitering slow, the Future creepeth—
Arrow-swift, the Present sweepeth—
And motionless forever stands the Past.
(Dreifach ist der Schritt der Zeit:
Zögernd kommt die Zukunft hergezogen,
Pfeilschnell ist das Jetzt entflohen,
Ewig still steht die Vergangenheit.)
SCHILLER, Sprüche des Confucius.

⁴ The lazy foot of Time.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, 322.

⁵ Time travels in divers paces with divers persons. I'll tell you who Time ambles withal, who Time trots withal, who Time gallops withal, and who he stands still withal.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, 326.

What a devil hast thou to do with the time of the day? Unless hours were cups of sack and minutes capons and clocks the tongues of bawds and dials the signs of leaping-houses and the blessed sun himself a fair hot wench in flame-coloured taffeta, I see no reason why thou shouldst be so superfluous to demand the time of the day.

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 6.

⁶ Time, that takes survey of all the world,
Must have a stop.

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV. Act v, sc. 4, l. 82.

Time goes on crutches till love have all his rites.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 372.

⁷ Time has fallen asleep in the afternoon sunshine.

ALEXANDER SMITH, DreamiCorp. Cb. 1.

⁸ For Time would, with us, 'stead of sand,
Put filings of steel in his glass,

To dry up the blots of his hand,
And spangle life's page as they pass.

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, The Beautiful Incendiary. St. 12.

⁹ What a foolish thing is time! And how foolish is man, who would be as angry if time stopped, as if it passed!

SWIFT, Letter to Vanessa, 7 Aug., 1722.

Give me no changeless hours, for I know
Moments of earth are sweeter than they go.
HERVEY ALLYN, Moments.

VIII—Time: Its Value

¹⁰ The greatest sacrifice is the sacrifice of time.
ANTIPHON. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Antony.)

¹¹ Time is the measure of business, as money is of wares.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Despatch.

Time, O my friend, is money! Time wasted can never conduce to money well managed.

BULWER-LYTTON, Costumana. Essay 21.

Time is money.

BULWER-LYTTON, Money. Act iii, sc. 3.

Remember that time is money.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Advice to a Young Tradesman.

¹² It [the value of time] is in everybody's mouth, but in few people's practice.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 11 Dec, 1747.

¹³ It is the wisest who grieve most at loss of time.
(Chiè perder tempo a chi più sa più spaciare.)

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto iii, l. 78.

¹⁴ Dost thou love life? Then do not squander time, for that's the stuff life is made of.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

¹⁵ Pick my left pocket of its silver dime,
But spare the right,—it holds my golden time!
O W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 324.

¹⁶ To the true teacher, time's hour-glass should still run gold-dust.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Jerrold's Wit: Time.

¹⁷ Nothing is so dear and precious as time.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. v, ch. 5.

¹⁸ Time is the one loan which even a grateful recipient cannot repay. (Qui tempus accepit, cum interum hoc unum est, quod ne gratus quidem potest reddere.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. i, sec. 3.

¹⁹ Save your time. (Tempori parce.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxviii, sec. 39. Quoted as an old saw.

²⁰ Time is the most valuable thing a man can spend. (Συνεχὲς τε ἔχει πολυτέλεις ἀνάλογα εἶναι τὸν χρόνον.)

THEOPHRASTUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Theophrastus. Bk. v, sec. 40.)

An inch of time cannot be bought by an inch of gold. ('Tsun chin nan mai 'tsun kuang yin.)

UNKNOWN. A Chinese proverb.

IX—Time: Lost Time Never Returns

²¹ Well can Senek, and many a philosopher
Bewailen time, more than gold in coiffe.
"For loss of cattle may recovered be,
But loss of time shendeth us," quoth he.
It will not come again, withouten drede,

No more than will Malkin's maidenhead.
CHAUCER, Introduction to the Man of Law's Prologue, l. 25. Shendeth: ruins. For "Malkin's maidenhead" see under MAID.

For time y-lost, this knowen ye,
By no way may recovered be.
CHAUCER, The House of Fame, Bk. iii, l. 167.

For time y-lost may not recovered be.
CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. iv, l. 1283.

Men may recover loss of good,
But so wise man yet never stood
Which may recover time y-lore.
JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis, Bk. iv, l. 1382. (c. 1390)

Time departed, again men may not call.
LYONARD, Fall of Princes, Bk. iii, l. 2811. (1440)

I hope you employ your whole time, which few people do . . . a thing so precious as time, and so irrecoverable when lost.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Dec., 1746.

Hours and days, and months and years go by, nor does past time ever return. (Horæ cedunt et dies et menses et anni, nec præteritum tempus umquam revertitur.)
CICERO, De Senectute, Ch. xix, sec. 69.

Neither will the wave which has passed be called back, nor can the hour which has gone return.
(Nec quæ præterit, iterum revocabitur unda, Nec quæterit, hora redire potest.)
OVID, Ars Amatoria, Bk. iii, l. 63.

Remember that lost time does not return.
(Memento . . . perditum non redit tempus.)
À KAMPIS, De Imitatione Christi, Pt. i, ch. 25.

Time flies away, and cannot be restored. (Fugit inreparabile tempus.)
VERGIL, Georgics, Bk. iii, l. 284.

Last time is never found again.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1748.

Man cannot call the brimming instant back;
Time's an affair of instants spun to days;
If man must make an instant gold, or black,
Let him, he may, but Time must go his ways.
Life may be duller for an instant's blaze.
Life's an affair of instants spun to years,
Instants are only cause of all these tears.

JOHN MASFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street, Pt. v, st. 27.

Who can undo
What time hath done? who can win back the wind?

Beckon lost music from a broken lute?
Renew the redness of a last year's rose?
Or dig the sunken sunset from the deep?

OWEN MEREDITH, Orval, Epoch ii, sc. 1.

Would'st thou live long? keep Time in high esteem:

Whom gone, if thou canst not recall, redeem.
FRANCIS QUARLES, Hieroglyphics of the Life of Man, Epig. 6.

Onward the chariot of the Untarrying moves;
Nor day divulges him nor night conceals;
Thou hearest the echo of unreturning hooves
And thunder of irrevocable wheels.
WILLIAM WATSON, Epigrams, No. xvii.

X—Time: Its Use

As good have no time, as make no good use of it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 686.

He that has most time has none to lose.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 2141.

He that hath time and looketh for a better time, loseth time. Time comes that he repents himself of time.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jucula Prudentum.

By losing present time, we lose all time.
W. G. BENJAMIN, Proverbs, p. 746.

No person will have occasion to complain of the want of time who never loses any.
THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to His Daughter,
5 May, 1787.

Those who make the worst use of their time
most complain of its shortness.

Take time in time, ere time be tint,
For time will not remain.
ALEXANDER MONTGOMERIE, Cherrie and Sloe.
St. 36.

Take time when time is, for time is ay mutable.
JOHN SKELTON, Works, Vol. i, p. 137.

Employ your time; Time glides on with speedy foot. (Utendum est ætate; cito pede labitur ætas.)
OVID, Ars Amatoria, Bk. iii, l. 65.

Catch then, oh catch the transient hour;
Improve each moment as it flies!
Life's a short Summer, man a flower;
He dies—alas! how soon he dies!
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Winter: An Ode.

The Seconds that tick as the clock moves along
Are Privates who march with a spirit so strong.
The Minutes are Captains. The Hours of the day

Are Officers brave, who lead on to the fray.
So, remember, when tempted to loiter and dream
You've an army at hand; your command is supreme;

And question yourself, as it goes on review—
Has it helped in the fight with the best it could do?

PHILANDER JOHNSON, Each Man's Army.
Selected by Admiral Samuel MacGowan to be distributed to the men under his command during the World War. (Everybody's Magazine, May, 1920, p. 36.)

¹ He briskly and cheerfully asked him how a man should kill time.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 63.

² Ordinary people think merely how they will spend their time; a man of intellect tries to use it.

SCHOPENHAUER, Aphorisms on the Wisdom of Life.

³ The clock upbraids me with a waste of time.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 141.

The time best employed is that which one wastes.
(Le temps le mieux employé est celui qu'on perd.)

Spendthrifts of inestimable time.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 273.

⁷ Time wasted is existence, us'd is life.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 150.

Time destroy'd
Is suicide, where more than blood is split.
Time flies, death urges, knells call, heaven invites,
Hell threatens.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 290.

⁸ In time take time while time doth last,
For time is no time when time is past.

UNKNOWN. Written on the title page of his account book by Nicholas Stone, mason to James I.

XI—Time: Gather Ye Rosebuds

See Also Life and Living; Opportunity

⁹ Gather the roses, maiden, while the blooms are fresh and youth is fresh, and be mindful that in like fashion your lifetime hastes away.
(Collige, virgo, rosas, dum flos novus et nova pubes, Et memores esto seivum sic properare tuum.)

ARISTOTEL [?], De Rosis Nascentibus, l. 49.

And sport, sweet maid, in season of these years,
And hark to gather flowers before they wither.
SAMUEL DANIEL, Sonnets to Delia. No. xlviii.

¹⁰ Gather roses while they bloom,
To-morrow is yet far away!
(Pflücke Rosen, weil sie blühen, Morgen ist nicht heut!)

JOHANN GELKE, Benutzung der Zeit.

¹¹ Gather ye Rose-buds while ye may,
Old Time is still a-fying:
And this same flower that smiles to-day,
To-morrow will be dying. . . .

Then be not coy, but use your time,
And while ye may, go marry:
For having lost but once your prime,
You may for ever tarry.

ROBERT HERRICE, To the Virgins, to Make Much of Time.

¹² If you let slip time, like a neglected rose,
It withers on the stalk with languish'd head.
MILTON, Comus, l. 743.

¹³ Pluck the grapes hanging from the well-stocked vines. (Carpite de plenibus pendentes vitibus uvas.)
OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 10, l. 35.

Pluck the flower. (Carpite florem.)
OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 79.

While you are upon earth, enjoy the good things that are here.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Pleasure.

¹⁴ Make haste nor wait the coming hours; he who is unready today will be more so to-morrow. (Sed propera, nec te venturas differ in horas; Qui non est hodie, cras minus aptus erit.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 93.

¹⁵ Sweet lady mine! while yet 'tis time,
Requite my passion and my truth,
And gather in their blushing prime
The roses of your youth.

RONSARD, Lines to His Mistress. (Thackeray, tr.)

¹⁶ Make use of time, let not advantage slip;
Beauty within itself should not be wasted:
Fair flowers that are not gather'd in their prime,

Rot and consume themselves in little time.
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 129.

¹⁷ Gather therefore the rose whilst yet is prime.
For soon comes age, that will her pride de-flower.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto 12, st. 75.

¹⁸ Life let us cherish, while yet the taper glows,
And the fresh flow'et pluck ere it close.

JOHANN USTERI, Life Let Us Cherish.

¹⁹ Let us crown ourselves with rose-buds, before they be withered.

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, ii, 8. (Coronemus nos rosas, antequam marcescant.—Vulgate: Liber Sapientie, ii, 8.)

²⁰ Therefore fear not to assay
To gather, ye that may,

The flower that this day
Is fresher than the next.

SIR THOMAS WYATT, That the Season of Enjoyment Is Short.

XII—Time: The Consoler

1 Backward, turn backward, O Time, in your flight,

Make me a child again just for to-night!

ELIZABETH AKERS ALLEN, Rock Me to Sleep.

Fraudulently claimed by Alexander M. W. Ball. (See Stevenson, Famous Single Poems.)

Backward, flow backward, O tide of the years!

I am so weary of toil and of tears—

Toil without recompense, tears all in vain—

Take them and give me my childhood again!

I have grown weary of dust and decay,

Weary of flinging my soul-wealth away,

Weary of sowing for others to reap;

Rock me to sleep, mother—rock me to sleep!

ELIZABETH AKERS ALLEN, Rock Me to Sleep.

2 Time, so complain'd of,

Who to no one man

Shows partiality,

Brings round to all men

Some undimmed hours.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Consolation, l. 71.

3 O Time! the beautifier of the dead,

Adorner of the ruin, comforter

And only healer when the heart hath bled—

Time! the corrector where our judgments err,

The test of truth, love,—sole philosopher,

For all beside are sophists, from thy thrift

Which never loses though it doth defer—

Time, the avenger! unto thee I lift

My hands, and eyes, and heart, and crave of thee a gift.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto IV, st. 130.

4 There is no remembrance which time does not obliterate, nor pain which death does not end. (No ay memoria à quien el tiempo no acabe, ni dolor que muerte no le consuma.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. III, ch. 1.

As time him hurt, a time doth him cure.

CHAUCEER, Troilus and Criseyde, v, 350.

5 To things immortal, Time can do no wrong,

And that which never is to die, for ever must be young.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, To Mr. Hobbes.

6 See! Time has touch'd me gently in his race,

And left no odious furrows in my face.

CRABBE, Tales of the Hall. Bk. XVII, st. 3.

snare;

Thou nurrest all and murder'st all that are.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 975.

Time's glory is to calm contending kings,
To unmask falsehood and bring truth to light,
To stamp the seal of time in aged things,
To wake the more and sentinel the night,
To wrong the wronger till he render right,
To rinate proud buildings with thy hours,
And smear with dust their glittering golden towers.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 939.

¹⁶ Time bath, my lord, a wallet at his back,
Wherein he puts aims for oblivion,
A great-sized monster of ingratitude:

These scraps are good deeds past; which are devour'd

As fast as they are made, forgot as soon
As done.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii,
sc. 3, l. 143.

Beauty, wit,
High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service,
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating time.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii,
sc. 3, l. 171.

Unfathomable Sea, whose waves are years;
Ocean of Time, whose waters of deep woe
Are brackish with the salt of human tears!
Thou shoreless flood, which in thy ebb and flow

Claspest the limits of mortality!

And sick of prey, yet howling on for more,
Vomitest thy wrecks on its inhospitable shore;

Treacherous in calm, and terrible in storm,
Who shall put forth on thee,
Unfathomable Sea?

SHELLEY, Time.

Ever eating, never cloying,
All-devouring, all-destroying,
Never finding full repast,
Till I eat the world at last.

SWIFT, On Time.

In vain men tell us time can alter
Old loves or make old memories falter.
A. C. SWINBURNE, Age and Song.

XIV—Time and Eternity

He said, "What's time? Leave Now for dogs and apes!

Man has Forever."

ROBERT BROWNING, A Grammarian's Funeral.

Fool! All that is, at all,
Lasts ever, past recall;

Earth changes, but thy soul and God stand sure:
What entered into thee,
That was, is, and shall be:
Time's wheel runs back nor stops: Potter and clay endure.

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Ezer. St. 27.

Behind, he hears Time's iron gates close faintly, . . .

For he has reached the city of the saintly,
The New Jerusalem.

JAMES D. BURNS, The Vision of Prophecy:
Poem of a Death Believer.

Time for him had merged itself into eternity;
he was, as we say, no more.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Characteristics.

His time's forever, everywhere his place.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Friendship in Absence.

Mere by-blows are the world and we,
And time, within eternity,

A sheer anachronism.

JOHN DAVIDSON, Queen Elizabeth's Day.

Somewhat back from the village street
Stands the old-fashioned country-seat.
Across its antique portico
Tall poplar-trees their shadows throw;
And from its station in the hall
An ancient timepiece says to all,—

"Forever—never!"

Never—forever!"

LONGFELLOW, The Old Clock on the Stairs.

The horologe of Eternity
Sayeth this incessantly,—

"Forever—never!"

Never—forever!"

LONGFELLOW, The Old Clock on the Stairs.

Day and night,
Seed-time and harvest, heat and hoary frost
Shall hold their course, till fire purge all things new.

dom of Dean Inge*. No. 33.)

Make use of time if thou lov'st eternity.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Enchiridion.

"Time restores all things." Wrong! Time restores many things, but eternity restores all.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest:
Time, Life, Death, The Future. No. 8.

I dimly guess what Time in mists confounds;
Yet ever and anon a trumpet sounds
From the hid battlements of Eternity;
Those shaken mists a space unsettle, then Round the half-glimpst d turrets slowly wash again.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Hound of Heaven, l. 143.

Time is eternity;
Pregnant with all eternity can give;
Pregnant with all that makes archangels
smile.

Who murders Time, he crushes in the birth
A power ethereal, only not ador'd.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 107.

XV—Time and Man

When Time shall turn those amber locks to grey,

My verse again shall gild and make them gay.
MICHAEL DRAYTON, Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey, to the Lady Geraldine, l. 123.

Time has . . . changed the auburn hair to white.

LOWELL, The Golden Legend. Pt. iv, The Chapel, l. 12.

His golden locks Time hath to silver turn'd;
O Time too swift, O swiftness never ceasing!
GEORGE PERLE, Polyhymnia.

Time wastes too fast: . . . everything presses on—whilst thou art twisting that lock, see, it grows grey!

STERN, Tristram Shandy. Bk. ix, ch. 8.

Time flies, my pretty one! . . . Now, even as thou twistest that brown curl on that finger—see! it grows grey!

FREDERICK LOCKER-LAMPSON, My Confidences.

Alas! it is not till time, with reckless hand, has torn out half the leaves from the Book of Human Life, to light the fires of passion with, from day to day, that man begins to see that the leaves which remain are few in number.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. iv, ch. 8.

Time, elfsoon will tumble
All of us together like leaves in a gust,
Humbled indeed down into the dust.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Fallen Leaves. St. 5.

Let time that makes you homely, make you sage.

THOMAS FARNELL, Elegy to an Old Beauty, l. 35.

Years following years steal something ev'ry day.

At last they steal us from ourselves away.
POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epist. 2, l. 72.

Even such is Time, that takes in trust
Our youth, our joys, our all we have,
And pays us but with earth and dust;
Who in the dark and silent grave,
When we have wander'd all our ways,
Shuts up the story of our days;
But from this earth, this grave, this dust,
My God shall raise me up, I trust.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Conclusion. Written the night before his death. Found in his Bible in the Gate-house at Westminster.

Poets and kings are but the clerks of Time,
Tying the same dull webs of discontent,
Clipping the same sad alnage of the years.
EDWIN ARINGTON ROBINSON, The Clerks.

Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth
And delves the parallels in beauty's brow.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. 18.

O, how shall summer's honey breath hold out
Against the wreckful siege of battering days,

When rocks impregnable are not so stout,
Nor gates of steel so strong, but Time decays!
O fearful meditation! where, alack,
Shall Time's best jewel from Time's chest lie hid?

Or what strong hand can hold his swift foot back?

Or who his spoil of beauty can forbid?

Tobacco, divine, rare, superexcellent tobacco, which goes far beyond all the panaceas, potable gold, and philosopher's stones, a sovereign remedy to all diseases; . . . but as it is commonly abused by most men, which take it as tinkers do ale, 'tis a plague, a mischief, a violent purger of goods, lands, health; hellish, devilish and damned tobacco, the ruin and overthrow of body and soul.

Tobacco is a dirty weed: I like it.
It satisfies no normal need: I like it.
It makes you thin, it makes you lean,
It takes the hair right off your bean;
It's the worst darn stuff I've ever seen:
I like it.

GRAHAM HEMMINGER, Tobacco. (Penn State

When all things were made none was made better than this; to be a lone man's companion, a bachelor's friend, a hungry man's food, a sad man's cordial, a wakeful man's sleep, and a chilly man's fire, Sir; while for stanching of wounds, purging of rheum, and settling of the stomach, there's no herb like unto it under the canopy of heaven.

second paragraph from end. Salvation Yeo's tribute to tobacco.

5
For I hate, yet love, thee so,
That, whichever thing I show,
The plain truth will seem to be
A constrain'd hyperbole,
And the passion to proceed

CHARLES LAMB, A Farewell to Tobacco, l. 11.

Thou in such a cloud dost blind us,
That our worst foes cannot find us,
And ill fortune, that would thwart us,

It is not for nothing that this "ignoble taba-gie," as Michelet calls it, spreads over all the world. Michelet rails against it because it renders you happy apart from thought or work; to provident women this will seem no evil influence in married life. Whatever keeps a man in the front garden, whatever checks wandering fancy and all inordinate ambition, whatever makes for lounging and contentment, makes just so surely for domestic happiness.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. 1.

12
The Indian weed withered quite,
Greene at none, cut downe at night,
Shewes thy decay, all flesh is hay,
Thus thinke, then drinke Tobacco. . . .

And when the smoake ascends on high,
Thinke, thou behold'st the vanitie
Of worldly stuffe gone with a puffe:
Thus thinke, then drinke Tobacco.

And when the Pipe grows foule within,
Thinke on thy soule defil'd with sinne,
And then the fire it doth require,
Thus thinke, then drinke Tobacco.

The ashes that are left behinde,
May serue to put thee still in minde,
That vnto dust, returne thou must,
Thus thinke, then drinke Tobacco.

THOMAS JENNER, Tobacco. From The Soules

Solace; or Thirrie and one Spirituall Emblems. Emblem 31. (1626) These verses, often parodied, have been variously ascribed to Robert Wisdom, John Erskine, and George Wither, who was really a strong opponent of smoking, as a "thing full of barbarism and shame." The "withered" (then pronounced withered) in the first line is a punning reference to Wither's bitter attack on tobacco in Abuses Stript and Whipt.
(1613) Wither wrote a reply with the counter-refrain, "Thus thinke, drinke no Tobacco." "Drink tobacco" means to drink in or smoke it.

Tobacco's but an Indian weed,
Grows green at morn, cut down at eve;
It shows our decay, we are but clay.

Think on this when you smook Tobacco.

Tobacco, an outlandish weed,
Doth in the land strange wonders breed;
It taints the breath, the blood it dries,
It burns the head, it blinds the eyes;
It dries the lungs, scourgeth the lights,
It mumps the soul, it dulls the sprites;
It brings a man into a maze,
And makes him sit for others' gaze;
It mars a man, it mars a purse,
It mays one fat, a fat one worse;
A white man black, a black man white,
A night a day, a day a night;
It turns the brain like cat in pan,
And makes a Jack a gentleman.

Ere it came to my hand,
And 'scaped the wind and weather.

Tobacco's a musician,
And in a pipe delighteth;
It descends in a close.

Through the organ of the nose,
With a relish that inviteth.
BARTEN HOLMAY, Texnotamia. (1630)

¹ Certain things are good for nothing until they have been kept a long while; and some are good for nothing until they have been long kept and used. Of the first, wine is the illustrious and immortal example. Of those which must be kept and used I will name three,—meerschaum pipes, violins, and poems. The meerschaum is but a poor affair until it has burned a thousand offerings to the cloud-compelling deities. . . . The fire is lighted in its central shrine, and gradually the juices which the broad leaves of the Great Vegetable had sucked up from an acre and curdled into a drachm are diffused through its thirsting pores.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 5.

² May be the truth is, that one pipe is wholesome, two pipes toothsome, three pipes noisome, four pipes fulsome, five pipes quarrelsome; and that's the sum on't.

LAMB, Letter to Coleridge, 13 April, 1803.

³ With pipe and book at close of day,
Oh, what is sweeter? mortal say.

It matters not what book on knee,
Old Isaak or the Odyssey,
It matters not meerschaum or clay.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, With Pipe and Book.

⁴ Still let us puff, puff; be life smooth, be it rough,
Such enjoyment we'er ever in lack o':
The more peace and good-will will abound as we fill

A jolly good pipe of Tobacco!

JOHN USHER, The Pipe of Tobacco.

⁵ Contented I sit with my pint and my pipe,
Puffing sorrow and care far away,
And surely the brow of grief nothing can wipe,

Like smoking and moist'ning our clay; . . .
For tho' at my simile many may joke,
Man is but a pipe—and his life but smoke.

UNKNOWN, Content and a Pipe.

IV—Tobacco: Cigar and Cigarette

⁶ The sweet post-prandial cigar.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, De Bernes.

⁷ Sublime tobacco! which from east to west,
Cheers the tar's labour or the Turkman's rest;
Which on the Moslem's ottoman divides
His hours, and rivals opium and his brides;
Magnificent in Stamboul, but less grand,
Though not less loved, in Wapping or the Strand;

Divine in hookas, glorious in a pipe,
When tipp'd with amber, mellow, rich, and ripe; . . .

Yet thy true lovers more admire by far
Thy naked beauties—Give me a cigar!

BRONX, The Island. Canto ii, st. 19.

⁸ Some sigh for this and that,
My wishes don't go far,

The world may wag at will,

So I have my cigar.

THOMAS HOOD, The Cigar. St. 1.

They tell me Nancy Low

Has married Mr. R.;

The jilt! but I can live,

So I have my cigar.

THOMAS HOOD, The Cigar. St. 14.

⁹ For Maggie has written a letter to give me my choice between
The wee little whimpering Love and the great god Nick o' Teen.

KIPLING, The Betrothed.

A million surplus Maggies are willing to bear the yoke;
And a woman is only a woman, but a good Cigar is a Smoke.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Betrothed.

Woman in this scale, the weed in that, Jupiter, hang out thy balance, and weigh them both; and if thou give the preference to woman, all I can say is, the next time Juno ruffles thee—O Jupiter, try the weed.

BULWER-LYTTON, What Will He Do With It?
Bk. i, ch. 6.

A maid unto her lover sternly said:
"Forego the Indian weed before we wed,
For smoke take flame; I'll be that flame's bright fanner;

To have your Anna, give up your Havana."
The wretch, when thus she brought him to the scratch,

Lit the cigar and threw away the match.

UNKNOWN, It Ended in Smoke.

¹⁰ What this country really needs is a good five cent cigar.

THOMAS R. MARSHALL, Remark, while presiding over the U. S. Senate during a debate on the needs of the country.

The light ones may be killers,
And the dark ones may be mild;
Not the wrappers, but the fillers,
Make cigars or women wild.

KEITH PRESTON, Popular Fallacies.

¹¹ Yes, social friend, I love thee well,
In learned doctors' spite;
Thy clouds all other clouds dispel,
And lap me in delight.

CHARLES SPRAGUE, To My Cigar.

¹² It was my last cigar, it was my last cigar;
I breath'd a sigh to think, in sooth,
It was my last cigar.

UNKNOWN, My Last Cigar. A popular college song for many years. A parody, My First Cigar, was written as long ago as 1867, by
W. C. Rommel, then a student at Princeton.

¹ A cigarette is the perfect type of a perfect pleasure. It is exquisite, and it leaves one unsatisfied. What more can you want?

TODAY

I—Today

^{1a} There is left for myself then but one day in the week—today. Any man can fight the battles of today. Any woman can carry the burdens of just one day. Any man can resist the temptations of today. Oh, friends, it is only when we willfully add the burdens of those two awful eternities, yesterday and tomorrow, such burdens as only the mighty God can sustain, that we break down. It isn't the experience of today that drives men mad. It is the remorse for something that happened yesterday, and the dread of what tomorrow may disclose.

ROBERT J. BURDETTE, The Golden Day.

² Out of Eternity the new Day is born;
Into Eternity at night will return.

THOMAS CARLYLE, To-day.

³ To those leaning on the sustaining infinite, to-day is big with blessings.

MARY B. EDDY, Science and Health: Preface, p. vii.

⁴ Rise! for the day is passing,
And you lie dreaming on;
The others have buckled their armour,
And forth to the fight are gone;
A place in the ranks awaits you,
Each man has some part to play;
The Past and the Future are nothing,
In the face of the stern To-day.

¹⁰ Listen to the Exhortation of the Dawn!
Look to this Day, for it is Life—
The very Life of Life!
In its brief course lie all the Verities
And Realities of your Existence:

The Bliss of Growth,
The Glory of Action,
The Splendor of Beauty;
For Yesterday is but a Dream,
And To-morrow is only a Vision;
But To-day well lived
Makes every Yesterday a Dream of Happiness.

And every To-morrow a Vision of Hope.
Look well, therefore, to this day!
Such is the Salutation of the Dawn.

Suffer thy legs, but not thy tongue, to walk:
God, the most Wise, is sparing of His talk.

ROBERT HERRICK, Silence.

Hold your tongue! (Favete linguis.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 1, l. 2.

"They are fools who kiss and tell"—
Wisely has the poet sung.

Men may hold all sorts of posts
If he 'll only hold his tongue.

RUDYARD KIPPLING, Pink Dominoes.

Whatsoever else shall hap to-night.

Give it an understanding, but no tongue.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 249.

Yes, forsooth, I will hold my tongue; so your face bids me, though you say nothing. Mum, mum.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 214.

Sweet, bid me hold my tongue,
For in this rapture I shall surely speak
The thing I shall repent.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc.
2, l. 137.

You possess also the art of holding your tongue! Ah, you have all the talents for pleasing!

(Vous possédez aussi l'art de vous taire!
Ah! vous avez tous les talents de plaire.)

VOLTAIRE, La Prude. Act iii, sc. 2.

I shall keep my tongue between my teeth.

WALKER, Paræmiologia, 18. (1672)

If he does not keep his tongue between his teeth,
I'll give him a chuck o' the chin.

COLLEY CIBBER, Rival Fools. Act ii.

Keep tongue betwixt teeth!

SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 7.

TOOTH

I—Tooth: Apothegms

I hope you take great care of your mouth and teeth, and that you clean them well every morning with a sponge and tepid water, with a few drops of arquebusade water dropped into it; besides washing your mouth carefully after every meal, I do insist upon your never using any of those sticks, or any hard substance whatsoever, which always rub away the gums, and destroy the varnish of the teeth.

LOAN CRESTFIELD, Letters, 15 Feb., 1754.

Some ask'd how pearls did grow, and where?

Then spoke I to my girl,

To part her lips, and show'd them there
The quarelets of pearl.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Rock of Rubies.

Delicate little pound-white wadges,
All transparent at the edges.

BAILEY, Festus: A Large Parly.

Those cherries fairly do enclose
Of orient pearl a double row,
Which, when her lovely laughter shows,
They look like rosebuds fill'd with snow.

UNKNOWN. (An Hours's Recreation in Munke.)

The teeth form a barrier to check wanton words.
AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. i, ch. 13,
sec. 3. Quoting Homer.

It was excellently said of that philosopher, that there was a wall or parapet of teeth set in our mouth, to restrain the petulance of our words.
BEN JONSON, Explorata: Lingua Sapientis.

There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.
New Testament: Matthew, xxii, 13.

I am escaped with the skin of my teeth.
Old Testament: Job, xix, 20. Often incorrectly quoted, "I have escaped by the skin of my teeth."

Thais has black, Læcænia white teeth; what is the reason? Thais has her own, Læcænia ones she bought.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 43.

Thais her teeth are black and nought,
Læcænia's white are grown:

But what's the reason? these are bought,

The other wears her own.

II—Tooth: The Aching Tooth

An aching tooth is better out than in.

To lose a rotten member is a gain.

RICHARD BAXTER, Hypocriey.

My curse upon your venom'd stang,
That shoots my tortur'd gooms along,
An' thro' my lug gies monie a twang

Wi' gnawing vengeance,
Tearing my nerves wi' bitter pang,
Like racking engines!

BURNS, Address to the Toothache, St. 1.

The tongue is ever turning to the aching tooth.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 4796.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1746.

Of all our pains, since man was curst,
I mean of body, not the mental,
To name the worst, among the worst,
The dental sure is transcendental;
Some bit of masticating bone,
That ought to help to clear a shelf:
But lets its proper work alone,
And only seems to gnaw itself.

THOMAS HOOD, A True Story, l. 1.

One tooth he had with many fangs,
That shot at once as many pangs, . . .
One touch of that extatic stump
Could jerk his limbs, and make him jump.

THOMAS HOOD, A True Story, l. 27.

Who hath aching teeth hath ill tenants.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 26.

What! sigh for the toothache?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
III, sc. 2, l. 23.

For there was never yet philosopher
That could endure the toothache patiently.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
V, sc. 1, l. 35.

Being troubled with a raging tooth,
I could not sleep.

TRAVEL

The world is his who has money to go over it.
EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Wealth.

I have been a stranger in a strange land.
Old Testament: Exodus, II, 22.

If you will be a traveller, have always the eyes of a falcon, the ears of an ass, the face of an ape, the mouth of a hog, the shoulder of a camel, the legs of a stag, and see that you never want two bags very full, that is one of patience and another of money.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes. Fo. 93. (1591)

A traveller must have the back of an ass to bear all, a tongue like the tail of a dog to flatter all,
the mouth of a hog to eat what is set before him,
the ear of a merchant to hear all and say nothing.

THOMAS NASH, Works, v, 141. There are many variations of this saying, which is included in most of the collections of proverbs.

Know most of the rooms of thy native country before thou goest over the threshold thereof.

THOMAS FULLER, *The Holy and Profane
States: Of Travelling*, Maxim 4.

A wise traveler never despises his own country.

II—Travel: Its Wisdom

16 The traveled mind is the catholic mind educated from exclusiveness and egotism.

AMOS BRONSON ALCOTT, Table Talk: Travel.

17 Travelling is no fool's errand to him who carries his eyes and itinerary along with him.

AMOS BRONSON ALCOTT, Table Talk: Travel.

18 Travel, in the younger sort, is a part of education; in the elder, a part of experience. He that travelleth into a country, before he hath some entrance into the language, goeth to school, and not to travel.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Travel.

Let him sequester himself from the company of his countrymen, and diet in such places where there is good company of the nation where he travelleth.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Travel.

Young men should travel, if but to amuse themselves.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto li, st. 16.

If a shower approach,
You find safe shelter in the next stage-coach.
There, prison'd in a parlour snug and small,

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Contarini Fleming. Pt. v, ch. 7.

Virtue and vice, happiness and misery, are much more equally distributed to nations than those are permitted to suppose who have never been from home, and who believe, like the Chinese, that their residence is the center of the world, of light, of privilege, and of enjoyment.

AMASSA DELANO, Narrative of Voyages, p. 256.

Go far—too far you cannot, still the farther
The more experience finds you: And go sparing!

One meal a week will serve you, and one suit,
Through all your travels; for you'll find it certain,

The poorer and the baser you appear,
The more you look through still.

Travelling is the ruin of all happiness. There's no looking at a building here, after seeing Italy.

FANNY BURNBY, Cecilia. Bk. II, ch. 6.

Those who travel heedlessly from place to place, observing only their distance from each other, and attending only to their accommodation at the inn at night, set out fools, and will certainly return so.

LOUIS CHRISTIANZ, Letters, 30 Oct., 1747.

How much a dunce that has been sent to roam,
Exceeds a dunce that has been left at home.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 415.

If an ass goes travelling, he'll not come home a horse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2668.

The fool that far is sent,
Some wisdom to attain,
Returns an idiot, as he went,
And brings the fool again.

GEORGEY WHITNEY, Emblems, 178. (1586)

1 In travelling
I shape myself betimes to idleness
And take fools' pleasure.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. i.

2 There are three wants which never can be satisfied: that of the rich, who wants something more; that of the sick, who wants something different; and that of the traveller, who says, "Anywhere but here."

EMERSON, *Conduct of Life: Considerations by
the Way*.

It is for want of self-culture that the superstition of Travelling, whose idols are Italy, England,
Egypt, retains its fascination for all educated Americans. They who made England, Italy, or Greece venerable in the imagination, did so by sticking fast where they were. . . . The soul is no traveller; the wise man stays at home. . . .
Travelling is a fool's paradise.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

3 Some minds improve by travel, others, rather,

Resemble copper wire, or brass,
Which get the narrower by going farther!

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 229.

4 They change their clime, not their disposition, who run beyond the sea. (Cælum, non animam mutant, qui trans mare currunt.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, ep. 13, l. 27.

If a goose flies across the sea, there comes back a quack-quack.

UNKNOWN. A German proverb.

5 Each blames the place he lives in; but the mind
Is most in fault, which ne'er leaves self behind.

(Stultus uterque locum immeritum causatur
inique:

In culpa est animus, qui se non effugit umquam.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, ep. 14, l. 12. (Coning-ton, tr.)

It serves you right! You travelled with yourself.
(Non immerito hoc tibi evenit; tecum enim peregrinaberis.)

SOCRATES, to a man who complained that he had received no benefit from his travels.

(SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epis. civ,
sec. 7.)

6 Your land, and home, and pleasant wife must be left behind. (Linquenda tellus, et domus, et placens Uxor.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 14, l. 21.

His house, his home, his heritage, his lands,
The laughing dames in whom he did delight,
Whose large blue eyes, fair locks, and snowy hands,

Might shake the saintship of an anchorite,
And long had fed his youthful appetite;
His goblets brimm'd with every costly wine,
And all that mote to luxury invite,
Without a sigh he left, to cross the brine,
And traverse Paynim shores, and pass earth's central line.

BYRON, Child Harold. Canto i, st. 11.

7 Why do we in our short term of life strive with might and main for so many things?
Why do we change for lands warmed by another sun? (Quid brevi fortes jaculamur ævo Multa? Quid terras alio calentes Sole mutamus?)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 16, l. 17.

8 Fools are aye fond o' flittin', and wise men o' sittin'.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

9 Everywhere is nowhere. When a person spends all his time in foreign travel, he ends by having many acquaintances, but no friends. (Nusquam est, qui ubique est.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epis. ii, sec. 2.

What profit is there in crossing the sea and in going from one city to another? If you would escape your troubles, you need not another place but another personality. Perhaps you have reached Athens, or perhaps Rhodes; choose any state you fancy, how does it matter what its character may be? You will be bringing to it your own.

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epis. civ, sec. 8.

What benefit has travel of itself ever been able to give anyone? . . . Travelling cannot give us judgment, or shake off our errors; it merely holds our attention for a moment by a certain novelty.

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epis. civ, sec. 13.

10 Ay, now am I in Arden: the more fool I;
when I was at home, I was in a better place:
but travellers must be content.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 15.

11 See one promontory, one mountain, one sea,
one river, and see all.

SOCRATES. (BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy.
Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 4, subs. 7.)

What canst thou see elsewhere which thou seest not here? Behold the heavens and the earth, and all the elements; for of these are all things made.

THOMAS À KEMP, De Imitatione Christi. Pt.
i, ch. 20.

12 There's nothing under heav'n so blue
That's fairly worth the travelling to.

R. L. STEVENSON, A Song of the Road.

TERENCE, Adelphi, I, 413. (Act III, sc. 3.)

² It is not worth while to go round the world to count the cats in Zanabar.
H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Conclusion.

³ He travelled here, he travelled there;—
But not the value of a hair
Was head or heart the better.
WORDSWORTH, Peter Bell. Pt. I, l. 238.

IV—Travel: Travellers' Tales

⁴ There three sorts be Of people lying, which may themselves defend In lying, for they have authority to lie: the first is pilgrims that have great wonders seen In strange countries;
such may say what they will.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Ship of Fools, II, 68. (1508) Travellers, poets and liars are three words all of one signification.

RICHARD BRATHWAITE, English Gentleman, 77.
⁵ Travellers . . . have liberty to utter what lies they list.

THOMAS DELOWEY, Gentle Craft. Pt. II, ch. 6.
(c. 1598)

If he has been a traveller, he certainly says true, for he may lie by authority.

DRYDEN AND LEE, Duke of Guise. Act IV, sc. 4.

⁶ The sundry contemplation of my travels, in which my often rumination wraps me in a most humorous sadness.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act IV, sc. 1, l. 18.
Farewell, Monsieur Traveller: look you lip and wear strange suits, disable all the benefits of your own country, be out of love with your nativity and almost chide God for making you that countesance you are, or I will scarce think you have swam in a gondola.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act IV, sc. 1, l. 32.

⁷ My travels' history:
Wherein of antres vast and deserts idle,
Rough quarries, rocks and hills whose heads
touch heaven,

It was my hint to speak; . . .
And of the Cannibals that each other eat,
And Anthropophagi and men whose heads
Do grow beneath their shoulders.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act I, sc. 3, l. 139.

⁸ Travellers ne'er did lie,
Though fools at home condemn 'em.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act III, sc. 3, l. 26.

⁹ They told of prodigies, as one who has returned from far countries, the force of whirlwinds, and unheard-of birds, monsters of the deep, uncertain combinations of men and beasts—things seen, or believed through fear. (Ut quis ex longinquo revererat, mi-racula narrabant, vim turbinum, et inauditas

*volucres, monstra maris, ambiguus hominum

Treachery, though at first very cautious, in the end betrays itself. (Ipsa se fraus, etiamsi initio cautior fuerit, delegit.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xlv, sec. 15.

He . . . felt toward those whom he had deserted that peculiar malignity which has, in all ages, been characteristic of apostates.

MACAULAY, History of England. Ch. 1.

And forthwith he came to Jesus, and said, Hail, Master; and kissed him.

New Testament: Matthew, xvi, 49.

But Jesus said unto him, Judas, betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?

New Testament: Luke, xii, 48.

Judas had given them the slip.

MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries: Matt., xii.

To say the truth, so Judas kiss'd his master, And cried "all hail!" when as he meant all harm.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 7, l. 33.

We dipped our hands in the dish together.

I kissed the face I loved so well.

And here is a halter that will tether

Another ass in the fields of hell.

TREASON

I.—Treason: Apothegms

Treason hath blister'd heels, dishonest things Have bitter rivers, though delicious springs.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Charles, Duke of Byron. Act I, sc. 1.

And to talk treason for his daily bread.

DRYDEN, Abraham and Achitophel. Pt. II, l. 351.

Treason is not own'd when 'tis descried; Successful crimes alone are justified.

DRYDEN, The Medal, l. 207.

Rebellion must be managed by many swords; treason to his prince's person may be with one knife.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy and the Profane State: The Traitor.

Treason doth never prosper, what's the reason?

For if it prosper, none dare call it Treason.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Of Treason. (Epigrams. Bk. IV, epig. 259.)

Cæsar had his Brutus; Charles the First, his Cromwell; and George the Third ["Treason!" cried the Speaker]—may profit by their example. If this be treason, make the most of it.

PATRICK HENRY, Speech in the Virginia Convention, 1765.

I first drew in New England's air, and from her hardy breast

Sucked in the tyrant-hating milk that will not let me rest;

And if my words seem treason to the dullard and the tame,

'Tis but my Bay-State dialect,—our fathers spake the same.

J. R. LOWELL, On the Capture of Fugitive Slaves near Washington. St. 7.

The labyrinths of treason.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Irony.

I think lightly of what is called treason against a government. That may be your duty today, or mine. But treason against the people, against mankind, against God, is a great sin not lightly to be spoken of.

THEODORE PARKER, Speech on the Mexican War, 1846.

¹ Treason is but trusted like the fox,
Who, ne'er so tame, so cherish'd and lock'd up,
Will have a wild trick of his ancestors.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 2, l. 9.

Treason and murder ever kept together,
As two yoke-devils sworn to either's purpose,
Working so grossly in a natural cause,
That admiration did not hoop at them.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 103.

By treason's tooth bare-gnawn and canker-bit.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 122.

² Some guard these traitors to the block of death,

Treason's true bed and yielder up of breath.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 122.

³ The purest spring is not so free from mud,
As I am clear from treason to my sovereign.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 101.

II—Treason: To Hate the Traitor but Love the Traitor

⁴ Princes in this case
Do hate the traitor, though they love the treason.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Tragedy of Cleopatra, iv, 1.
This principle is old, but true as fate,
Kings may love treason, but the traitor hate.

THOMAS DEKKER, I The Honest Whore, iv, 4.

⁵ Hate then the traitor, but yet love the treason.

DRYDEN AND LEE, Duke of Guise, Act iii, sc. 1.
Treason is loved of many, but the traitor is hated of all.

ROBERT GREENE, Pendosto.

⁶ For while the treason I detest,
The traitor still I love.

JOHN HOOLE, Metastasio, Act i, sc. 5.

Though I love the treason, I hate the traitor.

SAMUEL PERRY, Diary, 7 March, 1667.

⁷ He loved treachery but hated a traitor. (Οὐδὲν μὲν εὐφροσύνην, εὐφροσύνην δὲ μισῶν.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Romulus, Ch. 17, sec. 3. Of Caesar. See also under SIN.

Traitors are hated even by those whom they prefer.
(Proditores etiam his quos anteposunt invidi sunt.)

TACITUS, Annals, Bk. 1, sec. 38.

O sir! I love the fruit that treason brings,
But those that are the traitors, them I hate.

ROBERT GREENE, Silvius, l. 2122. (1594)

III—Treason: The Traitor

⁸ Is there not some chosen curse,
Some hidden thunder in the stores of Heav'n,
Red with uncommon wrath, to blast the man
Who owes his greatness to his country's ruin?

ASHMOLE, Cato, Act 1, sc. 1, l. 21.

Oh for a tongue to curse the slave
Whose treason, like a deadly blight,
Comes o'er the councils of the brave
And blasts them in their hour of might!
MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Fire-Worshippers.
Pt. II, l. 476.

⁹ A traitor to his country commits equal treason against mankind.

JOHN A. ANDREW, Address, Massachusetts Legislature, 3 Jan., 1862.

¹⁰ For pantisocracy he once had cried
Aloud, a scheme less moral than 't was clever;

Then grew a hearty anti-jacobin—
Had turn'd his coat—and would have turn'd his skin.

BYRON, The Vision of Judgment, St. 97. Referring to Robert Southey.

Just for a handful of silver he left us,

Just for a riband to stick in his coat.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Lost Leader. Referring to Wordsworth.

The nation looked upon him as a deserter, and he shrunk into insignificance and an Earldom.

LOREN CHESTERFIELD, Character of Pulleney.

¹¹ No wise man ever thought that a traitor should be trusted. (Nemo unquam sapiens proditori credendum putavit.)

CICERO, In Verrem, No. ii, ch. 1, sec. 15.

¹² The man who pauses on the paths of treason,
Halts on a quicksand; the first step engulfs him.

AARON HILL, Henry V. Act i, sc. 1.

¹³ The unsuccessful strugglers against tyranny have been the chief martyrs of treason laws in all countries.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings, Vol. viii, p. 332.

¹⁴ No religion binds men to be traitors.

BEN JONSON, Catiline, Act iii, sc. 2.

¹⁵ The traitor to Humanity is the traitor most accursed;

Man is more than Constitutions; better rot beneath the sod,

Than be true to Church and State while we are doubly false to God!

J. R. LOWELL, On the Capture of Certain Fugitive Slaves near Washington, St. 5.

Write on my gravestone: "Infidel, Traitor."—Infidel to every church that compromises with wrong; traitor to every government that oppresses the people.

WILFRED PHILLIPS.

¹⁶ He looked upon his people, and a tear was in his eye.

He looked upon the traitors, and his glance was stern and high.

MACAULAY, Jury.

1 Though those that are betray'd
Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor
Stands in worse case of woe.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act III, sc. 4, l. 87.

2 An arrant traitor as any is in the universal world, or in France, or in England!

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act IV, sc. 8, l. 10.

A subtle traitor needs no sophister.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act V, sc. 1, l. 191.

A kind of puppy To the old dam, treason.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act I, sc. 1, l. 175.

A giant traitor.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act I, sc. 2, l. 199.

3 Maugre thy strength, youth, place, and eminence,

Despite thy victor sword and fire-new fortune,

Thy valour and thy heart, thou art a traitor; . . .

And, from the extremest upward of thy head
To the descent and dust below thy foot,
A most toad-spotted traitor.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act V, sc. 3, l. 131.

Son: What is a traitor?

Lady Macduff: Why, one that swears and lies.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act IV, sc. 2, l. 46.

4 Live loathed and long,
Most smiling, smooth, detested parasites,
Courteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek
bears,

You fools of fortune, trencher-friends, time's flies.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act III, sc. 6,
l. 103.

5 It [traitor] does not mean in England what it does in France. In your language traitor means betrayer. . . . In our country it means simply one who is not wholly devoted to our English interests.

BERNARD SHAW, Saint Joan. Sc. 4.

6 Your sweet faces make good fellows fools
And traitors.

UNKNOWN. A French proverb.

III—Tree: Planting the Tree

5 What do we plant when we plant the tree?
We plant the ship that will cross the sea,
We plant the mast to carry the sails,
We plant the planks to withstand the gales—
The keel, the keelson, and beam and knee—
We plant the ship when we plant the tree.

HENRY ABBEY, What Do We Plant?

What do we plant when we plant the tree?
A thousand things that we daily see.
We plant the spire that out-towers the crag,
We plant the staff for our country's flag,
We plant the shade from the hot sun free;
We plant all these when we plant the tree.

HENRY ABBEY, What Do We Plant?

6 Come, let us plant the apple-tree.
Cleave the tough greensward with the spade;
Wide let its hollow bed be made;
There gently lay the roots, and there
Sift the dark mould with kindly care.

BRYANT, The Planting of the Apple-Tree.

What plant we in this apple-tree?
Birds, which the breath of summer days
Shall lengthen into leafy sprays;
Boughs where the thrush, with crimson breast,
Shall haunt, and sing, and hide her nest;
We plant, upon the sunny lea,
A shadow for the noontide hour,
A shelter from the summer shower,

When we plant the apple-tree.

BRYANT, The Planting of the Apple-Tree.

7 What does he plant who plants a tree?
He plants the friend of sun and sky;
He plants the flag of breezes free;
The shaft of beauty, towering high;
He plants a home to heaven anigh

For song and mother-croon of bird
In hushed and happy twilight heard—
The treble of heaven's harmony—
These things he plants who plants a tree.

H. C. BUNNER, The Heart of the Tree.

8 He who plants a tree Plants a hope.
Rootlets up through fibres blindly grope; . . .

So man's life must climb

From the clods of time

Unto heavens sublime.

Canst thou prophesy, thou little tree,
What the glory of thy boughs shall be?

LUCY LARCOM, Plant a Tree.

He who plants a tree, He plants love,
Tents of coolness spreading out above
Wayfarers he may not live to see.

Gifts that grow are best;

Hands that bless are blest;

Plant: Life does the rest!

Heaven and earth help him who plants a tree,
And his work its own reward shall be.

LUCY LARCOM, Plant a Tree.

9 He that planteth a tree is the servant of God,
He provideth a kindness for many generations,

And faces that he hath not seen shall bless
him.

HENRY VAN DYKE, The Friendly Trees.

IV—Tree: Its Fall

10 The tree will wither long before it fall.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 32.

Trees do not die of age: they only spread
Their branches still more proudly—and are dead.

MARION STROBEL, Trees.

11 O leave this barren spot to me!
Spare, woodman, spare the beechen tree.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Beech-Tree's Petition.

Woodman, spare that tree!
Touch not a single bough!

In youth it sheltered me,

And I'll protect it now.

GEORGE POPE MORRIS, The Oak. First printed in The New York Mirror, N. Y., 7 Jan., 1837.

12 In the place where the tree falleth, there it shall be.

Old Testament; Ecclesiastes, xi, 3.

Whosoever the tree falleth . . . there it shall rest.

HUGH LATIMER, Seven Sermons, 118.

When the tree is fallen all go with their hatchets.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

13 And garnished with trees that a man might cut down,
Instead of his own expenses.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Honeymoon.

1 Ancient trees falling while all was still
Before the storm, in the long interval
Between the gathering clouds and that light breeze
Which Germans call the Wind's bride.
C. G. LELAND, The Fall of the Trees.
2 The ax is laid unto the root of the trees.
New Testament: Matthew, iii, 10; Luke, iii, 9.
The tree falls not at the first stroke.
JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

V—Trees: Their Beauty

3 To-day I have grown taller from walking with the trees.

KARLE WILSON BAKER, Good Company.

4 I'll lie here and learn How, over their ground,
Trees make a long shadow And a light sound.
LOUISE BOGAN, Knowledge.

5 They say that trees were only practice work
When God made sure his hand
Before he passed to cows and men.
I cannot think that true,
Else there would surely sometimes be
An ugly tree.

AVIS D. CARLSON, Trees.

6 The very leaves live for love and in his season every happy tree experiences love's power. (Vivunt in Venerem frondes omnisque virissim Felix arbor amat.)

CLAUDIAN, De Nuptiis Honorii Augusti, l. 65.

7 No tree in all the grove but has its charms,
Though each its hue peculiar.

COWPER, The Task, Bk. i, l. 307.

8 I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree.

A tree whose hungry mouth is pressed
Against the earth's sweet flowing breast. . . .
Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree.

JOYCE KILMER, Trees.

I think that I shall never see
A billboard lovely as a tree,
Perhaps, unless the billboards fall,
I'll never see a tree at all.

OGDEN NASH, Song of the Open Road.

"Did you ever see a poem as lovely as this tree?"

ANDIE M. PROCTOR, Helping God to Make a Tree.

Any fool can destroy trees. . . . It took more than three thousand years to make some of the trees in these Western woods. . . . Through all the wonderful, eventful centuries since Christ's time —and long before that—God has cared for these trees, saved them from drought, disease, ava-lanches, and a thousand straining, leveling tempests and floods; but he cannot save them from fools,—only Uncle Sam can do that.

JOHN MUIR, The American Forests. (Atlantic Monthly, vol. lxxx, p. 157.)

9 And he spake of trees, from the cedar tree that is in Lebanon even unto the hyssop that springeth out of the wall.

Old Testament: 1 Kings, iv, 33.

10 Fair trees! where'er your barks I wound,
No name shall but your own be found.
ANDREW MARVELL, The Garden.

11 Cedar, and pine, and fir, and branching palm,
A sylvan scene, and as the ranks ascend
Shade above shade, a woody theatre
Of stateliest view.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 139.

12 A tree is a nobler object than a prince in his coronation robes.

ALEXANDER POPE, Table-Talk.

13 Under the greenwood tree
Who loves to lie with me,
And turn his merry note
Unto the sweet bird's throat,
Come hither, come hither, come hither:
Here shall he see No enemy
But winter and rough weather.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 1.

14 The trees were gazing up into the sky,
Their bare arms stretched in prayer for the snows.

ALEXANDER SMITH, A Life-Drama. Sc. 2.

15 Much can they praise the trees so straight and high,

The sailing pine, the cedar proud and tall,
The vine-prop elm, the poplar never dry,
The builder oak, sole king of forests all,
The aspen good for staves, the cypress
funeral,

The laurel, meed of mighty conquerors
And poets sage, the fir that weepst still,
The willow worn of forlorn paramours,
The yew obedient to the bender's will,
The birch for shafts, the willow for the mill,
The myrrh sweet-bleeding in the bitter wound,

The warlike beech, the ash for nothing ill,
The fruitful olive, and the platane round,
The carver holme, the maple seldom inward sound.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto i, st. 8.

16 Many a tree is found in the wood,
And every tree for its use is good;
Some for the strength of the gnarled root,
Some for the sweetness of flower or fruit.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Salute the Trees.

17 A brotherhood of venerable trees.

St. 8.Loveliest of trees, the cherry now
Is hung with bloom along the bough,
And stands about the woodland ride
Wearing white for Eastertide.A. E. HOUSMAN, A Shropshire Lad, p. 3.Sweet is the air with the budding haws, and the valley stretching for miles below Is white with blossoming cherry-trees, as if just covered with lightest snow.LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. iv.

My faith is all a doubtful thing,

Wove on a doubtful loom,

Until there comes each showery Spring

A cherry tree in bloom.

The gnash of northern winds

Is sweetest nutriment to him,

His best Norwegian wines.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. ii, No. 81.

O Reader! hast thou ever stood to see

The Holly Tree?

The eye that contemplates it well perceives

Its glossy leaves

Order'd by an intelligence so wise

As might confound the Atheist's sophistries.

SOUTHEY, The Holly Tree. St. 1.

The laurel-tree grew large and strong,

Its roots went searching deeply down;

It split the marble walls of Wrong,

And blossomed o'er the Despot's crown.

RICHARD HENGIST HORNE, The Laurel Seed.

The chestnut's proud, and the lilac's pretty,

The poplar's gentle and tall,

But the plane tree's kind to the poor dull city—

I love him best of all!

EDITH NESBIT, Child's Song in Spring.

God wrote his loveliest poem on the day

He made the first tall silver poplar tree.

GRACE NOLL CROWELL, Silver Poplars.

How gently rock yon poplars high

Against the reach of primrose sky

With heaven's pale candles stored.

¹⁸ Oh, the little more, and how much it is!
And the little less, and what worlds away!
ROBERT BROWNING, By the Fireside.

¹⁹ We find great things are made of little things,
And little things go lessening, till at last
Comes God behind them.

ROBERT BROWNING, Mr. Sludge "The Medium," l. 1141.

Say not "a small event"! Why "small"?
Costs it more pain than this, ye call
A "great event" should come to pass
From that?

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes: Introduction.

²⁰ Little drops of water, Little grains of sand,
Make the mighty ocean And the pleasant land.

So the little moments, Humble tho' they be,
Make the mighty ages Of Eternity!

So our little errors Lead the soul away
From the paths of virtue, Far in sin to stray.
Little deeds of kindness, Little words of love,
Help to make earth happy Like the Heaven above!

JULIA FLETCHER CARNY, Little Things. This poem has been erroneously attributed to Ebenezer Cobham Brewer, Daniel Clement Colerworthy, Charles Mackay, and Mrs. Frances S. Osgood. It was written by Mrs. Carny in 1845.

Little drops of water poured into the milk, give the milkman's daughter lovely gowns of silk.
Little grains of sugar mingled with the sand, make the grocer's assets swell to beat the band.

TROUBLE

I—Trouble: Apothegms

17 Pack up your troubles in your old kit-bag,
And smile, smile, smile.

GEORGE ASAUF, Title and refrain of song written in 1913, and popular with the British soldiers during World War I.

Build for yourself a strong-box,
Fashion each part with care;
Fit it with hump and padlock;
Put all your troubles there.

Hide therein all your failures,
And each bitter cup you quaff,
Lock all your heartaches within it,
Then sit on the lid and laugh.

IV—Trust: The Trusts

- 17 Trust.
SAMUEL C. T. DOSSO introduced this word, as referring to a combination of capital, into the language in 1882, while acting as attorney for John D. Rockefeller.
This is the original trust.
UNKNOWN, Report of Committee, N. Y. State
Senate, after investigation of the Standard Oil Company, in 1888.
We declare our opposition to all combinations of capital, organized as trusts or otherwise.
Republican Platform, 1896.

The interests of the people are betrayed when Trusts and combinations are permitted to exist.
Democratic Platform, 1888.

Earnest attention should be given to those combinations of capital commonly called Trusts.

AMOS BRONSON ALCOTT, Concord Days: June.

¹¹ Truth is the secret of eloquence and of virtue, the basis of moral authority; it is the highest summit of art and life.

AMIEL, Journal, 17 Dec., 1854.

¹² Another poet, whose name I have forgotten, called Truth the daughter of Time. (Veritatem Temporis filiam.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. xii, ch. 11.

'Tis not antiquity, nor author, That makes truth Truth, altho' Time's daughter.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 3, l. 653.

¹³ Truth is within ourselves: it takes no rise From outward things, whate'er you may believe.

There is an inmost centre in us all, Where truth abides in fulness.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. i.

¹⁴ Truth makes on the ocean of nature no one track of light—every eye looking on finds its own.

BULWER-LYTTON, Caxtoniana. Essay xiv.

¹⁵ Truth is the shattered mirror strown In myriad bits; while each believes his little bit the whole to own.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, Kaddah. Pt. vi, st. 1.

¹⁶ Truth in person doth appear Like words congeal'd in northern air.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 1, l. 147.

¹⁷ Truth ever lovely—since the world began The foe of tyrants, and the friend of man.

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 347.

¹⁸ Truth is the highest thing that man may keep. CHAUCER, The Frenchelays Tale, l. 751.

Truth is man's proper good, and the only immortal thing was given to our mortality to use.

BEX JONSON, Explorata: Veritas Proprium Rominis.

1 Truth is the object of philosophy, but not always of philosophers.

CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms, 102.

2 Truth is truest poetry.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Dauides. Bk. i. l. 41.

It's deadly commonplace, but, after all, the commonplaces are the great poetic truths.

R. L. STEVENSON, Weir of Hermiston.

3 "It is," says Chadband, "the ray of rays, the sun of suns, the moon of moons, the star of stars. It is the light of Terewth."

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 25.

4 Truth is the summit of being; justice is the application of it to affairs.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Character.

Truth, whose centre is everywhere and its circumference nowhere, whose existence we cannot disimagine; the soundness and health of things, against which no blow can be struck but it recoils on the striker.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

5 Truth, sir, is a profound sea, and few there be who dare wade deep enough to find out the bottom on't.

FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act v, sc. 1.

6 Truth is for other worlds, and hope for this; The cheating future lends the present's bliss.

O. W. HOLMES, The Old Player.

Veracity is a plant of paradise, and the seeds have never flourished beyond the walls.

GEORGE ELIOT, Romola.

7 History warns us that it is the customary fate of new truths to begin as heresies and to end as superstitions.

THOMAS HENRY HUXLEY, Science and Culture: Origin of Species.

All great truths begin as blasphemies.

BERNARD SHAW, Annajanska.

What everybody echoes . . . as true today, may turn out to be falsehood tomorrow, mere smoke of opinion.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

8 Veracity is the heart of morality.

T. H. HUXLEY, Universities Actual and Ideal.

9 Truth, sir, is a cow, which will yield skeptics no more milk; so they have gone to milk the bull.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (BOSWELL, Life.)

10 Teach it to the simple, the learned know it well;

Truth is treasure, the best tried on earth.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Pt. II.

When all treasures are tried, Truth is the best. . . .

For he who is True with his tongue, True with his hands

Working True works therewith, and wishing ill to none,

He is a god, the gospel says, in earth and heaven.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Pt. II.

11 Truth is the strong compost in which beauty may sometimes germinate.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Inward Ho.

Truth is not a diet But a condiment.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Veritas vos Damnabit.

PLATO. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Plato. Sec. 40.)

13 Truth is a jewel which should not be painted over; but it may be set to advantage and shown in a good light.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Life of Reason, iv, 105.

14 Truth is eternal, and the son of heaven.

SWIFT, Ode: Dr. Wm. Sancroft.

15 Truth is that which a man trotheth.

JOHN HORNE TOORE, Diversions of Purley.

16 There are truths which are not for all men, nor for all times.

VOLTAIRE, Letter to Cardinal de Bernis, 23 April, 1764.

Truths are fruits which should only be plucked when quite ripe.

VOLTAIRE, Letter to the Countess de Barcewicz, 24 Dec., 1761.

17 Pure truth hath no man seen nor e'er shall know. (Καὶ τὸ μὲν ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἰδέναι οὐδέ τις ἔσται εἰδώς.)

XENOPHANES, Fragments. No. 34.

Pure truth cannot be assimilated by the crowd; it must be communicated by contagion.

AMIEL, Journal, 26 Oct., 1875.

If God should hold enclosed in his right hand all truth, and in his left hand only the ever-active impulse after truth, although with the condition that I must always and forever err, I would with humility turn to his left hand and say, "Father, give me this: pure truth is for thee alone."

LESSING, Anti-Göthe.

No human being is constituted to know the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; and even the best of men must be content with fragments, with partial glimpses, never the full fruition.

WILLIAM OLLER, The Student Life.

HENRY GEORGE, The Land Question. Ch. 3.

11 Truth like a torch, the more 'tis shook, it shines.

SIR WILLIAM HAMILTON, Discussions on Philosophy: Title Page.

When by night the frogs are croaking, kindle but a torch's fire;

Ha! how soon they all are silent! Thus Truth silences the liar.

FRIEDRICH VON LOGAU, Truth. (Longfellow, tr.)

12 Truth, when witty, is the wittiest of all things.

J. C. AND A. W. HARR, Guesses at Truth.

The wall of true wit is truth itself.

GEORGE MEYERHOF, Diana of the Crossways. Ch. 1.

13 In fact, there's nothing that keeps its youth, So far as I know, but a tree and truth.

O. W. HOLMES, The Doctor's Masterpiece.

14 Truth is tough. It will not break, like a bubble, at a touch; nay, you may kick it about all day, like a foot-ball, and it will be round and full at evening.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. v.

You know what that witty and eloquent old Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes once said. He said, "You needn't fear to handle the truth roughly; she is no invalid." The truth is the most robust and indestructible and formidable thing in the world.

Proem, St. 2.

IV—Truth Lies at the Bottom of a Well

²³ Of truth we know nothing, for truth is in a well. (Ἐν πύρρῳ δὲ οὐδὲν ἴδμεν ἐν πυρρῷ γὰρ ἡ ἀλήθεια.)

DEMOCRITUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pyrrho. Bk. ix, sec. 72.)

Nature has buried truth at the bottom of the sea.
DEMOCRITUS. (CICERO, Academicarum Quaestionum, Bk. ii, sec. 10.)

Democritus quasi in puteo quodam sic alia, ut fundus sit nullus, veritatem jacere demersam.

LACTANTIUS, Institutes, iii, 28.

We are born to inquire after truth; it belongs to a greater power to possess it. It is not, as Democritus said, hid in the bottom of the deeps, but rather elevated to an infinite height in the divine knowledge.

MONTAIGNE, Essays, Bk. iii, ch. 8.

Let us seek the solution of these doubts at the bottom of the inexhaustible well, where Heraclitus says that truth is hidden.

KADEIAIS, Works, Bk. i, ch. 18.

Truth, which wise men say, doth lie in a well.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Pseudodoxia Epid., i, 5.

It is an old saying that Truth lies in a well, but the misfortune is, that some men will use no chain to draw her up.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon, Vol. i, No. 250.

Truth keeps the bottom of her well.

JACQUES MILLEK, Song of the South, Sec. iii, pt. 2.

Truth is always at the bottom of a grave.

JAMES HUNTER, Ironclasts, p. 63.

Truth lies wrapped up and hidden in the depths. (Involuta veritas in alto latet.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis, Bk. vii, sec. 1.

Truth, they say, lies in a well,

Why, I vow, I ne'er could see;

Let the water-drinkers tell,

There it always lay for me.

SHERIDAN, The Duenna, Act iii, sc. 1.

Whilst the unlearned . . . were all busied in getting down to the bottom of the well, where Truth keeps her little court.

STELKE, Tristram Shandy, Bk. iv, pt. 1.

The sages say, Dame Truth delights to dwell (Strange Mansion!) in the bottom of a well: Questions are then the Windlass and the Rope That pull the grave old Gentlewoman up.

JOHN WOLCOT, Birthday Ode.

We never see the stars

Till we can see naught but them. So with truth. And yet if one would look down a deep well, Even at noon, we might see those same stars.

F. J. BAILEY, Festus: Water and Wood.

Truth, after all, wears a different face to everybody, and it would be too tedious to wait till all were agreed. She is said to lie at the bottom of a well, for the very reason, perhaps, that whoever looks down in search of her sees his own image at the bottom, and is persuaded not only that he has seen the Goddess, but that she is far better-looking than he had imagined.

J. R. LOWELL, Democracy.

V—Truth Is Mighty and Will Prevail

Great is truth, and it prevaieth. (Magna est veritas, et prævalet.)

Biblia Sacra Vulgate Editionis: III Esdras, iv, 41.

The Vulgate is the Latin version of the Bible completed by Saint Jerome in 405, of which the Gutenberg (or Mazarin) Bible (1456) was the first printed edition, as it was also the first important book printed from movable type. The Clementine text, a reconson made by order of Pope Clement VIII, and completed in 1605, is the authorized text of the Roman Catholic Church, of which the Douai version, completed in 1609, is the authorized English text. All of these include the books which were placed in the Apocrypha by the editors of the "Authorized" or Protestant version in 1611. Among them was III Esdras, which, in the Apocrypha, is I Esdras. Popular usage has substituted the future, prævalet, "will prevail," for the present, prævalet, as given in the Vulgate version, but it is without authority. However, the quotation is almost always given, "Truth is mighty and will prevail."

Great is Truth, and mighty above all things.

Apocrypha: I Esdras, iv, 41. (1611)

Truth, by its own sinews, will prevail.

DRYDEN, Religio Laici, l. 340.

Truth in the end shall prevail.

ULPIAN FULWELL, Arts Adducendi, E. 4. (c. 1580)

And fierce though the fiends may fight, and long though the angels hide,

I know that truth and right have the universe on their side.

WASHINGTON GLADEN, Ultima Veritas.

The truth is great, and shall prevail,

When none cares whether it prevail or not.

COVENTRY PATMORI, Magna Est Veritas

Truth will ultimately prevail where there is pains taken to bring it to light.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Maxims.

VI—Truth Shall Make You Free

Where Truth deigns to come,

Her sister Liberty will not be far

MARK AKENSIDE, Pleasures of the Imagination, Bk. i, l. 23

He is the freeman whom the truth makes free,

And all are slaves beside.

COWPER, The Task, Bk. v, l. 733.

Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.

New Testament: John, viii, 32.

Truth and, by consequence, liberty, will always be the chief power of honest men.

MADAME DE STAEL, Letter to General Morcau.

If the truth shall have made thee free, thou shalt not care for the vain words of men.

A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi, Bk. iii, ch. 4.

VII—Truth: Its Power

What governs men is the fear of truth.

AMIEL, Journal, 1 March, 1869.

Truth is the strong thing. Let man's life be true!

ROBERT BROWNING, In a Balcony, l. 233.

Truth tramples on the lie as oil on water.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote, Pt. ii, ch. 10.

Truth and oil are even above.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

1 Great is the power of truth. (A magna vis veritas.)

CICERO, Pro Caelio Rufo, Sec. 26.

I am conquered by truth. (Vincer veris.)

ERASMUS, Dulciphia.

Truth, Love, and Life are a law of annihilation to everything unlike themselves, because they declare nothing but God.

MARY BAKER EDDY, Science and Health, p. 243.

2 Above all things truth beareth away the victory.

Apocrypha: 1 Esdras, iii, 12.

As for the truth, it endureth, and is always strong; it liveth and conquereth for evermore.

Apocrypha: 1 Esdras, iv, 38.

3 It is right to yield to the truth. (Licet concedere veris.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 305.

4 You show that truth can ne'er decay,
Whatever fate befalls:

I, that the myrtle and the bay

Shoot fresh on ruined walls.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, In After Time.

5 No power can die that ever wrought for Truth;

Thereby a law of Nature it became,
And lives unwithered in its blithesome youth,
When he who called it forth is but a name.

J. R. LOWELL, Elegy on the Death of Dr. Channing. Inscribed beneath Lowell's bust in the Hall of Fame.

Get but the truth once uttered, and 't is like
A star new-born, that drops into its place,
And which, once chiding in its placid round,
Not all the tumult of the earth can shake.

J. R. LOWELL, A Glance Behind the Curtain, l. 173.

Put golden padlocks on Truth's lips, be callous
as ye will,

From soul to soul, o'er all the world, leaps one electric thrill.

J. R. LOWELL, On the Capture of Certain Fugitive Slaves Near Washington.

6 Methinks the truth should live from age to age,
As 'twere retail'd to all posterity,
Even to the general all-ending day.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 76.

7 The truth is always the strongest argument.

SOPHOCLES, Phædra. Frag. 737.

VIII—Truth: Love of Truth

8 Though both [Plato and truth] are dear to me, it is a sacred duty to put truth first.

(Ἀμφότεν γὰρ ἔστιν φίλον ὅσον προτιμᾷ τὴν ἀλήθειαν.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. i, ch. 6, sec. 1.

Plato is dear to me, but dearer still is truth.
(Amicus Plato, sed magis amica veritas.)

ARISTOTLE. (CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 51.)

Socrates is dear to me, but dearer still is truth.

ARISTOTLE (AMMONIUS, Aristotelis Vha, 399.)

If you will take my advice, you will think little of Socrates, and a great deal more of truth.

SOCRATES. (PLATO, Phædo. Sec. 40.)

9 Arm thyself for the truth!

BUTLER-LYNCH, The Lady of Lyons. Act v, sc. 1.

Wherever the truth is injured, defend it.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. iii, p. 269.

Stake life upon the truth. (Vitam impendere vero.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 91. The motto of Rousseau.

10 Truth! though the Heavens crush me for following her.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 7.

11 Remember, then, as long as you live, that nothing but strict truth can carry you through the world, with either your conscience or your honour unwounded.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 21 Sept., 1747.

12 For truth has such a face and such a mien
As to be lov'd needs only to be seen.

DRYDEN, The Hind and Panther. Pt. i, l. 33.

13 He that feeds men serveth few;

He serves all who dares be true.

EMERSON, The Celestial Love.

14 Nothing shall warp me from the belief that every man is a lover of truth.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

15 In proportion as we perceive and embrace the truth do we become just, heroic, magnanimous, divine.

WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON, Free Speech and Free Inquiry.

16 The contemplation of truth and beauty is the proper object for which we were created, which calls forth the most intense desires of the soul, and of which it never tires.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Criticisms on Art. Vol. i, p. 2.

To love truth for truth's sake is the principal part of human perfection in this world, and the seed-plot of all other virtues.

JOHN LOCKE, Letter to Anthony Collins, Esq., 29 Oct., 1703.

17 I do not fear to follow out the truth,
Albeit along the precipice's edge.

J. R. LOWELL, A Glance behind the Curtain, l. 251.

They must upward still, and onward, who would keep abreast of Truth.

J. R. LOWELL, The Present Crisis, l. 87.

Servant of God, well done! well hast thou fought

The better fight, who single hast maintain'd
Against revolted multitudes the cause
Of truth.

When truth or virtue an affront endures,
Th' affront is mine, my friend, and should be yours.

POPE, Epilogue to Satires. Dial. i, l. 199.

Farewell then, verse, and love, and ev'ry toy,
The rhymes and rattles of the man or boy;
What right, what true, what fit, we justly call,
Let this be all my care—for this is all.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles, Bk. i, epls. 1, l. 17.

And in the light of truth thy Bondman let me live!

WORDSWORTH, Ode to Duty, l. 56.

Who tells me true, though in his tale lie
death,

I hear him as he flatter'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, Act i, sc. 2, l. 102.

All fear of the world or consequence is swallowed up in a manly anxiety to do Truth justice.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 13 Feb., 1838.

Truth before peace. That is my watchword.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, Essays and Soliloquies, p. 138.

It is one thing to wish to have truth on our side, and another to wish sincerely to be on the side of truth.

RICHARD WEAVER, On the Love of Truth.

It is a dangerous grieving of the Spirit when,
instead of drawing ourselves to the Spirit, we labour to draw the Spirit to us.

RICHARD STARR, Fountain Sealed. (c. 1630)

Or shall we say

That, like the Red-cross Knight, they urge their way,

To lead in memorable triumph home

Truth, their immortal Una?

Time is precious, but truth is more precious than time.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, Aylesbury, 11
Sept., 1865.

Truth shall restore the light by Nature given,
And, like Prometheus, bring the fire of Heaven! . . .

What! are thy triumphs, sacred Truth, belied?

Why then hath Plato lived—or Sidney died?

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 415.

Individuals may perish; but truth is eternal.

JOSEPH GERRARD, Speech, when under arrest,
Jan., 1794.

But there are seven sisters ever serving Truth,

Porters of the Posterns; one called Abstinence,

Humility, Charity, Chastity be the chief maidens there;

Patience and Peace help many a one;

Lady Almsgiving lets in full many.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Pt. viii.

There is no veil like light—no adamantine
armour against hurt like the truth.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Marquis of Lossie. Ch. 71.

Truth, a constant mistress, that Ever protects her servants.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence, Act iii, sc. 1.

In the mountains of truth, you never climb in vain.

NETZSCHE, Human All too Human, i, 358.

Truth never yet fell dead in the streets; it has such affinity with the soul of man, the seed however broadcast will catch somewhere and produce its hundredfold.

THEODORE PARKER, A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.

¹ If I had a device, it would be the True, the True only, leaving the Beautiful and the Good to settle matters afterwards as best they could.

SARATY-BRUVK, Letter to Duruy, 9 Dec., 1865.

² Truth hath a quiet breast.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 3, l. 96.

Truth needs no colour, with his colour fix'd;
Beauty no pencil, beauty's truth to lay;
But best is best, if never intermix'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. ci.

X—Truth: Its Dangers

³ Truth is often attended with danger. (Pecula veritati saepe contigua.)

AMMIANUS MARCELLINUS, History. Bk. xxvi, sec. 1.

⁴ Truth breeds hatred. (Veritas odium parit.)

BIAS. (AUSONIUS [?], Ludus Septem Sapientum. Sec. 8, l. 3.) Quoted by Terence, Andria, l. 68.

Truth is a narrow lane all full of quags,
Leading to broken heads, abuse, and rags.

JOHN WOLCOT, Moss Lyric Odes. No. 9.

⁵ The artlessness of unadorned truth, however sure in theory of extorting admiration, rarely in practice fails inflicting pain and mortification.

FANNY BURNBY, Comilla. Bk. iv, ch. 8.

⁶ I never saw any good that came of telling truth.

DRYDEN, Amphitryon. Act. iii, sc. 1.

⁷ God offers to every mind its choice between truth and repose. Take which you please,—you can never have both.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Intellect.

Truth stood on one side and Ease on the other; it has often been so.

THEODORE PARKER, A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.

⁸ Follow not truth too near the heels, lest it dash out thy teeth.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

⁹ Nobody has a right to put another under such a difficulty, that he must either hurt the person by telling the truth, or hurt himself by telling what is not true.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1778.)

Every man has a right to utter what he thinks truth, and every man has a right to knock him down for it.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life.)

¹⁰ Now comes the pain of truth, to whom 't is pain;

O folly! for to bear all naked truths,

And to envisage circumstance, all calm,
That is the top of sovereignty.

KEATS, Hyperion. Bk. ii, l. 202.

¹¹ Not a truth has to art or to science been given,

But brows have ached for it, and souls toil'd and striven;

And many have striven, and many have fail'd,

And many died, slain by the truth they assail'd.

OWEN MERRITT, Lucile. Pt. ii, canto 6, st. 1.
The smallest atom of truth represents some man's bitter toll and agony; for every ponderable chunk of it there is a brave truth-seeker's grave upon some lonely ash-dump and a soul roasting in hell.

H. L. MENCEN, Prejudices. Ser. iii, p. 274.

¹² Truth . . . never comes into the world but like a bastard, to the ignominy of him that brought her forth.

JOHN MILTON, Works. Vol. i, p. 276.

Still rule those minds on earth

At whom sage Milton's wormwood words were hurled:

*Truth like a bastard comes into the world
Never without ill-fame to him who gives her birth.*

THOMAS HARDY, Lausanne: In Gibbon's Old Garden.

¹³ Hard are the ways of truth, and rough to walk.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. i, l. 478.

¹⁴ And oftentimes, to win us to our harm,
The instruments of darkness tell us truths,
Win us with honest trifles, to betray 's
In deepest consequence.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 123.

¹⁵ I am very fond of truth, but not at all of martyrdom.

VOLTAIRE, Letter to d'Alembert, Feb., 1776.

XI—Truth: The Search for Truth

¹⁶ And much they grope for Truth, but never hit,

Yet deem they darkness light and their vain blunders wit.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, st. 51.

¹⁷ It is the modest, not the presumptuous, inquirer who makes a real and safe progress in the discovery of divine truths.

VISCOUNT BOLINGBROKE, Letter to Mr. Pope.

¹⁸ I promised, if you'd watch a dinner out,
We'd see truth dawn together?—truth that peeps

Over the glasses' edge when dinner's done,
And body gets its sop and holds its nose

And leaves soul free a little.

ROSSBY BROWNING, Fra Lippo Lippi.

1 Every man seeks for truth, but God only knows who has found it.

LONGFELLOW, Letters, 21 Sept., 1747.

And differing judgments serve but to declare,
That Truth lies somewhere, if we knew but where.

COWPER, Hope, l. 423.

Who dares

To say that he alone has found the truth?

LONGFELLOW, John Endicott. Act II, sc. 3.

2 The search after truth, and its eager pursuit, are peculiar to man. (Hominis est propria veri inquisitio atque investigatio.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. I, ch. 4, sec. 13.

Nature has planted in our minds an insatiable longing to see truth. (Natura inest in mentibus nostris insatiabilis quædam cupiditas veri videndi.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. I, ch. 19, sec. 44.

3 Truths that the learn'd pursue with eager thought

Are not important always as dear-bought.

COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 73.

4 One truth discovered is immortal, and entitles its author to be so: for, like a new substance in nature, it cannot be destroyed.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, The Spirit of the Age:
Jeremy Bentham.

The man who finds a truth lights a torch.

R. G. INCESSOLL, The Truth.

5 Truth and seemliness are my study and pursuit, and to that am I wholly given. (Quid verum atque decens curo et rogo et omnis in hoc sum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. I, epis. 1, l. 11.

To seek for truth in the groves of Academe.
(Inter silvas Academi querere verum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. II, epis. 2, l. 45.

6 Pilate saith unto him, What is truth? And when he had said this, he went out again unto the Jews.

New Testament: John, xviii, 38.

Pilate asked, Quid est veritas? And then some other matter took him in the head, and so up he rose and went his way before he had his answer.

LANCLOT ANDREWS, BISHOP OF WINCHESTER,
Sermons: Of the Resurrection. (1613)

What is truth? said jesting Pilate; and would not stay for an answer.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Truth.

But what is truth? 'twas Pilate's question, put
To Truth itself, that deign'd him no reply.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. III, l. 270.

7 There are great truths that pitch their shining tents

Outside our walls, and though but dimly seen
In the gray dawn, they will be manifest
When the light widens into perfect day.

LONGFELLOW, Michael Angelo: Pt. IV, In the Coliseum.

8 I seek the truth, whereby no man was ever harmed. (Ζητῶ γὰρ τὴν ἀλήθειαν, ὅφ' ἔστι οὐδὲς ἡνῶκεν ἐπὶ αὐτῇ.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. VI, sec. 21.

9 Man with his burning soul

Has but an hour of breath

To build a ship of Truth

In which his soul may sail,

Sail on the sea of death;

For death takes toll

Of beauty, courage, youth,

Of all but Truth.

JOHN MASSEFIELD, Truth. St. 1.

10 O sir, the truth, the truth! is 't in the skies,
Or in the grass, or in this heart of ours?

But O the truth, the truth! the many eyes

That look on it! the diverse things they see,

According to their thirst for fruit or flowers!

Pass on: it is the truth seek we.

GEORGE MEREDITH, A Ballad of Fair Ladies in Revolt. St. 16.

Truths which transcend the searching school-men's vein

And half had staggered that stout Stagirate.

CHARLES LAMB, Written at Cambridge. Stagirate, i.e. Aristotle, born at Stagira.

11 Truths would you teach, or save a sinking land?

All fear, none aid you, and few understand.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. IV, l. 265.

12 While we are examining into everything, we sometimes find truth where we least expect it. (Dum omnia querimus, aliquando ad verum, ubi minime expectavimus, pervenimus.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoris. Bk. XII, ch. 8, sec. 3.

13 As painfully to pore upon a book,

To seek the light of truth; while truth the while

Doth falsely blind the eyesight of his look.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act I, sc. I, l. 74.

But wonder on, till truth make all things plain.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act V, sc. I, l. 129.

14 The golden guess

Is morning-star to the full round of truth.

TEMPERSON, Columbus, l. 42.

¹ Who seeks for truth should be of no country.
VOLTAIRE, Réponse, à un Académicien.

XII—Truth: Truth-telling

² Simple are the words of truth. ('Απλὰ γὰρ ἐστὶ τῆς ἀληθείας ἔργον.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Ælon Krosis. Frag. 92.

The language of truth is unadorned and always simple. ('Απλοῦς δὲ μῦθος τῆς ἀληθείας ἔστιν.)

EURIPIDES, Phænissæ, l. 469. Quoted by Seneca (Epistula ad Lucilium, xlix, 4): Veritatis simplex oratio est.

The words of truth are always paradoxical.

LAO-TSE, The Simple Way. No. 78.

The language of truth is unadorned and always simple. (Veritatis absolutus sermo ac semper est simplex.)

AMMIANUS MARCELLINUS, History. Bk. xiv, 10.

³ Truth can never be told so as to be understood, and not be believ'd.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

⁴ Think truly, and thy thoughts
Shall the world's famine feed.
Speak truly, and each word of thine
Shall be a fruitful seed.

Live truly, and thy life shall be
A great and noble creed.

HORATIUS BONAR, Be True.

⁵ Truth never hurts the teller.

ROBERT BROWNING, Fine at the Fair. Sec. 32.

⁶ For fools and mad men tell commonly truth.
ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. 3, mem. 8.

Wilt thou be my fool? for fools, they say, will tell truth.

PHILIP MASSINGER, Very Woman. Act iii, sc. 1.

Children and fools speak true.

JOHN LYLY, Endymion, iv, 2.

Fools and babes tell true.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, More Knaves Yet, 36.

⁷ The fewer the voices on the side of truth, the more distinct and strong must be your own.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, Charge on Ordination of Rev. J. S. Dwight.

Then to side with Truth is noble when we share her wretched crust,

Ere her cause bring fame and profit, and 't is prosperous to be just;

Then it is the brave man chooses, while the coward stands aside,

Doubting in his abject spirit, till his Lord is crucified.

J. R. LOWELL, The Present Crisis. St. 11.

⁸ No man speaks the truth or lives a true life two minutes together.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. iii, p. 455.

When what should be the greatest truths flit out into shallow truisms, then we are all sick.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. iv, p. 30.

⁹ Wherefore putting away lying, speak every man truth with his neighbour.

New Testament: Ephesians, iv, 25.

The highest compact we can make with our fellow is,—Let there be truth between us two forevermore.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.

¹⁰ Her taste exact For faultless fact
Amounts to a disease.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act ii.

¹¹ "Did I say so?" replied he, coolly; "to be sure, if I said so, it was so."

GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. No. 54.

¹² An honest man speaks the truth, though it may give offence; a vain man, in order that it may.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 387.

¹³ What forbids one to speak truth laughingly? (Quamquam ridentem dicere verum Quid vetat?)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1, l. 24.

My way of joking is to tell the truth. It's the funniest joke in the world.

BERNARD SHAW, John Bull's Other Island. Act ii.

¹⁴ You have no business with consequences; you are to tell the truth.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1784.)

¹⁵ Say the truth and shame the devil.

HUGH LATIMER, Sermons, p. 506. (1552)

I will tell truth, and shame the fiend.

BEN JONSON, The Devil Is an Ass. Act v, sc. 5.

Speak the truth and shame the Devil.

RAUELAYS, Works: Bk. v, Author's Prologue.

O, while you live, tell truth and shame the devil!

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 62.

See also l. 59 of the same scene.

What, can the devil speak true?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 107.

¹⁶ 'Tis always best to tell the truth. ('Αντὶ κρείττονός ἐστιν τὴν ἀλήθειαν λέγειν.)

MENANDER, Upobolimaia. Frag. 487.

The truth is ever best. ('Ὅρθῳ ἀληθεὶ δόξ.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 1195.

It is always the best policy to speak the truth, unless of course you are an exceptionally good liar.

JEROME K. JEROME, The Idler, Feb., 1892.

HONESTY THE BEST POLICY, see under HONESTY.

¹⁷ When affection only speaks,

Truth is not always there.

MIDDLETON AND MASSINGER, The Old Law. Act iv, sc. 2.

1 You shall hear from me nothing but the truth.
(ἡ ἀλήθεια ὑμῶν ἀποφάνηται.)

PLATO, Apologia of Socrates. Sec. 1.

I have learned to tell the truth. (Vera didici dicere.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 585. (Act I, sc. 2.)

Speak no more than the truth, utter no less.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 329. (1580)

Let us see . . . how far he saith truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

PETER HEVLIN, Animadversions. (1659)

I speak truth, not so much as I would, but as much as I dare; and I dare a little the more as I grow older.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2.

Speaking truth is like writing fair, and only comes by practice.

RUSKIN, Seven Lamps of Architecture, li, 1.

2 Twirling my wit as it were my mustache,
The while I pass among the crowd, I make
Bold truths ring out like spurs.

EDMOND ROSTAND, Cyrano de Bergerac. Act I, sc. 4.

3 O, never say hereafter
But I am truest speaker.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 5, l. 375.

We will answer all things faithfully.

SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice, v, l. 299.

4 Truth-teller was our England's Alfred named.
TENNYSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington, l. 188.

5 It takes two to speak truth—one to speak and another to hear.

THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Wednesday.

6 A faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance.

New Testament: I Timothy, i, 15.

7 There was things which he stretched, but mainly he told the truth.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 1.

8 When in doubt, tell the truth.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

Tell the truth or trump—but get the trick.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

XIII—Truth: Not Always to Be Told

9 All things to all men only fools will tell,
Truth profits none but those that use it well.

J. S. BLACKIE, The Wise Men of Greece: Pythagoras.

10 'Tis real humanity and kindness to hide strong truths from tender eyes.

LOUIS SHARTNBURY, Characteristics. Vol. I, 63.

So, minds at first must be spoon-fed with truth
ROBERT BROWNING, A Death in the Desert.

11 That truth should be silent I had almost forgot
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, ii, 2, 110

Truth's a dog must to kennel; he must be whipped out, when Lady the brach may stand by the fire and stink.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 124.

12 Truth telling is not compatible with the defence of the realm.

BERNARD SHAW, Heartbreak House: Preface.

13 All soothes be not to say.

THOMAS USK, Testament of Love. (c. 1387)

All truths are not to be told.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

For truth itself has not the privilege to be spoken at all times and in all sorts.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13.

XIV—Truth and Falsehood

See also Error and Truth

14 Use not to lie, for that is dishonest; speak not every truth, for that is unbecomful; yes, in time and place, a harmless lie is a great deal better than a hurtful truth.

ROGER ASCHAM, Letter to Mr. Howe. (1550)

'T is not enough your counsel still be true:

Blunt truths more mischief than nice falsehoods do.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 13.

A truth that's told with bad intent
Beats all the lies you can invent.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Auricles of Innocence.

15 Truth may perhaps come to the price of a pearl, that sheweth best by day; but it will not rise to the price of a diamond, or carbuncle, that sheweth best in varied lights. A mixture of a lie doth ever add pleasure.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Truth.

16 Be so true to thyself, as thou be not false to others.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Wisdom for a Man's Self. (1597)

To thine own self be true,
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act I, sc. 3, l. 78. (1600)

The first great work, task perform'd by few,
Is, that yourself may to yourself be true.

WINTWORTH DILLON, An Essay on Translated Verse, l. 71.

17 Sow truth, if thou the truth wouldst reap:
Who sows the false shall reap the vain.

HORATIUS BONAR, He Liveth Long Who Liveth Well.

¹ There is truth in falsehood, falsehood in truth.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Soul's Tragedy. Act II.
What does the world, told truth, but lie the more?

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book. Pt. x, l. 673.

² And, after all, what is a lie? 'Tis but
The truth in masquerade.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xi, st. 37.

Truth is only falsehood well disguised.

FARQUHAR, The Constant Couple. Act III, sc. 4.

³ The truth is bitter and disagreeable to fools;
but falsehood is sweet and acceptable. (Τὸ μὲν ἀληθὲς πικρὸν ἐστὶ καὶ ἀγάθαι τοῖς ἀνόητοις· τὸ δὲ ψεῦδος γλυκὺ καὶ προσήγαι.)

ST. CHRYSOSTOM, Adagia.

⁴ Falsehood is so near to truth that a wise man would do well not to trust himself on the narrow edge. (Ita enim finitima sunt falsa veris ut in præcipitem locum non debeat se sapiens committere.)

CICERO, Academicarum Questionum. Bk. II,
sec. 21.

He who has once deviated from the truth, usually commits perjury with as little scruple as he would tell a lie.

CICERO, Pro Quinto Roscio Comodo. Sec. 20.

⁵ Ever to that truth,
Which but the semblance of a falsehood
wears,

A man, if possible, should bar his lip.
(Sempre a quel ver ch' ha faccia di menzogna De' l' uom chiudere le labbra.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto XVI, l. 124.

⁶ For how can that be false, which every tongue

Of every mortal man affirms for true?

ST. JOHN DAVIES, Nosce Teipsum. Sec. 32, st.
55.

⁷ Some truth there was, but dashed and brewed with lies,

To please the fools, and puzzle all the wise.
Succeeding times did equal folly call,
Believing nothing, or believing all.

DRYDEN, Abraham and Achitophel. Pt. I, l. 114.

⁸ Falsehood is so easy, truth so difficult.

GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede. Ch. 17.

⁹ Truth is beautiful. Without doubt; and so are lies.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. III, p. 437.

¹⁰ Half the truth is often a great lie.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

Half-truths to which men are accustomed are so much easier to pass than the golden rosette they rarely encounter!

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Religio Journalistica,
p. 32.

Truths would be tales
Where now half truths be truths.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act II,
sc. 2, l. 136.

That a lie which is half a truth is ever the blackest of lies,

That a lie which is all a lie may be met and fought with outright,

But a lie which is part a truth is a harder matter to fight.

TENNYSON, The Grandmother. St. 8.

¹¹ The art of lying is the strongest acknowledgment of the force of truth.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk: On Patronage and Puffing.

¹² He that trusts in a lie shall perish in truth.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

¹³ We know how to speak many things which are false as if they were true. (Ἔγνωμεν ψεύδεα πολλὰ λέγειν ἐνέμοισιν ἀνθρώποις.)

HERODOTUS, Theogony, l. 27.

¹⁴ Urge him with truth to frame his fair replies;
And sure he will; for Wisdom never lies.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. III, l. 25. (Pope, tr.)

¹⁵ Telling the truth to people who misunderstand you is generally promoting falsehood.

ANTHONY HOPE, Daily Dialogues. No. 14.

¹⁶ To distinguish the false from the true. (Vero distinguere falsum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. I, epist. 10, l. 29.

I would I could as easily discover the true as I can expose the false. (Utinam tam facile vera invenire possim, quam falsa convincere.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. I, ch. 32,
sec. 91.

¹⁷ A man had rather have a hundred lies told of him, than one truth which he does not wish should be told.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (BOSWELL, Life. 1773.)

¹⁸ I reckon there's more things told than are true,

And more things true than are told!

RUDYARD KIPLING, Rewards and Fairies: The Ballad of Minepti Shaw.

¹⁹ Man is ice for truth, fire for falsehood.

(L'homme est de glace aux vérités;

Il est de feu pour les mensonges.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables.

²⁰ Some falsehood mingles with all truth.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. II.

²¹

The nimble lie

Is like the second-hand upon a clock;
We see it fly, while the hour-hand of truth
Seems to stand still, and yet it moves unseen,
And wins at last, for the clock will not strike
Till it has reached the goal.

LOWRELL, Michael Angelo. Pt. III, sec. 5.

But a lie, whatever the guise it wears,
Is a lie, as it was of yore.
And a truth that has lasted a million years
Is good for a million more!
TED OLSON, Things That Endure.

Who speaks the truth stabs Falsehood to the heart,
And his mere word makes despots tremble
more
Than ever Brutus with his dagger could.

J. R. LOWELL, L'Envoi, l. 100.

Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide,
In the strife of Truth with Falsehood, for the good or evil side.

J. R. LOWELL, The Present Crisis. St. 5.

Against truth falsehood hath no might.
JOHN LYDGATE, The Story of Thebes. Pt. II.
Let Truth and Falsehood grapple: who ever knew Truth put to the worse in a free and open encounter?

MILTON, Areopagitica.

An innocent truth can never stand in need
Of a guilty lie.

MASSINGER, Emperor of the East. Act v, sc. 3.

Truth never was indebted to a lie.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 587.

For lying is thy sustenance, thy food;
Yet thou pretend'st to truth.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. I, l. 429.

For oh, 't was nuts to the Father of Lies,
(As this wily fiend is nam'd in the Bible)
To find it settled by laws so wise
That the greater the truth, the worse the libel!

THOMAS MOORE, A Case of Libel, l. 61.

The greater the truth the greater the libel.

LOAN ELLENBOROUGH seems to have originated this saying, about 1789. Robert Burns, in some lines written at Stirling, attributed it to Lord Mansfield.

I love the truth and wish to have it always spoken to me; I hate a liar. (Ego verum amo, verum volo mihi dici; mendacem odi.)
PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 181. (Act I, sc. 3.)

The dull flat falsehood serves for policy;
And in the cunning truth itself 's a lie.

ALEXANDER POPE, Moral Essays. Epist. I, l. 67.

Tell a lie, and find the truth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 75.

False things may be imagined, and false things composed; but only truth can be invented.

JOHN RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Bk. I, pt. 8,
ch. 4, sec. 23.

They spake truth once—but all the rest was
lies,
Lived for an hour—then for all time were dead.

MARGARET SACKVILLE, Resurrection.

I pull in resolution, and begin
To doubt the equivocation of the fiend
That lies like truth.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 5, l. 42.

Falsehood flies and truth comes limping after it, so that when men come to be undeceived it is too late.

SWIFT, The Examiner. No. 15.

A lie travels round the world while Truth is putting on her boots.

C. H. SPURGEON, Truth and Falsehood.

A lie travels by the Marconi route, while Truth goes by slow freight and is often ditched at the first water-tank.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

Truth is strengthened by observation and delay, falsehood by haste and uncertainty.
(Veritas visu et mora, falsa festinatione et incertis valet.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. II, sec. 39.

Falsehoods which we spurn to-day
Were the truths of long ago.

WHITTIER, Café in Boston. St. 4.

EDMUND BURKE, Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents.

'Tis strange—but true; for truth is always strange,—

Stranger than fiction.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 101.

Truth is stranger than fiction—to some people,
but I am measurably familiar with it.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar.

Truth, fact, is the life of all things; falsity,
"fiction," or whatever it may call itself, is certain to be the death.

CARLYLE, Letter-Day Pamphlets. No. 2.

When fiction rises pleasing to the eye,
Men will believe, because they love the lie;
But Truth herself, if clouded with a frown,

Must have some solemn proof to pass her down.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Epistle to Hogarth, l. 291.

I love truth. I believe humanity has need of it. But assuredly it has much greater need still of the untruth which flatters it, consoles it, gives it infinite hopes. (J'aime la vérité. Je crois que l'humanité en a besoin; mais, certes, elle a bien plus grand besoin encore du mensonge qui la flatte, la console, lui donne des espérances infinies.)

ANATOLE FRANCE, La Vie en Fleur.

Never will the imagination approach the improbabilities and the antitheses of truth.

EDMOND AND JULES DE GONCOURT, Journal. Vol. ii, p. 9.

At times truth may not seem probable. (Le vrai peut quelquefois n'être pas vraisemblable.)

BOILEAU, L'Art Poétique. Pt. iii, l. 48.

And Truth severe, by fairy Fiction drest.

THOMAS GRAY, The Bard, l. 127.

Fictions meant to please should be very close to truth. (Ficta voluptatis causa sint proxima veris.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 338.

If this were played upon a stage now, I could condemn it as an improbable fiction.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 140.

There is nothing so powerful as truth, and often nothing so strange.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech: Murder of Captain White.

Nothing can satisfy, but what confounds; Nothing, but what astonishes, is true.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 836.

TURKEY AND THE TURKS

Know ye the land where the cypress and myrtle

Are emblems of deeds that are done in their clime,

Where the rage of the vulture, the love of the turtle

Now melt into sorrow, now madden to crime? . . .

Where the virgins are soft as the roses they twine,

And all save the spirit of man is divine?

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto i, st. 1.

The unspeakable Turk should be immediately struck out of the question.

CARLYLE, Letter to a Meeting at St. James's Hall, 1876.

Let the Turks carry away their abuses in the only possible manner, namely by carrying off themselves. Their zaptiehs and their mudirs, their bimbashes and their yuzbashis, their kaimekans and their pashas,—one and all, bag and baggage, shall, I hope, clear out from the province they have desolated and profaned.

GLADSTONE, Speech, 7 May, 1877, on the occupation of Bulgaria by Turkey.

Come, shepherd, let us make an honourable retreat; though not with bag and baggage, yet with scrip and scrippage.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 169.

At midnight, in his guarded tent,

The Turk was dreaming of the hour

When Greece, her knee in suppliance bent,

Should tremble at his power.

FITZ-GREENE HALLECK, Marco Bossaris.

One of that saintly murderous brood

To carnage and the Koran given.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Fire-Worshippers.

[The Ottoman Empire] has the body of a sick old man, who tried to appear healthy, although his end was near.

SIR THOMAS ROE, Ambassador to Constantinople, 1621. (BUCHANAN, Letters, p. 375.)

[The Ottoman Empire] whose sick body was not supported by a mild and regular diet, but by a powerful treatment, which continually exhausted it.

MONTESQUIEU, Persian Letters. Bk. i, No. 19. We have on our hands a sick man,—a very sick man.

NICHOLAS I OF RUSSIA, Conversation with Sir George Hamilton Seymour, 1853. (Blue Book, 1854.) Hence "The sick man of Europe," as referring to the Turk.

I would send them to the Turk, to make eunuchs of.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 94.

Go to Constantinople and take the Turk by the beard.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 2, l. 222.

In woman, out-paramoured the Turk.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 94.

And you be not turned Turk, there's no more sailing by the star.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 57.

The Sublime Porte. (Bab-i-ali.)

The official title of the central office of the Ottoman empire under the sultans.

The lofty gate of the royal tent.

MAHOMET II, referring to the ancient place of audience. The Italians translated the phrase "La porte sublime." (CAREWY, History of the Ottoman Turks, p. 96.)

1 Whilst twilight's curtain, spreading far,
Was pinned with a single star.

MACDONALD CLARKE, Death in Disguise, l. 227.

Now twilight lets her curtain down
And pins it with a star.

LYDIA MARIA CHILD. When Macdonald Clarke died in 1842, Mrs. Child wrote an appreciation of his work, in which she misquoted his lines as above, and the misquotation became the more widely accepted rendering.

Day hath put on his jacket, and around
His burning bosom buttoned it with stars.

2 Parlour twilight: such a gloom
Suits well the thoughtful or unthinking mind.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 278.

3 Spirit of Twilight, through your folded wings
I catch a glimpse of your averted face,
And rapturous on a sudden, my soul sings
"Is not this common earth a holy place?"
OLIVE CUSTANCE, Twilight.

4 From that high mount of God, whence light

Disastrous twilight.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 597.

5 Our lady of the twilight,
She hath such gentle hands,
So lovely are the gifts she brings
From out the sunset-lands,
So bountiful, so merciful,
So sweet of soul is she;
And over all the world she draws
Her cloak of charity.

ALFRED NOYES, Our Lady of the Twilight.

6 When I was young the twilight seemed too long.

A. MARY F. ROBINSON, Twilight.

7 Twilight's soft down steal o'er the village-
green,
With magic tints to harmonise the scene.

TYRANNY

Still'd is the hum that thro' the hamlet broke,
When round the ruins of their ancient oak
The peasants flock'd to hear the minstrel play,

And games and carols closed the busy day.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Pleasures of Memory. Pt. I, l. 1.

8 Twilight, a timid fawn, went glimmering by,
And Night, the dark-blue hunter, followed fast.

GEORGE WILLIAM RUSSELL, Refuge.

Dusk wraps the village in its dim caress;
Each chimney's vapour, like a thin grey rod,
Mounting aloft through miles of quietness,
Pillars the skies of God.

GEORGE WILLIAM RUSSELL, Dusk.

9 Twilight, ascending slowly from the east,
Entwined in duskier wreaths her braided locks
O'er the fair front and radiant eyes of day:
Night followed, clad with stars.

SHELLEY, Alastor, l. 337.

TYRANNY

10 Of all the tyrants that the world affords,
Our own affections are the fiercest lords.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Julius Cæsar.

Think'st thou there is no tyranny but that
Of blood and chains? The despotism of vice,
The weakness and the wickedness of luxury,
The negligence, the apathy, the evils
Of sensual sloth—produce ten thousand tyrants,
Whose delegated cruelty surpasses
The worst acts of one energetic master,
However harsh and hard in his own bearing.

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act i, sc. 2, l. 113.

The worst tyrants are those which establish themselves in our own breasts.

W. E. CHANNING, Spiritual Freedom.

11 A usurper always distrusts the whole world.
(Usurpator diffida Di tutti sempre.)

ALFIERI, Politico. Act iii, sc. 2.

The tyrant now
Trusts not to men: nightly within his chamber
The watch-dog guards his couch, the only friend
He now dare trust.

JOANNA BAILLIE, Edgewood. Pt. II, act v, sc. 3.

Only tyrants need always be in fear. (Il n'appartient qu'aux tyrans d'être toujours en crainte.)
HENRY IV OF FRANCE. (HARDOULIN DE PERE-FIXE.)

Fear, that reigns with the tyrant.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. I, l. 35.

Tyrants' fears
Decrease not, but grow faster than the years.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act i, sc. 2, l. 84.

12 For tyrants make man good beyond himself:
Hate to their rule, which else would die away,
Their daily-practic'd chafings keep alive.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Merope, l. 42.

13 All oppressors . . . attribute the frustration of their desires to the want of sufficient rig-

our. Then they redouble the efforts of their impotent cruelty.

EDMUND BURKE, Impeachment of Warren Hastings, 16 Feb., 1788.

I impeach him in the name of the people of India, whose rights he has trodden under foot, and whose country he has turned into a desert. Lastly, in the name of human nature itself, in the name of both sexes, in the name of every age, in the name of every rank, I impeach the common enemy and oppressor of all.

EDMUND BURKE, Impeachment of Warren Hastings: Peroration. This is the version given by Macaulay in his essay on Warren Hastings. It is much swifter and more brilliant than the original, and hence has become more familiar.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to Thomas Mercer, 26 Feb., 1790. See also under PEOPLE.

² A tyrant is the best sacrifice to Jupiter, as the ancients held.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. II, sec. iii, mem. 1, subs. 1.

³ Can despots compass aught that hails their sway?

Or call with truth one span of earth their own,

Save that wherein at last they crumble bone by bone?

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 42.

Here all the mighty troublers of the earth,
Who swam to sov'reign rule through seas of blood;

Th' oppressive, sturdy, man-destroying villains,
Who ravag'd kingdoms, and laid empires waste. . . .

Now, like a storm that's spent, Lie hush'd.

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 208.

⁴ Tyranny is far the worst of treasons.

BYRON, The Two Foscari. Act II, sc. 1.

⁵ Is there no tyrant but the crowned one?
(N'est-on jamais tyran qu'avec un diadème?)

ANDRÉ CHÉNIER, Caius Gracchus.

⁶ I deem the tyrant happy who dies a natural death.

CHILON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Chilon. Sec. 5.)

That all men would be tyrants if they could.

DANIEL DEFOE, The Kentish Petition: Addenda, l. 11.

Slaves would be tyrants if the chance were theirs.

VICTOR HUGO, The Vanished City.

There are few minds to which tyranny is not delightful.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letters. Vol. II, p. 110.

¹⁰ O slavish man! will you not bear with your own brother, who has God for his Father, as being a son from the same stock, and of the same high descent? But if you chance to be placed in some superior station, will you presently set yourself up for a tyrant?

EMPIRITUS, Discourses. Bk. I, ch. 13, sec. 3.

¹¹ A state has no worse foe than a tyrant, under whom can be no common laws; but one ruler, keeping the law in his own hands, so that equality perishes.

EURIPIDES, Suppliants, l. 429.

O me! for why is all around us here
As if some lesser god had made the world,
But had not force to shape it as he would?

TENNISON, The Passing of Arthur, l. 13.

Had you the world on your chessboard, you could not fit all to your mind.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Taken as a whole, the universe is absurd.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Literary Studies. Vol. I, p. 36.

Of the "real" universe we know nothing, except that there exist as many versions of it as there are perceptive minds. Each man lives alone in his private universe.

GERALD BULLETT, Dreaming.

The whole universe is one commonwealth of which both gods and men are members. (Universus hic mundus sit una civitas communis deorum atque hominum existimanda.)

⁵ It is an infinite sphere whose centre is everywhere, its circumference nowhere. (C'est une sphère infinie dont le centre est partout, la circonférence nulle part.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. ii, No. 72. Referring to the universe.

The intellectual sphere, which is everywhere the centre, and which has no circumference and which we call God.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. ii, ch. 47.

⁶ The universe is full of magical things, patiently waiting for our wits to grow sharper.

EDEN PHILLIPPS, A Shadow Passes.

⁷ Thro' worlds unnumber'd tho' the God be known,

'T is ours to trace him only in our own. He who thro' vast immensity can pierce, See worlds on worlds compose one universe, Observe how system into system runs, What other planets circle other suns, What varied being peoples every star.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 21.

⁸ The universe, as far as we can observe it, is a wonderful and immense engine; its extent, its order, its beauty, its cruelty, make it alike impressive. If we dramatize its life and conceive its spirit, we are filled with wonder, terror, and amusement, so magnificent is that spirit, so prolific, inexorable, grammatical and dull.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 83.

Great is this organism of mud and fire, terrible this vast, painful, glorious experiment.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 86.

⁹ The universe is a thought of God.

SCHILLER, Essays: Aesthetic and Philosophical. Letter 4.

¹⁰ This godly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire, why, it appears no other thing to me than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 310.

¹¹ When I view the universe as a whole, I admit that it is a marvelous structure; and what is more, I insist that it is of what I may call an intelligent design. . . . There is really very little difference between my own thoughts about the matter and the thoughts of a Fundamentalist.

UNIVERSITY

¹⁵ Universities incline wits to sophistry and affectation.

BACON, Interpretation of Nature. Ch. 26.

They learn nothing there (at the universities of Europe) but to believe; first, to believe that others know that which they know not; and after, that themselves know that which they know not.

BACON, Cogitationes de Scientia Humana.

¹⁶ Universities where individualism is dreaded as nothing else, wherein manufactories of patent drama, business schools and courses for the propagation of fine embroidery are established on the order of the monied.

THOMAS BEER, The Mauve Decade, p. 207.

¹⁷ The true University of these days is a Collection of Books.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship; The Hero as Man of Letters.

¹⁸ And solid learning never falls Without the verge of College walls.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. i, l. 83.

¹⁹ A university should be a place of light, of liberty, and of learning.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 11 March, 1873.

¹ Ye can lade a man up to th' university, but ye can't make him think.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Mr. Carnegie's Gift.

² Colleges hate geniuses, just as convents hate saints.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Public and Private Education.

³ A university—an institution consciously devoted to the pursuit of knowledge, the solution of problems, the critical appreciation of achievement, and the training of men at a really high level.

ABRAHAM FLEXNER, Universities, p. 42.

⁴ A pine bench, with Mark Hopkins at one end of it and me at the other, is a good enough college for me!

JAMES ABRAHAM GARFIELD, Address, at a Williams College alumni dinner, at Delmonico's, New York, 28 Dec., 1871. (WASHINGTON GLADSON, Recollections, p. 73.) Differing versions of Garfield's speech are given in Hinsdale's President Garfield and Education, p. 43; the Williams Vidette, 27 Jan., 1872, and the Williams Review, 5 Feb., 1872. (See STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems, rev. ed., ch. 19.) A movement had been started to provide new buildings for the college, and Garfield, who had been a student there under Mark Hopkins, contended that a distinguished and well-paid faculty was far more essential. His words are usually quoted, "A university is a student on one end of a log and Mark Hopkins on the other." Abraham Flexner in Universities (p. 151), attributes the saying to Hopkins himself, as, "The ideal college consists of a log of wood with an instructor at one end and a student at the other"; but it has not been found in Hopkins's works, and evidently derives from Garfield, who, in turn, was echoing Hopkins's own disdain of apparatus of any kind, even of books. In his Lectures on Moral Science (p. 39), he says that, for this subject at least, "no learning is needed, no science, no apparatus, no information from distant countries." See also APPENDIX, p. 2197:3.

⁶ A college degree does not lessen the length of your ears; it only conceals it.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

⁷ Colleges are places where pebbles are polished and diamonds are dimmed.

R. G. INGENSOL, Abraham Lincoln.

⁸ He is piping hot from the university. He smells of buttered loaves yet.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, Four Five Gallants.

¹⁰ I am undone! while I play the good husband at home, my son and my servant spend all at the university.

SHAKESPEARE, Taming of the Shrew, v, 1, 71.

¹¹ A fool's brain digests philosophy into folly, science into superstition, and art into pedantry. Hence University education.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

¹² The King, observing with judicious eyes The state of both his universities, To one he sent a regiment; for why? That learned body wanted loyalty: To th' other he sent books, as well discerning How much that loyal body wanted learning.

DR. JOSEPH TRAPP, Epigram, when George I, in 1715, sent a regiment to Oxford, and donated Bishop Ely's library to Cambridge.

The King to Oxford sent a troop of horse, For Tories own no argument but force; With equal skill to Cambridge books he sent, For Whigs admit no force but argument.

SIR WILLIAM BROWNE, Riposte to Dr. Trapp. Isis and Cam, to patient science dear!

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets, Pt. III, 42.

¹³ It is . . . a small college, and yet there are those that love it.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Argument, when presenting Dartmouth College case to Supreme Court. Quoted by Chauncey A. Goodrich in letter to Rufus Choate. (QUINT, Story of Dartmouth.)

¹⁴ We have let the idea of freedom under self-respect go to seed in our colleges and are turning out too many hard-boiled, hard-hearted, hard-headed dumb-bells.

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE, Editorial, Emporia Gazette.

¹⁵ Alma mater. (Bounteous, or fostering, mother.)

A name given by the Romans to Ceres and Cybele, and applied in England and America to universities in relation to their students.

A stony-hearted step-mother.

MILTON, referring to the university. (BIRNELL, Obiter Dicta, Ser. II.) De Quincey (Confessions of an English Opium Eater, Pt. I) uses the same phrase with reference to Oxford Street, London.

UNKINDNESS

Or singular and rash.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 846.

But zeal moved thee;
To please thy gods thou didst it.
MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 895.

⁵ Zeal then, not charity, became the guide,
And Hell was built on spite, and Heav'n on pride.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epia. III, l. 261.

⁶ A zeal of God, but not according to knowledge.
New Testament: Romans, x, 2.

I have more zeal than wit.
POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. II, sat. 6, l. 56.

⁷ We do that in our zeal our calmer moment would be afraid to answer.

SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 17.

⁸ But zeal is weak and ignorant, though wondrous proud,

Though very turbulent and very loud.

SWIFT, Ode: Dr. Wm. Sancroft.

⁹ Not too much zeal. (Pas trop de zèle.)
TALLEYRAND. (SAINT-BEUVE, Critiques et Portraits, III, 324.) Sometimes quoted, Surtout pas de zèle, "Above all, no zeal."

KEATS, Sonnet: Oh! How I Love.

¹⁷ Zephyr with Aurora playing,
As he met her once a-Maying,
There on beds of violets blue,
And fresh-blown roses wash'd in dew,
Fill'd her with thee, a daughter fair,
So buxom, blithe, and debonaire.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 19.

A bowl of wine is wondrous good cheer
To make one blithe, buxom, and debonaire.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, The Jealous Lovers.

¹⁸ Soft o'er the shrouds aerial whispers breathe,
That seem'd but zephyrs to the train beneath.
POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto II, l. 57.

The balmy zephyrs, silent since her death,
Lament the ceasing of a sweeter breath.
POPE, Winter, l. 49.

¹⁹ As gentle
As zephyrs blowing below the violet,
Not wagging his sweet head.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act IV, sc. 2, l. 171.

¹ If a person has no delicacy, he has you in his power.

HAZLITT, Literary Remains. Vol. ii, p. 238.

² Vulgarly is the eighth sin . . . and worse than all the others put together, since it perils your salvation in this world.

J. R. LOWELL, On a Certain Condescension in Foreigners.

³ Vulgarly is setting store by "the things that are seen."

SYDNEY, LADY MORGAN, Diary, 12 Sept., 1818. Vulgarly is only in concealment of truth, or affection.

JOHN RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Bk. ii, pt. ii, ch. 6, sec. 7.

The higher a man stands, the more the word "vulgar" becomes unintelligible to him.

JOHN RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Bk. iii, pt. iv, ch. 7, sec. 9.

⁴ So must the writer, whose productions should Take with the vulgar, be of vulgar mould.

EDMUND WALLER, To Mr. Killigrew.

⁵ Vulgarly is simply the conduct of other people.

Is curst as well as blest!

It urges ever, ever on

And never gives him rest. . . .

No maid will ever hold him long

Tho' she be trim and fair—

He urges ever, ever on

With star-dust in his hair.

HESPER LE GALLIENNE, The Wanderer.

I must go down to the seas again, to the lonely sea and the sky,
And all I ask is a tall ship and a star to steer her by,

And the wheel's kick and the wind's song and the white sail's shaking,
And a grey mist on the sea's face and a grey dawn breaking.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Sea-Fever. St. 1.

I must go down to the seas again to the vagrant
gypsy life,

To the gull's way and the whale's way where the wind's like a whetted knife;

And all I ask is a merry yarn from a laughing fellow-rover,

And quiet sleep and a sweet dream when the long trick's over.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Sea-Fever. St. 3.

I must go; the sea has called me
As a mistress to her swain;
From the immemorial tumult

I shall drink of peace again.

F. O'NEILL GALLAGHER, See Madness.

¹ Friends and loves we have none, nor wealth
nor blest abode,
But the hope of the City of God at the other end of the road.

Not for us are content, and quiet, and peace of mind,
For we go seeking a city that we shall never find.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Seekers, St. 1.

It's the white road westwards is the road I must tread

To the green grass, the cool grass, and rest for heart and head,
To the violets and the brown brooks and the thrushes' song

In the fine land, the west land, the land where I belong.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The West Wind.

² It's little I know what's in my heart,
What's in my mind it's little I know,
But there's that in me must up and start,
And it's little I care where my feet go.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Departure.

³ Better sit still where born, I say,
Wed one sweet woman and love her well,
Love and be loved in the old East way,
Drink sweet waters, and dream in a spell,
Than to wander in search of the Blessed Isles,
And to sail the thousands of watery miles
In search of love, and find you at last
On the edge of the world, and a curs'd outcast.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Pace Implora.

⁴ Let us probe the silent places,
Let us seek what luck betide us.

ROBERT W. SERVICE, Call of the Wild.

⁵ Wealth I ask not, hope nor love,
Nor a friend to know me;
All I ask, the heavens above,
And the road below me.

R. L. STEVENSON, The Vagabond.

I cannot rest from travel; I will drink life to the lees.

ALFRED TENNYSON, Ulysses, l. 6.

Afoot and light-hearted I take to the open road,
Healthy, free, the world before me,
The long brown path before me leading wherever
I choose.

Henceforth I ask not good-fortune, I myself am good-fortune,

Henceforth I whimper no more, postpone no
more, need nothing,
Done with indoor complaints, libraries, querulous
criticisms,

Strong and content I travel the open road.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of the Open Road.

⁶ I looked in his eyes and I read the news;

His heart was having the railroad blues.
Oh, the railroad blues will cost you dear,
Keeps you moving on for something that you don't see here.

RIDGELY TORRENCE, Eye-Witness.

⁷ So let the way wind up the hill or down, O'er rough or smooth, the journey will be joy,

Still seeking what I sought when but a boy.
HENRY VAN DYKE, Three Best Things.

O. W. HOLMES, Contentment. St. 1.

I care not much for gold or land;—
Give me a mortgage here and there,—
Some good bank-stock, some note of hand,
Or trifling railroad share,—
I only ask that Fortune send
A little more than I shall spend.

O. W. HOLMES, Contentment. St. 3.

Thus bumble let me live and die,

I—War: Definitions

A meditation on the conduct of political societies made old Hobbes imagine that war was the state of nature.

EDMUND BURKE, Vindication of Natural Society.

Hobbes clearly proves that every creature lives in a state of war by nature.

SWIFT, Poetry: A Rhapsody.

War is pusillanimously carried out in this degenerate age; quarter is given; towns are taken and the people spared: even in a storm, a woman can hardly hope for the benefit of a rape.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 12 Jan., 1757.

A great corrector of enormous times, Shaker of o'er-rank states, thou grand decider

Of dusty and old titles, that heal'st with blood The earth when it is sick, and cure'st the world

O' the pleurisy of people.

JOHN FLETCHER, Two Noble Kinsmen. Act v, sc. 1.

War's a brain-spattering, windpipe-slitting art, Unless her cause by right be sanctified.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ix, st. 4.

Carnage, so Wordsworth tells you, is God's daughter.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto viii, st. 9.

But Thy most dreaded instrument,
In working out a pure intent,

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech Against the War with Mexico, House of Representatives, 12 Jan., 1848.

From rank showers of blood,
And the red light of blazing roofs, you build
The Rainbow Glory, and to shuddering Conscience
Cry,—Lo, the Bridge to Heaven!

BULWER-LYTTON, Richelieu. Act I, sc. 2.

When he drew the sword, he threw away the scabbard. . . . He knew that the essence of war is violence, and that moderation in war is imbecility.

MACAULAY, Essays: Lord Nugent's Memorials of Hampden. Referring to John Hampden.

War should be the only study of a prince. He should consider peace only as a breathing-time, which gives him leisure to contrive, and furnishes ability to execute, military plans.

MACHIAVELLI, The Prince.

And by a prince, he means every sort of state, however constituted.

BURKE, Vindication of Natural Society.

Two armies are two bodies which meet and try to frighten each other.

Yield, ye arms, to the toga. (Cedant arma togæ.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. I, ch. 22, sec. 77.

It is always easy to begin a war, but very difficult to stop one, since its beginning and end are not under the control of the same man. Anyone, even a coward, can commence a war, but it can be brought to an end only with the consent of the victors.

SALLUST, Jugurtha. Sec. 83.

Your breath first kindled the dead coal of wars . . .

And brought in matter that should feed this fire; And now 'tis far too huge to be blown out With that same weak wind which enkindled it.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act v, sc. 2, l. 83.

1 Military service produces moral imbecility, ferocity and cowardice, and the defence of nations must be undertaken by the civil enterprise of men enjoying all the rights and liberties of citizenship

¹⁴ There is no such thing as an inevitable war. If war comes it will be from failure of human wisdom.

BONAR LAW, Speech, July, 1914.

¹⁵ In war it is not permitted to make a mistake twice.

LAMARCHEUS. (PLUTARCH, Apothegms. No. 186.)

¹⁶ It was but chance of war.

SIR DAVID LINDSAY, History and Testament of Squire Meldrum, l. 1832. (1550)

The chance of war
Is equal, and the slayer oft is slain.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xviii, l. 388. (Bryant, tr.)

The chance of war.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 5, l. 75. (1610)

The fortune of war.

Attributed to Reis Dragut, 16th century Barbary corsair, while serving as a galley-slave.

Here I am and here I stay. (J'y suis, et j'y reste.)

MARSHAL MACMAHON, after he had taken the Malakof fortress by assault, during the siege of Sebastopol, 8 Sept., 1855, and been warned that the fort might be blown up. A letter from General Biddulph to Germain Bapst states that MacMahon uttered the phrase to him. (L'Eclair, May, 1908.) Gabriel Hanotaux (Contemporary France) states that MacMahon denied this. The Marquis de Castellane (Revue Hebdomadaire, May, 1908) asserts that he himself coined the phrase during a speech in the National Assembly and attributed it to MacMahon. (See also Notes and Queries, 15 July, 1911.) Used by Victor Emmanuel at the occupation of Rome by the Italian army, Sept., 1870.

Wars and rumours of wars.

New Testament: Matthew, xxiv, 6.

For what can war but endless war still breed?

MILTON, Sonnets: To Lord Fairfax.

They shall not pass. (Ils ne passeront pas.)

GENERAL PÉTAIN, at the battle of Verdun, Feb., 1916. The phrase, an echo of the old Garibaldian battle-cry, became a slogan for the entire French nation. (N. Y. Times, 6 May, 1917.) It has been claimed for Gen. Nivelle.)

Thou shalt not pass.

Old Testament: Numbers, xx, 18.

You may not pass, you must return.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act v, sc. 2, l. 5.

They shall not pass till the stars be darkened:

Two swords crossed in front of the Hun;

Never a groan but God has barked,

Counting their cruelties one by one.

KATHARINE LEE BATES, Crossed Swords.

They shall not pass, tho' battleline

May bend, and foe with foe combine.

Tho' death rain on them from the sky

Till every fighting man shall die,

France shall not yield to German Rhine.

ALICE M. SHEPARD, They Shall Not Pass.

The bird of war is not the eagle but the stork.

All was lost, But that the heavens fought.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 3, l. 3.

There is war in the skies!

OWEN MEREDITH, Lullie. Pt. i, canto 4, st. 12.

And Caesar's spirit, ranging for revenge,
With Até by his side come hot from hell,
Shall in these confines with a monarch's voice
Cry "Havoc," and let slip the dogs of war.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 270.

The punishment of him that crieth havoc, and of them that followeth him. (Item si quis inventus fuerit qui clamorem incipit qui vocatur havoc.)

UNKNOWN, The Office of the Constable and Marshal in Time of War, (c. 1375) To cry
"Havoc!" was to give the command to massacre without quarter.

Horribly stuff'd with epithets of war.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 1, l. 14.

Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 354.

Battle's magnificently stern array!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 28.

Grim-visaged war hath smooth'd his wrinkled front.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 1, l. 9.

If God gave the hand, let not Man withhold the sword. All have the right to fight: none have the right to judge. To Man the weapon:
to Heaven the victory. Peace shall not prevail save with a sword in her hand. Nothing is ever done in this world until men are prepared to kill each other if it is not done.

BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara. Act iii. The Undershaft mottoes for their munitions plant.

There is many a boy here today who looks on war as all glory, but, boys, it is all hell. You can bear this warning voice to generations yet to come. I look upon war with horror.

WILLIAM TECUMSEH SHERMAN, Address, before a G. A. R. convention at Columbus, Ohio, 11 Aug., 1880. It was no doubt from this extempore speech that somebody coined the epigram, "War is hell," which Sherman could never remember having uttered. (See Lewis, Sherman, Fighting Prophet.) Various persons have asserted that they heard the phrase spoken by Sherman at other places, but no real evidence that it was has ever been discovered.

War is hell when you're getting licked!

BRIGADIER-GENERAL HENRY J. O'REILLY (Outlook, 28 Oct., 1931) asserts that this is what Sherman really said, and is confirmed by Col. J. R. M. Taylor, but without convincing evidence.

You cannot qualify war in harsher terms than I will. War is cruelty, and you cannot refine it.

WILLIAM TECUMSEH SHERMAN, Memories, 3, 126.

This is the soldier brave enough to tell
The glory-dazzled world that War is hell:
Lover of peace, he looks beyond the strife,
And rides through hell to save his country's life.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Saint-Gaudens' Equestrian Statue of General Sherman. This quatrain was not used by the sculptor because Sherman's coining of the phrase was thought not to be sufficiently authenticated.

O war! thou son of hell!

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, Act v, sc. 2, l. 33.

We wage no war with women nor with Priests.

SOUTHEY, Madoc in Wales, Pt. xv, l. 65.

A wise man should try everything before resorting to arms. (Omnia prius experiri, quam armis sapientem decet.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 789. (Act iv, sc. 7.)

Arms and the man I sing, who, forced by fate,
And haughty Juno's unrelenting hate,

(Arma virumque cano, Troieque primus ab oris

A great country cannot wage a little war.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON. (FRANCIS, Maxims and Opinions of Wellington, p. 390.)

Of old, between two nations was great war:

Its cause no mortal knew; nor when begun;

Therefore they combated so much the more,

The sire his sword bequeathing to his son.

AUDREY DE VIRE, Infant Bridal, Pt. I, sec. 1.

As long as war is regarded as wicked it will always have its fascinations. When it is looked upon as vulgar, it will cease to be popular.

OSCAR WILDE, The Critic as Artist.

Every bullet has its billet.

WILLIAM III, Saying.

King William . . . would often say to his soldiers that "every ball had its billet."

STERNE, Tristram Shandy, Bk. viii, ch. 19.

He never received a wound. So true is the old saying of King William, that "every bullet has its billet."

JOHN WESLEY, Journal, 6 June, 1765.

Sufficeth this to prove my theme withal,

That every bullet hath a lighting place.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Fruits of War.

Every shot has its commission, d'ye see?

SMOLLETT, The Reprisal, Act iii, sc. 8.

What argues pride and ambition?

Soon or late death will take us in tow:

Each bullet has got its commission,

And when our time's come we must go.

CHARLES DIBDIN, The Benevolent Tar.

It is not an army that we must train for war;

it is a nation.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, 12 May, 1917.

The war to end war.

H. G. WELLS. Claimed by him in Liberty, 29 Dec., 1934, p. 4. Usually credited to Woodrow Wilson.

No man's land.

UNKNOWN, Chronicles of Edward I, Rolls I, 291. (1320) A phrase used to indicate waste ground between two kingdoms. Hence its use in the World War.

There happened so grievous a pestilence in London, that . . . the dead might seem to jostle one another. . . . Whereupon this bishop (Ralph de Stratford, d. 1354) bought ground near Smithfield. It was called No-man's-land, . . . as designed and consecrated for the general sepulture of the deceased.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England, iii, 227. (1662)

This was a kind of border that might be called no man's land.

DANIEL DEFON, Robinson Crusoe, II, 563. (The most famous No Man's Land in the United States was a strip of territory 35 miles wide and 167 miles long ceded to the Government by Texas in 1850, and without form of government until incorporated with Oklahoma in 1890. It was the refuge of outlaws and hostile Indians.)

The General came in a new tin hat
To the shell-torn front where the war was at.
With a faithful aide at his good right hand,
He made his way to No-Man's-Land
ARTHUR GUERMAN, Pershing at the Front.

III—War: Its Virtues

1 My voice is still for war.
Gods! can a Roman senate long debate
Which of the two to choose, slav'ry or death?
ANNOSON, Cato, Act ii, sc. 1.

My sentence is for open war.
MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. ii, l. 52.

2 War is a biological necessity of the first importance, a regulative element in the life of mankind which cannot be dispensed with.
... But it is not only a biological law but a moral obligation and, as such, an indispensable factor in civilization.

BERNHARDI, Germany and the Next War, Ch. 1.
The inevitableness, the idealism, and the blessing of war, as an indispensable and stimulating law of development, must be repeatedly emphasized.
BERNHARDI, Germany and the Next War, Ch. 1.

3 Know that relentless strife
Remains, by sea and land,
The holiest law of life. . . .
From fear in every guise,
From sloth, from love of self,
By war's great sacrifice
The world redeems itself.
JOHN DAVIDSON, War Song.

4 You may think there are greater things than war. I do not; I worship the Lord of Hosts.
BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby, Bk. iii, ch. 1.

5 War educates the senses, calls into action the will, perfects the physical constitution, brings men into such swift and close collision in critical moments that man measures man.
EMERSON, Miscellanies: War.

6 War is delightful to those who have had no experience of it. (Dulce bellum inexpertis.)
ERASMUS, Adagia, Chd. iv, cent. i, No. 2.
How sweet war is to such as know it not.

Being ready, hope for the battle. (Pugnam sperare parati.)

VERGIL, Aeneid, Bk. ix, l. 158.

10 To those to whom war is necessary it is just; and a resort to arms is righteous for those to whom no other hope remains. (Iustum est bellum, quibus necessarium; et pia arma, quibus nulla nisi in armis relinquitur opes.)
LIVY, History, Bk. ix, sec. 1.

Wars are just to those to whom they are necessary. (Iusta bella quibus necessaria.)

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

Ye say, a good cause will hallow even war? I say unto you: a good war halloweth every cause. War and courage have done more great things than charity.

FRIEDRICH NIETZSCHE, Thus Spake Zarathustra: Of War and Warriors.

The arms are fair,
When the intent of bearing them is just.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, Act v, sc. 2, l. 83.

11 Not but wut abstract war is horrid,
I sign to thet with all my heart,—
But civilisation doos git forrid
Sometimes upon a powder-cart.

12 War is the only sport that is genuinely amusing. And it is the only sport that has any intelligible use.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices, Ser. v, p. 28.

13 To overcome in battle, and subdue Nations, and bring home spoils with infinite Man-slaughter, shall be held the highest pitch Of human glory.

MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. xi, l. 687.

14 A really great people, proud and high-spirited, would face all the disasters of war rather than purchase that base prosperity which is bought at the price of national honor.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, Harvard University, 23 Feb., 1907.

15 To the wars, my boy, to the wars!
He wears his honour in a box unseen,
That hugs his kicky-wicky here at home.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, Act ii, sc. 3, l. 295.

He that is truly dedicate to war
Hath no self-love.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI, Act v, sc. 2, l. 87.

16 I drew this gallant head of war,
And cull'd these fiery spirits from the world,
To outlook conquest and to win renown
Even in the jaws of danger and of death.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, Act v, sc. 2, l. 112.

I do not advise you to work, but to fight. I do not advise you to conclude peace, but to conquer. Let your work be a fight, your peace a victory!
 FRIEDRICH NIETZSCHE, Thus Spoke Zarathustra: Of War and Warriors.

1 War is elevating, because the individual disappears before the great conception of the state. . . . What a perversion of morality to wish to abolish heroism among men!

NIETZSCHE, Politics, Vol. i, p. 74.

God will see to it that war always recurs as a drastic medicine for the human race.

NIETZSCHE, Politics, Vol. i, p. 76.

A thousand touching traits testify to the sacred power of the love which a righteous war awakes in noble nations.

5 War lays a burden on the reeling state.

COWPER, Expostulation, l. 306.

6 Hence jarring sectaries may learn
 Their real interest to discern;
 That brother should not war with brother,
 And worry and devour each other.

COWPER, The Nightingale and Glow-Worm.

7 The angel, Pity, shuns the walks of war!

ERASMUS DAWKINS, The Loves of the Plants, Canto iii, l. 298.

8 War, he sung, is toil and trouble.

DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 99.

9 War gratifies, or used to gratify, the combative instinct of mankind, but it gratifies also the love of plunder, destruction, cruel discipline, and arbitrary power.

C. W. ELLIOT, Five American Contributions to Civilization.

10 War, to sane men at the present day, begins to look like an epidemic insanity, breaking out here and there like the cholera or influenza, infecting men's brains instead of their bowels.

EMERSON, Miscellanies: War.

11 I find a hundred thousand sorrows touching my heart, and there is ringing in my ears like an admonition eternal, an insistent call, "It must not be again!"

WARREN G. HARDING, Address, Hoboken, over the bodies of the dead of the A. E. F.

12 War is death's feast.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Yes; quaint and curious war is!

You shoot a fellow down

You'd treat if met where any bar is,

Or help to half-a-crown.

THOMAS HARDY, The Man He Killed.

13 When war begins, then hell openeth.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. The Italians say, "Guerra cominciata, inferno scatenato" (War begun, hell let loose).

A day of battle is a day of harvest for the devil.

WILLIAM HOOK, Sermon, Taunton, Mass., 1640.

He that preaches war is the devil's chaplain.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 27.

14 Curs'd is the man and void of law and right,
 Unworthy property, unworthy light,
 Unfit for public rule, or private care;
 That wretch, that monster, that delights in war.

HOMER, Iliad, Bk. ix, l. 87. (Pope, tr.)

To gratify stern ambition's whims,
 What hundreds and thousands of precious limbs
 On a field of battle we scatter.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Fame.

15 Wars hateful to mothers. (Bellaque matribus Detestata.)

HORACE, Odes, Bk. i, ode 1, l. 23.

Mother whose heart hung humble as a button
 On the bright splendid shroud of your son,
 Do not weep.

War is kind.

STEPHEN CRANE, War Is Kind.

16 Among the calamities of war may be justly numbered the diminution of the love of truth by the falsehoods which interest dictates and credulity encourages. A peace will equally leave the warrior and the relator of wars destitute of employment; and I know not whether more is to be dreaded from streets filled with soldiers accustomed to plunder, or from garrets filled with scribblers accustomed to lie.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler, No. 30.

The first casualty when war comes is truth.

HIRAM JOHNSON, Speech, U. S. Senate.

No one has ever succeeded in keeping nations at war except by lies.

SALVADOR DE MADARIAGA.

Lies were the stuff from which armies built morale.

In war opinion is nine parts in ten.

SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 7 Jan., 1711.

Art, thou hast many infamies,

But not an infamy like this.

O snap the life and still the drum,

And show the monster as she is.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, The Illusion of War.

Ez fer war, I call it murder,—

There you hev it plain an' flat;

I don't want to go no furdur

Than my Testymet fer that;

God hez sed so plump an' fairly,

It's ez long ez it is broad,

An' you've gut to git up airly

Ef you want to take in God.

When after many battles past,

Both tir'd with blows, make peace at last,

What is it, after all, the people get?

Why! taxes, widows, wooden legs, and debt.

FRANCIS MOORE, Almanac: Monikly Observations for 1829, p. 23.

Ye that follow the vision

Of the world's weal afar,

Have ye met with derision

And the red laugh of war?

ALFRED NOYES, Love Will Find Out the Way.

I hate that drum's discordant sound

Parading round and round and round:

To me it talks of ravaged plains,

And burning towns, and ruined swains,

And mangled limbs, and dying groans,

And widows' tears, and orphans' moans;

And all that misery's hand bestows

To fill the catalogue of human woes.

JOHN SCOTT, Ode on Hearing the Drum.

Dying is more honorable than killing. (Quanto honestius mori discunt homines quam occidere.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epist. lxx, 27.

We check manslaughter and isolated murders; but what of war and the much-vaunted crime of slaughtering whole peoples? . . . Deeds which would be punished by loss of life when committed in secret, are praised by us because uniformed generals have carried them out.

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epist. xcvi, 30.

One to destroy, is murder by the law,

And gibbets keep the lifted hand in awe;

To murder thousands takes a specious name,

War's glorious art, and gives immortal fame.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. vii, l. 55.

He is come to open

The purple testament of bleeding war.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 93.

Follow thy drum;

With man's blood paint the ground, gules, gules;

Religious canons, civil laws are cruel;

Then what should war be?

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 58.

In the arts of life man invents nothing; but in the arts of death he outdoes Nature herself, and produces by chemistry and machinery all the slaughter of plague, pestilence, and famine.

War! horrible war! (Bella! horrida bella!)

VERGIL, Æneid, Bk. vi, l. 86.

Away with themes of war! Away with war itself!

Hence from my shuddering sight to never more return that show of blacken'd, mutilated corpses!

That hell unpent and raid of blood, fit for wild tigers or for lop-tongued wolves, not reasoning men.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of the Exposition. Pt. vii.

Militarism does not consist in the existence of any army, nor even in the existence of a very great army. Militarism is a spirit. It is a point of view. It is a system. It is a purpose. The purpose of militarism is to use armies for aggression.

VII—War: The Big Battalions

God is generally for the big squadrons against the little ones. (Dieu est ordinaire pour les gros escadrons contre les petits.)

ROGER, COMTE DE BUSBY-RABUTIN, Letters, 18 Oct., 1677.

I have always noticed that God is on the side of the big battalions. (J'ai toujours vu Dieu du côté des gros bataillons.)

MARSHAL DE LA FERTÉ-SENNETERRE, Remark, to Anne of Austria. (BOURSAULT, Lettres Nouvelles, p. 384.)

Providence is always on the side of the big battalions. (La Fortune est toujours pour les gros bataillons.)

MADAME DE SÉVIGNÉ, Letter to Her Daughter, Madame de Grignan, 22 December, 1673.

It is said that God is always on the side of the big battalions. (On dit que Dieu est toujours pour les gros bataillons.)

VOLTAIRE, Letter to M. le Riche, 6 Feb., 1720.

As regards Providence, he cannot shake off the belief that in war, God is on the side of the big battalions, which at present are in the enemy's camp.

Wise men and God are on the strongest side. SIR CHARLES SEELY, Death of Marc Antony. Act iv, sc. 2.

⁴ We are glad to have God on our side to maul our enemies, when we cannot do the work ourselves.

DAYDEN. (INCE, Wit and Wisdom: Preface.)

⁵ O God, assist our side: at least, avoid assisting the enemy, and leave the rest to me.

PRINCE LEOPOLD OF ANHALT-DESSAU, before his last battle. ("Prayer: mythically true; mythically, not otherwise."—CARLYLE, Life of Frederick the Great. Bk. xv, ch. 14.)

⁶ It is more important to know that we are on God's side.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Retort, to a deputation of Southerners during the Civil War, whose spokesman had remarked, "We trust, Sir, that God is on our side."

⁷ When 'tis an even thing in th' prayin', may th' best man win . . . an' th' best man will win.

VIII—War: The Glory of Battle

⁹ O proud was our army that morning,
That stood where the pine darkly towers,

When Sherman said: "Boys, you are weary;
This day fair Savannah is ours!"

Then sang we a song for our chieftain
That echoed o'er river and lea,

And the stars in our banner shone brighter
When Sherman marched down to the sea.

SAMUEL H. M. BYRNE, Song of Sherman's March to the Sea.

¹⁰ The Assyrian came down like the wolf on the fold,

And his cohorts were gleaming in purple and gold;

And the sheen of their spears was like stars on the sea,

When the blue wave rolls nightly on deep Galilee.

BYRON, The Destruction of Sennacherib.

¹¹ The combat deepens. On, ye brave,
Who rush to glory, or the grave!

Wave, Munich! all thy banners wave,

And charge with all thy chivalry!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Hohenlinden. St. 7.

¹² Conscience avault, Richard's himself again:
Hark! the shrill trumpet sounds, to horse,

away,

My soul's in arms, and eager for the fray.

CIBBER, Richard III (altered). Act v, sc. 3.

My soul is up in arms, ready to charge.

CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act III, sc. 2.

¹³ In every heart
Are sown the sparks that kindle fiery war.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 205.

A steed, a steed of matchless speed!

A sword of metal keen!

All else to noble hearts is dross,

All else on earth is mean.

ROBERT CUNNINGHAM-GRAHAM, Cavalier's Song.

Death's couriers, Fame and Honour, call

Us to the field again.

ROBERT CUNNINGHAM-GRAHAM, Cavalier's Song.

¹⁴ They now to fight are gone,

Armour on armour shone,

Drum unto drum did groan,

To hear was wonder:

That with the cries they make

The very earth did shake,

Trumpet to trumpet spake,

Thunder to thunder.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Bullad of Agincourt. St. 8.

"Forward, the Light Brigade!"

Was there a man dismay'd?

Not tho' the soldier knew

Some one had blunder'd.

Theirs not to make reply,

Theirs not to reason why,

Theirs but to do and die.

Into the valley of Death

Rode the six hundred.

TENNISON, The Charge of the Light Brigade.

Cannon to right of them,

Cannon to left of them,

Cannon in front of them

Volley'd and thunder'd;

Storm'd at with shot and shell,

Boldly they rode and well,

Into the jaws of Death,

Into the mouth of hell

Rode the six hundred.
TENNYSON, The Charge of the Light Brigade.

To arms! cried Mortimer, and couch'd his quivering lance.
THOMAS GRAY, The Bard, l. 14.

Then above all the shooting and shots Rang his voice: "Put Watts into 'em! Boys, give 'em Watts!"
BRET HARTE, Caldwell of Springfield.

³
Hark! I hear the tramp of thousands,
And of armed men the hum;
Lo! a nation's hosts have gathered
Round the quick alarming drum,— Saying, "Come, Freemen, come!
Ere your heritage be wasted," said the quick alarming drum.

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 348.

⁸
Am I deceived, or was there a clash of arms? I am not deceived, it was the clash of arms; Mars approaches, and, approaching, gave the sign of war. (Fallor, an arma sonant?
Non fallimur, arma sonabant; Mars venit, et veniens bellica signa dedit.)
OVID, Fasts. Bk. v, l. 549.

He saith among the trumpets, Ha, ha; and he smelleth the battle afar off, the thunder of the captains, and the shouting.
Old Testament: Job, xxxix, 25.

Oh, wherefore come ye forth, in triumph from the North,
With your hands, and your feet, and your raiment all red?

And wherefore doth your rout send forth a joyous shout?

And whence be the grapes of the wine-press that ye tread?

MACAULAY, The Battle of Naseby. St. 1.

March to the battlefield,
The foe is now before us;
Each heart is Freedom's shield,
And heaven is shining o'er us.
B. E. O'MEARA, March to the Battlefield.

⁹
Stand! the ground's your own, my braves!
Will ye give it up to slaves?
JOHN PIERPONT, Warren's Address.

Leaden rain and iron hail
Let their welcome be!
JOHN PIERPONT, Warren's Address.

From the Rio Grande's waters to the icy lakes of Maine,
Let all exult, for we have met the enemy again.
Beneath their stern old mountains we have met them in their pride,
And rolled from Buena Vista back the battle's bloody tide.

GENERAL ALBERT PIKE, Battle of Buena Vista.

¹⁰
Once more unto the breach, dear friends,
once more;
Or close the wall up with our English dead.
In peace there's nothing so becomes a man
As modest stillness and humility;
But when the blast of war blows in our ears,
Then imitate the action of the tiger,
Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood. . . .
Now set the teeth and stretch the nostril
wide;

Hold hard the breath and bend up every spirit

To his full height!

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 1.
Fight, gentlemen of England! fight, bold yeomen!
Draw, archers, draw your arrows to the head!
Spur your proud horses hard, and ride in blood;
Amaze the welkin with your broken staves!

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 3, l. 338.
Let the only walls the foe shall scale
Be ramparts of the dead!

PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, Vicksburg.

¹¹
When the hurly-burly's done,
When the battle's lost and won.

IX—War: The Terror of Battle
¹³
Hand to hand, and foot to foot:
Nothing there, save death, was mute;

Stroke, and thrust, and flash, and cry
For quarter, or for victory,
Mingle there with the volleying thunder.
BYRON, The Siege of Corinth, St. 24.

His trusty warriors, few but undismayed;
Firm-paced and slow, a horrid front they form,
Still as the breeze, but dreadful as the storm;
Low murmuring sounds along their banners fly,
Revenge, or death—the watch-word and reply;
Then pealed the notes, omnipotent to charm,
And the loud tocsin tolled their last alarm!
CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope, Pt. 1, l. 366.

For justice guides the warrior's steel,
And vengeance strikes the blow
J. R. DRAKE, To the Defenders of New Orleans.

Earth was the meadow, he the mower strong.
VICTOR HUGO, La Légende des Siècles.

Now deeper roll the maddening drums,
And the mingling host like ocean heaves:
While from the midst a horrid wailing comes,
And high above the fight the lonely bugle grieves.

GRENVILLE MELLE, Ode on the Celebration of the Battle of Bunker Hill, 17 June, 1825.
Mellen's only important poem, which gave him the sobriquet of "The Singer of One Song."

Arms on armour clashing bray'd
Horrible discord, and the madding wheels
Of brazen chariots rag'd; dre was the noise
Of conflict.

MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. vi, l. 209.

To the fire-eyed maid of smoky war
All hot and bleeding will we offer them.
SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV, Act iv, sc. 1, l. 114.

From camp to camp, through the foul womb of night.

The hum of either army stilly sounds, . . .
Steed threatens steed, in high and boastful
neighs

Piercing the night's dull ear; and from the tents

The armourers, accomplishing the knights,
With busy hammers closing rivets up,
Give dreadful note of preparation.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, Act iv; Prologue, l. 4.

With clink of hammers closing rivets up.
CROSSER, Richard III (altered), Act v, sc. 3.

Make all our trumpets speak; give them all breath,

Those clamorous harbingers of blood and
death.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, Act v, sc. 6, l. 9.

Let's march without the noise of threatening drum.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, Act iii, sc. 3, l. 51.

Thus far into the bowels of the land

Have we march'd on without impediment.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, Act v, sc. 2, l. 3.

Put in their hands thy bruising irons of wrath,
That they may crush down with heavy fall
The usurping helmets of our adversaries!
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, Act v, sc. 3, l. 110.

Then more fierce
The conflict grew; the din of arms, the yell
Of savage rage, the shriek of agony.
The groan of death, commingled in one sound
Of undistinguish'd horrors

SOUTHEY, Madoc in Aslan, Pt. ii, sec. 15, l. 170.
God of battles, was ever a battle like this in the world before?

TENNYSON, The Revenge, l. 62.

They came with banner, spear, and shield;
And it was proved in Bosworth-field,
Not long the Avenger was withstood—
Earth helped him with the cry of blood.

WORDSWORTH, *Song at the Feast of Brongham
Castle*, l. 24.

X—War: Cannon

The cannon's breath
Wings the far hissing globe of death.

BYRON, The Siege of Corinth, St. 2.
Three hundred cannon threw up their emetic,
And thirty thousand muskets flung their pills.
BYRON, Don Juan, Canto viii, st. 12.

Iron-sleet of arrowy shower
Hurries in the darken'd air.
THOMAS GRAY, The Fatal Sisters.

The last argument of kings. (Ultima ratio regum)

LOUIS XV OF FRANCE ordered this engraved on his cannon. It was ordered removed by the National assembly, 19 Aug., 1790. Its use as a motto for cannon dates back to 1613.

reges)

CALDERON, referring to war.
Don't forget your great guns, which are the most respectable arguments of the rights of kings.

FREDERICK THE GREAT, *Letter to His Brother,
Prince Henry*, 21 April, 1759.

There are no manifestoes like cannon and musketry.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, *Maxims and Table-
Talk*.

And silence broods like spirit on the brae,
A glimmering moon begins, the moonlight runs

Over the grasses of the ancient way
Rutted this morning by the passing guns.
JOHN MASEFIELD, August 14.

'Tis a principle of war that when you can use the lightning 'tis better than cannon.

Telling the battle was on once more—
And Sheridan twenty miles away!
THOMAS BUCHANAN READ, Sheridan's Ride.

² The cannons have their bowels full of wrath,
And ready mounted are they to spit forth
Their iron indignation 'gainst your walls.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 210.

³ It was great pity, so it was,
That villainous saltpetre should be digg'd
Out of the bowels of the harmless earth,
Which many a good tall fellow had destroy'd
So cowardly.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 59.
As when that devilish iron engine, wrought
In deepest hell, and fram'd by fury's skill,
With windy nitre and quick sulphur fraught,
And ram'd with bullet round, ordain'd to kill,
Conceiveth fire, the heavens it doth fill
With thundering noise, and all the air doth choke,
That none can breathe, nor see, nor hear at will,
Through smould'ry cloud of duskish stinking smoke,
That th' only breath him daunts, who hath escap'd
the stroke.

Sept., 1773.

⁹ Peace is better than war, because in peace the sons bury their fathers, but in war the fathers bury their sons.

CÆCILIUS, to Cambyse. (BACON, Apophthegms.
No. 149.)

¹⁰ War makes thieves and peace hangs them.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

¹¹ It is a general rule of reason, That every man ought to endeavour Peace, as far as he has hope of obtaining it; and when he cannot obtain it, that he may seek and use all helps and advantages of War.

THOMAS HORNE, Leviathan. Pt. i, ch. 14.

Oh! if I were Queen of France, or, still better,
Pope of Rome,
I would have no fighting men abroad, no weeping maids at home;
All the world should be at peace; or if kings must show their might,
Why, let them who make the quarrels be the only ones to fight.

⁶ I am for peace: but when I speak, they are for war.

Old Testament: Psalms, cxx, 7.

I labour for peace, but when I speak unto them thereof, they make them ready to battle.

Book of Common Prayer: Psalter. Ps., cxx, 6.

⁷ Peace makes plenty, plenty makes pride.

Pride breeds quarrel, and quarrel brings war:

War brings spoil, and spoil poverty,

Poverty patience, and patience peace:

So peace brings war, and war brings peace.

GEORGE PUTTENHAM, The Arte of English Poesie, l. 217. (1589)

Plenty breeds Pride; Pride, Envy; Envy, War;

War, Poverty; Poverty, humble Care;

Humility breeds Peace, and Peace breeds Plenty;

Thus round the World doth roll alternately.

ROBERT HAYMAN, Quodlibets: The World's Whirligigge. (1630)

Poverty begets Effort; Effort begets Success;

Success begets Wealth; Wealth begets Pride;

Pride begets Strife; Strife begets War; War begets Poverty; Poverty begets Peace; Peace, born of Poverty, begets Effort; Effort again begets

Success, and the round continues as before.

ST. CADOC, (Myvrian Archaeology of Wales.)

Second Servant: This peace is nothing, but to rust iron, increase tailors, and breed ballad-makers.

First Servant: Let me have war, say I, it exceeds peace as far as day does night; it's spritely, waking, audible, and full of vent. Peace is a very apoplexy, lethargy; muffled, deaf, sleepy, insensible; a getter of more bastard children than war's a destroyer of men.

Second Servant: 'Tis so: and as war, in some sort, may be said to be a ravisher, so it cannot be denied but peace is a great maker of cuckolds.

First Servant: Ay, and it makes men hate one another.

Third Servant: Reason; because they then less need one another. The wars for my money.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act IV, sc. 5, l. 234.

I arraign you, war, and charge you to be man's enemy;

Yet in so accusing you, I beg that clemency be shown,

For you are a hideous reality only because of man's spiritual frailties.

Man, while yet invoking your aid, has called you the enemy of peace;

Yet that peace which he craves is, in truth, progress's most bitter foe.

Beware the ides of March.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 23.
Cæsar: The ides of March are come.
Soothsayer: Ay, Cæsar; but not gone.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 1.
A certain seer warned Cæsar to be on his guard against a great peril on the day of the month of March which the Romans call the Ides; and when that day had come and Cæsar was on his way to the senate-house, he greeted the seer with a jest and said: "Well, the Ides of March are come," and the seer said to him softly: "Aye, they are come, but they are not gone." ("Αἱ μὲν δὴ

WASHINGTON, GEORGE

⁷ These are high times when a British general is to take counsel of a Virginia buckskin.

GENERAL EDWARD BRADDOCK, in rejecting George Washington's advice, 1755. (C. F. HOFFMAN, Winter in Far West, i, 67.)

⁸ Simple and brave, his faith awoke

Ploughmen to struggle with their fate;

Armies won battles when he spoke,

And out of Chaos sprang the state.

ROBERT BRIDGES (DROCH), Washington.

⁹ Where may the wearied eye repose

When gazing on the great;

Where neither guilty glory glows,

Nor despicable state?

Yes—one—the first—the last—the best—
The Cincinnatus of the West,

Whom envy dared not hate,

Bequeathed the name of Washington,

To make man blush there was but one!

BYRON, Ode to Napoleon Bonaparte. St. 19.

While Washington 's a watchword, such as ne'er

Shall sink while there's an echo left to air.

BYRON, The Age of Bronze. St. 5.

Washington,

Whose every battle-field is holy ground,
Which breathes of nations saved, not worlds undone.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto viii, st. 5.

¹⁰ Washington! Here is a fine, fearless, placid man, perfectly well seated in the center of his soul, direct and pure. . . . He could smile, drink, make love. . . . He paraphrased Horace: "Carpe diem, carpe noctem." . . . To conquer and to make love.

JOSEPH DELTELL, Lafayette, p. 61.

¹¹ The character, the counsels, and example of our Washington . . . will guide us through the doubts and difficulties that beset us; they will guide our children and our children's children in the paths of prosperity and peace, while America shall hold her place in the family of nations.

EDWARD EVERETT, Speech: Washington Abroad and at Home, 5 July, 1853.

No gilded dome swells from the lowly roof to catch the morning or evening beam; but the love and gratitude of united America settle upon it in one eternal sunshine. While it stands, the latest generations of the grateful children of America will make this pilgrimage to it as to a shrine; and when it shall fall, if fall it must, the memory and the name of Washington shall shed an eternal glory on the spot.

³ Were an energetic and judicious system to be proposed with your signature it would be a circumstance highly honorable to your fame . . . and doubly entitle you to the glorious republican epithet, The Father of your Country.

⁴ A nobleness to try for,
A name to live and die for.

G. P. LATHROP, The Name of Washington.

⁵ A citizen, first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen.

COLONEL HENRY (LIEUT.-GENERAL HARRY) LEE, Resolutions Adopted by the Congress on the Death of Washington, 19 Dec., 1799. These were the concluding words of the resolutions, which were written by Lee and introduced in the House of Representatives by John Marshall. They are often wrongly ascribed to Marshall because he read them and moved their adoption. (Journal of the House of Representatives, 6 Cong., 1 sess., p. 45; Annals of Congress, 6 Cong., 1 sess., col. 204.) The phrase was repeated by Lee in his memorial oration at Philadelphia, 26 Dec., 1799. Marshall, in his Life of Washington (vol. v, p. 765), quotes the resolutions, perhaps from memory, and erroneously gives the last clause as "first in the hearts of his fellow citizens." He states in a footnote that the resolutions were prepared by Lee. (See STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems. Rev. ed., ch. 19.)

⁶ Washington is the mightiest name of earth—long since mightiest in the cause of civil liberty, still mightiest in moral reformation. On that name no eulogy is expected. It cannot be. To add brightness to the sun or glory to the name of Washington is alike impossible. Let none attempt it. In solemn awe pronounce the name, and in its naked deathless splendor leave it shining on.

J. R. LOWELL, Under the Old Elm. Pt. v, sec. 3. As to pay, sir, I beg leave to assure the Congress that as no pecuniary consideration could have tempted me to accept this arduous employment at the expense of my domestic ease and happiness, I do not wish to make any profit from it. GEORGE WASHINGTON, Statement to Congress on his Appointment as Commander-in-Chief, 16 June, 1775.

⁸ Oh, Washington! thou hero, patriot sage,

WATERLOO

¹³ The battle of Waterloo and its results appeared to me to put back the clock of the world six degrees.

ROBERT HALL, (GREGORY, Life, Note A.)

1 Every man meets his Waterloo at last.
WINDMILL PHILLIPS, Speech on John Brown, 1
Nov., 1859.

When the first just and friendly man appeared on the earth, from that day a fatal Waterloo was visible for all men of pride and fraud and blood.

3 So great a soldier taught us there
What long-enduring hearts could do
In that world-earthquake, Waterloo!
TENNYSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington, l. 131.

4 Up, Guards, and at 'em!
Attributed to the DUKE OF WELLINGTON, at the crisis of the battle of Waterloo. Also quoted,
"Up, Guards, make ready."
What I must have said was, "Stand up, Guards!"
and then gave the order to attack.
DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Letter to J. W. Croker, answering a letter written 14 March, 1852.
(J. W. CROKER, Memoirs, p. 344.)

The Guard dies, but never surrenders. (Le garde meurt et ne se rend pas.)

GENERAL PIERRE DE CAMBRONNE, Reply, attributed to him when surrounded and summoned to surrender by the British during the retreat from Waterloo. Afterwards denied by him. What he probably did say was,
"Merde, je ne me rends pas" (hence the "mot de Cambronne"). He did surrender and lived for twenty-seven years afterwards.

5 The battle of Waterloo was won here.
DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Remark, while watching a cricket match at Eton. Usually quoted,
"The battle of Waterloo was won on the playing-field of Eton." See WILLIAM SELWYN, WATERLOO. The present seventh Duke denies that Wellington ever said this.

WEBSTER, DANIEL

Men hang out their signs indicative of their respective trades. Shoemakers hang a gigantic shoe; jewelers a monster watch; even the dentist hangs out a gold tooth; but up in Franconi Mountains God Almighty has hung out a sign to show that in New England He makes men.

DANIEL WEBSTER, referring to the Great Stone Face.

Mrs. Hawthorne could not bring herself quite to believe that he [Webster] was not as great as he looked; but Hawthorne had formed a somewhat different opinion. This opinion is set forth, by the by, in the story of "The Great Stone Face."

JULIAN HAWTHORNE, Hawthorne and His Wife. Vol. I, p. 476.

But now, again, there were reports and many paragraphs in the newspapers, affirming that the likeness of the Great Stone Face had appeared upon the broad shoulders of a certain eminent statesman. . . . Instead of the rich man's wealth and the warrior's sword, he had but a tongue; and it was mightier than both together. So wonderfully eloquent was he, that whatever he might choose to say, his auditors had no choice but to believe him; wrong looked like right, and right like wrong; for when it pleased him, he could make a kind of illuminated fog with his mere breath, and obscure the natural daylight with it. His tongue, indeed, was a magic instrument; sometimes it rumbled like thunder; sometimes it warbled like the sweetest music.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, The Great Stone Face.

Such a figure, such an intellect, such a heart, were certainly never combined before to save the world. . . . The front of Jove, the regal, commanding air which cleared a path before him, the voice of thunder and music, the unfathomable eye—all these external signs said, "Here is a Great Man!"

SOPHIA FRANKOY HAWTHORNE. (JULIAN HAWTHORNE, Hawthorne and His Wife. Vol. I, p. 476.)

How will this look in history?

DANIEL WEBSTER, on receiving a telegram announcing the 57th ballot, Scott 159, Fillmore 112, Webster 21, at the convention of 1852.

Have I—wife, son, doctor, friends, are you all there?—have I, on this occasion, said anything unworthy of Daniel Webster?

DANIEL WEBSTER, reported as his last words. (FUESS, Daniel Webster; ADAMS, The Godlike Daniel.) More probably his last words were, "I still live," possibly a reference to the doctor's order to an attendant, "If he is alive in an hour, give him some brandy."

Thirty years ago, when Mr. Webster at the bar or in the Senate filled the eyes and minds of young men, you might often hear cited as Mr. Webster's three rules: first, never to do to-day what he could defer till to-morrow; secondly, never to do himself what he could make another do for him; and, thirdly, never to pay any debt today. Well, they are none the worse for being already told, in the last generation, of Sheridan; and we find in Grimm's Mémoires that Sheridan got them from the witty D'Argenson.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality.

I would not attempt to vie with the honorable gentleman from Massachusetts in a field where every nigger is his peer and every billy-goat his master.

JOHN RANDOLPH OF ROANOKE, of Daniel Webster, who, Randolph believed, had accused him of impotence. (ADAMS, The Godlike Daniel, p. 169.) The fact of Randolph's impotence was verified after his death.

Daniel Webster struck me much like a steam-engine in trousers.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Mémoires. Ch. 9. Vol. I, p. 265.)

God Almighty never created a man half as wise as he looks.

THOMAS CARLYLE, referring to Webster.

God is only the president of the day, and Webster is his orator.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Conclusion.

So fallen! so lost! the light withdrawn
Which once he wore!

The glory from his gray hairs gone
For evermore!

WHITTIER, Ichabod.

WEED

¹ Call us not weeds; we are flowers of the sea.
E. L. AVELINE, The Mother's Fables.

Still must I on, for I am as a weed,
Flung from the rock, on Ocean's foam, to sail
Where'er the surge may sweep.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 2.

² The flowers are loved, the weeds are spurned,
But for them both the suns are burned;
And when, at last, they fail the day,
The long night folds them all away.

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, Weeds and Flowers.

³ Turning our seed-wheat-kennel tares,
To burn-grain thistle, and to vapory darnel, Cockle, wild oats, rough burs, corn-cumbring
tares.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week
ii, day 3. (Sylvester, tr.)

Nothing teems

But hateful docks, rough thistles, kecksies, burs,
Losing both beauty and utility.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 2, l. 51.

Bur-docks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-flowers,
Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow
In our sustaining corn.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 4.

⁴ What I thought was a flower is only a weed, and is worthless.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs; Scottish.

⁸ Now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted;

Suffer them now, and they'll o'ergrow the garden.

And choke the herbe for want of husbandry.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 31.

The noisome weeds, which without profit suck

The soil's fertility from wholesome flowers.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 38.

⁹ O thou weed,
Who art so lovely fair and smell'st so sweet
That the sense aches at thee, would thou hadst ne'er been born!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 67.

¹⁰ "Ay," quoth my uncle Gloucester,
"Small herbs have grace, great weeds do grow apace."

And since, methinks, I would not grow so fast, Because sweet flowers are slow and weeds make haste.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 12.

You said that idle weeds are fast in growth.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 103.

¹¹ The summer's flower is to the summer sweet,
Though to itself it only live and die,
But if that flower with base infection meet,
The basest weed outbraves his dignity:
For sweetest things turn sourest by their deeds;

Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xciv.

¹² Once in a golden hour

I cast to earth a seed.

Up there came a flower,

The people said, a weed.

² The last great Englishman is low.
TENNYSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington, l. 18.

Foremost captain of his time,
Rich in saving common-sense,
And, as the greatest only are,
In his simplicity sublime.
O good grey head that all men knew,
O voice from which their omens all men drew,
O iron nerve to true occasion true,
O fallen at length that tower of strength
Which stood four-square to all the winds that blew! . . .

For this is England's greatest son,
He that gain'd a hundred fights,
Nor ever lost an English gun. . . .
O saviour of the silver-coasted isle. . . .
Ashes to ashes, dust to dust;
He is gone who seem'd so great.—
Gone; but nothing can bereave him
Of the force he made his own
Being here, and we believe him
Something far advanced in State,
And that he wears a truer crown
Than any wreath that man can weave him.
Speak no more of his renown,
Lay your earthly fancies down,
And in the vast cathedral leave him,
God accept him, Christ receive him.

A mightier battle than the sword.

FRÉDÉRIC CARV, John Greenleaf Whittier.

¹³ So long as liberty is loved,

And bud and blossom blown,

And simple thought and aim approved,

And honest life is known,

So long shall Whittier lift his face

O'er some of larger view,

And keep 'mid greater names his place,

Because his heart was true.

¹⁶ Gracious thine age, thy youth was strong,

For Freedom touched the tongue with fire;
To sing the right and fight the wrong
Thine equal hand held bow or lyre.

WILLIAM HAYES WARD, To John Greenleaf Whittier.

1 Some blamed him, some believed him good,
The truth lay doubtless 'twixt the two;
He reconciled as best he could
Old faith and fancies new.

In him the grave and playful mixed,
And wisdom beld with folly truce,
And Nature compromised betwixt
Good fellow and recluse.

WHITTIER, My Namesake. Of himself.

2 Making his rustic reed of song
A weapon in the war with wrong,
Yoking his fancy to the breaking plough
That beam-deep turned the soil
For Truth to spring and grow.

LORD BURGHLEY, Ten Precepts to His Son.

The sum of all that makes a just man happy Consists in the well-choosing of his wife:
And there, well to discharge it, does require Equality of years, of birth, of fortune;
For beauty being poor and not cried up By birth or wealth, can truly mix with neither.
And wealth, when there's such difference in years, And fair descent, must make the yoke uneasy.

PHILIP MASSINGER, A New Way to Pay Old Debts. Act iv, sc. 1.

I fear that in the election of a wife, As in a project of war, to err but once Is to be undone for ever.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, Anything for a Quiet Life, Act i, sc. 1.

Who will have a handsome wife, let him

choose her upon Saturday, and not upon Sunday, viz. when she is in her fine clothes.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Span.-Eng., ii.

1 Some cunning men choose fools for their wives, thinking to manage them, but they always fail.

2 SAMUEL JOHNSON, (Boswell, Life, v, 226.)

3 If you have the good luck to find a modest wife, you should prostrate yourself before the Tarpeian threshold, and sacrifice a heifer with gilded horns to Juno.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 47.

4 Let me have a wife not too lettered. (Sit non doctissima conjux.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ii, epig. 90.

Most intolerable of all is the woman who, as soon as she has sat down at dinner, commends Vergil, pardons the dying Dido, and pits the poets against each other.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 434.

A man is in general better pleased when he has a good dinner upon his table, than when his wife talks Greek.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol. ii, p. 11.

Good wives and private soldiers should be ignorant.

WYCHERLEY, The Country Wife. Act i.

In thy face have I seen the eternal.

BARON CHRISTIAN VON BUNSEN, To His Wife, when dying at Bonn. (Life of Baron Bunsen, ii, 389.)

12 I hae a wife o' my ain.

BURNS, I Hae a Wife.

She is a winsome wee thing,

She is a handsome wee thing,

She is a lo'esome wee thing,

This sweet wee wife o' mine!

BURNS, My Wife's a Winsome Wee Thing.

13 No happiness is like unto it, no love so great as that of man and wife, no such comfort as a sweet wife. (Placens uxor.)

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. 2, mem. 1, subs. 2. Quoting Horace.

Be thou the rainbow to the storms of life, The evening beam that smiles the clouds away, And tints to-morrow with prophetic ray!

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto i, st. 20.

14 It was an opinion of I know not what sage man, that there was but one good woman in the world, and his advice was, that every married man should think that his wife was she.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 22.

'Tis a saying, there is but one good wife in the world, and every man enjoys her.

JOHN DUNTON, Athenian Sport, p. 333.

15 This flower of wifely patience.

CHAUCER, The Clerkes Tale, l. 863.

16 What is there in the vale of life

Half so delightful as a wife,

When friendship, love, and peace combine

To stamp the marriage bond divine?

COWPER, Love Abused, l. 1.

17 Thy wife is a constellation of virtues; she's the moon, and thou art the man in the moon.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act ii, sc. 1.

A meek spouse on whom he could depend.

CRABBE, Tales: The Gentleman Farmer, l. 368.

18 The wife of thy bosom.

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xiii, 6.

¹ Blessed is the man that hath a virtuous wife, for the number of his days shall be double. A virtuous woman rejoiceth her husband, and he shall fulfil the years of his life in peace. A good wife is a good portion.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxvi, 1-3.

² Man's best possession is a sympathetic wife.
EURIPIDES, Antigone. Frag. 164.

Man's best possession is a loving wife
ROBERT KURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
iii, sec. ii, mem. 5, subs. 5.

³ Next to no wife, a good wife is best.
THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Marriage.

She will tend him, nurse him, mend him,
Air his linen, dry his tears;
Bless the thoughtful fates that send him
Such a wife to soothe his years!
W. S. GILBERT, The Sorcerer. Act ii.

⁴ The world's great Author did create
The sex to fit the nuptial state,
And meant a blessing in a wife
To solace the fatigues of life;
And old inspired times display,
How wives could love, and yet obey.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 258.

⁵ Busk thee, busk thee, my bonny bonny bride,
Busk thee, husk thee, my winsome marrow.

SIR WILLIAM HAMILTON, The Braes of Yarrow.
(PERCY, Reliques. Ser. ii, bk. 3, No. 24.)

The gallant youth, who may have gained,
Or seeks, a "winsome marrow."

WORDSWORTH, Farrow Revisited, l. 1.

⁶ A sweeter woman ne'er drew breath
Than my sonne's wife, Elizabeth.

JEAN INGELW, The High Tide on the Coast of Lincolnshire.

⁷ He knew whose gentle hand was at the latch,
Before the door had given her to his eyes.

KZATS, Isabella. St. 3.

⁸ No angel she; she hath no budding wings;
No mystic halo circles her bright hair;
But lo! the infinite grace of little things,
Wrought for dear love's sake, makes her very fair.

JAMES B. KENYON, A Wife.

⁹ When I upon thy bosom lean,
Enraptured I do call thee mine,
I glory in those sacred ties

That made us anc' wha' ance were twain.
JOHN LAPRAKE, Song. An adaptation of an anonymous poem, Lines Addressed by a Husband to His Wife, which appeared in the Weekly Magazine, 14 Oct., 1773.

¹⁰ Sail forth into the sea of life,
O gentle, loving, trusting wife,

And safe from all adversity
Upon the bosom of that sea
Thy comings and thy goings be!
For gentleness and love and trust
Prevail o'er angry wave and gust;
And in the wreck of noble lives
Something immortal still survives!

LONGFELLOW, The Building of the Ship, l. 368.

But thou dost make the very night itself
Brighter than day.

LONGFELLOW, *The Divine Tragedy: The First
Passover*. Pt. iii, l. 133.

¹¹ Heaven deprives me of a wife who never caused me any other grief than that of her death. (Le ciel me prive d'une épouse qui ne m'a jamais donné d'autre chagrin que celui de sa mort.)

LOUIS XIV, on the death of the Queen.

She never did any wrong, unless in the fact that she died. (Nihil unquam peccavit, nisi quod mortua est.)

UNKNOWN, *Inscription on a Wife's Tomb at ¹² How much the wife is dearer than the bride.

GEORGE LYTTLETON, An Irregular Ode.

¹³ My fairest, my espous'd, my latest found,
Heaven's last best gift, my ever new delight!

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 18.

Thy likeness, thy fit help, thy other self,
Thy wish, exactly to thy heart's desire.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 450.

Neither her outside form'd so fair, nor aught
In procreation common to all kinds (Though higher of the genital bed by far
And with mysterious reverence I deem)
So much delights me, as those graceful acts,
Those thousand decencies that daily flow
From all her words and actions, mix'd with love
And sweet compliance, which declare unfeign'd
Union of mind, or in us both one soul.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 596.

¹⁴ Love, sweetness, goodness, in her person shin'd.

MILTON, Sonnets: On His Deceased Wife.

¹⁵ A virtuous woman is a crown to her husband.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xii, 4.

Whoso findeth a wife findeth a good thing.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xviii, 22.

A prudent wife is from the Lord.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xix, 14.

All other goods by Fortune's hand are given;

A wife is the peculiar gift of heaven.

POPE, January and May, l. 51.

¹⁶ A good wife and health, are a man's best wealth.

H. G. BOWN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 289. A variant is, "A cheerful wife is the joy of life."

¹⁷ His house she enters, there to be a light,

Shining within, when all without is night;
A guardian angel o'er his life presiding,
Doubling his pleasures, and his cares dividing.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Human Life, l. 349.

¹ The partner of my soul,
My wife, the kindest, dearest, and the truest,
That ever wore the name.

NICHOLAS ROWE, Royal Convert. Act ii, sc. 1.

² He counsels a divorce; a loss of her
That, like a jewel, has hung twenty years
About his neck, yet never lost her lustre.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 31.

That man i' the world who shall report he has
A better wife, let him in nought be trusted,
For speaking false in that, thou art, alone,
If thy rare qualities, sweet gentleness,
Thy meekness saint-like, wife-like government,
Obeying in commanding, and thy parts
Sovereign and pious else, could speak thee out.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 134.

You are my true and honourable wife,
As dear to me as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 288.

Dear as the light that visits these sad eyes,
Dear as the ruddy drops that warm my heart.

THOMAS GRAY, The Bard, l. 40.

³ O ye gods,
Render me worthy of this noble wife!

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 302.

⁴ My wife! my wife! what wife? I have no wife.

O, insupportable! O heavy hour!
Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse
Of sun and moon

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 97.

The gentle lady married to the Moor,
And Heavenly Una with her milk-white lamb.

WORDSWORTH, Personal Talk No. 3.

What is there left but sorrow, for a man alone in the world, his wife gone?

UNKNOWN, Epigram. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, No. 340.)

⁵ What nearer debt in all humanity
Than wife is to the husband?

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 175.

⁶ Of earthly goods, the best is a good wife;
A bad, the bitterest curse of human life.

(Ἰουδαίος οὐδὲ χρῆμα' ἀνὴρ ἡλίτται Ἑσθλῆς ἀμεινον, οὐδὲ βίγιον κακῆς.)

SIMONIDES, Epigram. Frag. 7.

A man's best fortune or his worst is a wife.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 28.

⁷ Trusty, dusky, vivid, true,
With eyes of gold and bramble-dew,

Steel-true and blade-straight
The great Artificer made my mate.

R. L. STEVENSON, My Wife.

Teacher, tender comrade, wife,
A fellow-farer true through life,
Heart-whole and soul-free,
The august Father gave to me.

R. L. STEVENSON, My Wife.

⁸ A courage to endure and to obey;
A hate of gossip parlance, and of sway,
Crown'd Isabel, thro' all her placid life,
The queen of marriage, a most perfect wife.

TENNYSON, Isabel St. 2.

⁹ My wife is one of the best wimin on this continent, altho' she isn't always gentle as a lamb, with mint sauce.

ARTEMUS WARD, A War Meeting.

¹⁰ The world well tried—the sweetest thing in life

Is the unclouded welcome of a wife.

N. P. WILLIS, The Lady Jane Canto ii, st. 11.

¹¹ She gave me eyes, she gave me ears;
And humble cares, and delicate fears;
A heart, the fountain of sweet tears;
And love, and thought, and joy.

WORDSWORTH, The Sparrow's Nest. Referring to his wife.

IV—Wife: A Curse

¹² What is it, then, to have, or have no wife,
But single thralldom, or a double strife?

FRANCIS BACON, The World.

¹³ I have a wife, the worst that may be;
For though the fiend to her y-coupled were,
She would him overmatch, I dare well swear.

CHAUCER, The Merchant's Tale: Prologue, l. 6.

¹⁴ What rugged ways attend the noon of life!
Our sun declines, and with what anxious strife,
What pain, we tug that galling load, a wife!

CONGREVE, The Old Bachelor. Act v, sc. 15.

Lord Erskine, at women presuming to rail,
Calls a wife a tin canister tied to one's tail;
While fair Lady Anne, as the subject he carries on,
Feels hurt at his lordship's degrading comparison.
Yet wherefore degrading? Considered aright,
A canister's useful, and polish'd, and bright;
And should dirt its original purity hide,

That 's the fault of the puppy to whom it is tied.

MATTHEW GREGORY LEWIS, Impromptu on Lord Erskine's Smile (Ser Life and Correspondence of M. G. Lewis, vol. ii, p. 2.)

Often attributed to Richard Brinsley Sheridan.

¹⁵ Strange that God hath given to men
Salves for the venom of all creeping pests,
But none hath ever yet devised a balm
For venomous woman, worse than fire or viper.

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 269.

Man has found remedies against all poisonous creatures, but none was yet found against a bad wife.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 65. Quoting Euripides.

1 He that takes a wife takes care.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1736.

He that bath a wife, bath strife.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

2 One wife is too much for most husbands to bear,

But two at a time there's no mortal can bear.

JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act iii, sc. 11.

3 Roy's wife of Aldivalloch,

Wat ye how she cheated me

As I cam o'er the braes of Balloch?

MRS. ELIZABETH GRANT, Roy's Wife.

4 The only comfort of my life

Is that I never yet had wife.

ROBERT HERRICK, His Comfort.

Suspicion, Discontent, and Strife,

Come in for Dowry with a wife.

ROBERT HERRICK, Single Life Most Secure.

Being married to those sleepy-souled women is just like playing at cards for nothing: no passion is excited and the time is filled up. I do not, however, envy a fellow one of those honeysuckle wives for my part, as they are but creepers at best and commonly destroy the tree they so tenderly cling about.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (MRS. PROZ, Johnsoniana.)

I would not marry her, though she were endowed with all that Adam had left him before he transgressed: she would have made Hercules have turned spit, yea, and have cleft his club to make the fire too. . . . I would to God some scholar would conjure her; for certainly, while she is here, a man may live as quiet in hell as in a sanctuary.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 256.

5 Is any dignity in a wife, any beauty, worth the cost, if she is forever reckoning up her merits against you? (Que tanti gravitas, que forma, ut se tibi semper Imputet?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 178.

The better the man, the more desirable as a husband, the less good will he get out of his wife. (Igitur longe minus utilis illi Uxor, quia quis erit bonus optandusque maritus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 211.

6 Give up all hope of peace so long as your mother-in-law is alive. (Desperanda tibi salva concordia socru.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 231.

7 With quarrels let wives pursue husbands and husbands wives; this befits wives; the dowry of a wife is quarreling. (Lite fugent nuptique viros, nuptasque mariti; Hoc decet uxores; dos est uxoria lites.)

OVID, Art Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 153.

8 He who is cursed with an ugly wife sees darkness when he lights the evening lamp.

PALLAS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, epig. 287.)

The husband of the ugly wife

Is better blinded all his life.

SANI, The Gulistan. Pt. ii, No. 45. (Arnold, tr.)

9 Every one of you hath his particular plague, and my wife is mine; and he is very happy who hath this only.

FITTACUS. (PLUTARCH, On the Tranquillity of the Mind.)

But what so pure, which envious tongues will spare?

Some wicked wits have libell'd all the fair.

With matchless impudence they style a wife

The dear-bought curse and lawful plague of life;

A bosom-serpent, a domestic evil,

A night-invasion and a midday-devil.

Let not the wise these slanderous words regard,

But curse the bones of ev'ry living bard.

PORR, January and May, l. 43.

10 To please a wife, when her occasions call,

Would busy the most vigorous of us all,

And trust me, sir, the chastest you can choose,

Will ask observance, and exact her dues.

PORR, January and May, l. 210.

11 A modernist married a fundamentalist wife,

And she led him a catechism and dogma life.

KATIE PRESTON, Marital Tragedy.

12 In a wife's lap, as in a grave,

Man's airy notions mix with earth.

A. T. QUILLER-ROUCH, The Splendid Spur.

13 Who hath a fair wife needs more than two eyes.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 1, l. 21.

14 'Tis reason a man that will have a wife should be at the charge of all her trinkets, and pay all the scores she sets him on. He that will keep a monkey, 'tis fit he should pay for the glasses she breaks.

JOHN SILLER, Table-Talk: Wife.

15 As for my wife,

I would you had her spirit in such another;

The third o' the world is yours; which with a snaffle

You may pace easy, but not such a wife.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii,

sc. 2, l. 61.

¹ A light wife doth make a heavy husband.
SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice, v. i, 130.

It is a common thing To have a foolish wife.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 302.

² Richard Penlake was a cheerful man,
Cheerful and frank and free,
But he led a sad life with Rebecca his wife,
For a terrible shrew was she.

SOUTHEY, St. Michael's Chair. St. 2.

A proverb look in mind ye keep,
As good a shrew as is a sheep
For you to take to wive.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry, l. 157.

³ I hold that man the worst of public foes
Who either for his own or children's sake,
To save his blood from scandal, lets the wife
Whom he knows false, abide and rule the house.

She like a new disease, unknown to men,
Creeps, no precaution used, among the crowd,
Makes wicked lightnings of her eyes and saps
The fealty of our friends, and stirs the pulse
With devil's leaps, and poisons half the young.

TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 509.

⁴ My wife's gone to the country,
Hurrah! Hurrah!

She thought it best; I need a rest,
That's why she went away.

GEORGE WHITING AND IRVING BEBLIN, My Wife's Gone to the Country. (1909)

^{4a} The clog of all pleasure, the luggage of life,
Is the best can be said for a very good wife.
JOHN WILMOT, EARL OF ROCHESTER, On a Wife.

⁵ Many a man singeth when he home bringeth
His young wife;
If he knew what he brought, weepen he mought,
Or all his life sigheth.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Alfred. (c. 1300)

V—Wife: Her Behavior

⁶ It is not a wife's part to be her husband's judge.
HENRIK IBSEN, Ghosts. Act i.

⁷ My author and disposer, what thou bidd'st,
Unargu'd I obey; so God ordains;
God is thy law, thou mine: to know no more
Is woman's happiest knowledge and her praise.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 635.

For nothing lovelier can be found
In woman, than to study household good,
And good works in her husband to promote.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 232.

The wife, where danger or dishonour lurks,
Safest and sealdest by her husband stays;
Who guards her, or with her the worst endures.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 267.

⁸ Therefore God's universal law
Gave to the man despotic power
Over his female in due awe,
Nor from that right to part an hour,
Smile she or lour.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 1053.

There's nothing situate under heaven's eye
But hath his bound, in earth, in sea, in sky:
The beasts, the fishes, and the winged fowls,
Are their males' subjects and at their controls:
Men, more divine, the masters of all these,
Lords of the wide world and wild watery seas,
Indued with intellectual sense and souls,
Of more pre-eminence than fish and fowls,
Are masters to their females, and their lords;

Then let your will attend on their accords.
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act ii,
sc. 1, l. 16.

⁹ A good wife should be as a looking-glass to represent her husband's face and passion; if he be pleasant, she should be merry; if he laugh, she should smile; if he look sad, she should participate of his sorrow.

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Advice to a Bride. Sec.
140A. (c. A. D. 95)

I have been to you a true and humble wife,
At all times to your will conformable;
Ever in fear to kindle your dislike,
Yea, subject to your countenance, glad or sorry
As I saw it inclined. . . .

I have been your wife, in this obedience,
Upward of twenty years, and have been blest
With many children by you.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 23.

¹⁰ She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xxxi, 27.

¹¹ A virtuous wife rules her husband by obeying him. (Casta ad virum matrona parendo im-perat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 105.

She commandeth her husband, in any equal matter, by constant obeying him.

THOMAS FULLER, *The Holy and the Profane
State: The Good Wife*.

She who ne'er answers till a husband cools,
Or, if she rules him, never shows she rules.
Charms by accepting, by submitting ways,
Yet has her humour most when she obeys.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epist. ii, l. 261.

The cunning wife makes her husband her apron.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 29.

¹² It's a good horse that never stumbles,
And a good wife that never grumbles.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

The wife that expects to have a good name
Is always at home, as if she were lame.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

¹ Come, I will fasten on this sleeve of thine:
Thou art an elm, my husband, I, a vine.
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act II,
sc. 2, l. 175.

Happy in this, she is not yet so old
But she may learn; happier than this,
She is not bred so dull but she can learn;
Happiest of all is that her gentle spirit
Commits itself to yours to be directed.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
III, sc. 2, l. 162.

² Wives may be merry and yet honest too:
We do not act that often jest and laugh;
'Tis old, but true, Still swine eats all the draff.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act IV, sc. 2, l. 105.

³ Such duty as the subject owes the prince
Even such a woman oweth to her husband;
And when she is froward, peevish, sullen,
sour,
And not obedient to his honest will,
What is she but a foul contending rebel
And graceless traitor to her loving lord?
I am ashamed that women are so simple
To offer war when they should kneel for peace,
Or seek for rule, supremacy, and sway,
When they are bound to serve, love and obey.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
V, sc. 2, l. 155.

⁴ That wife alone unsullied credit wins,
Whose virtues can atone her husband's sins,
Thus, while the man has other nymphs in view,
It suits the woman to be doubly true.
SHERRIDAN, A Trip to Scarborough. Act III, sc. 3.

VI—Wife: The Unwilling Wife

⁵ I owe a duty where I cannot love.
AFERA BREN, Abdelazer. Act III, sc. 3.

⁶ O wretched is the dame, to whom the sound,
"Your lord will soon return," no pleasure brings.
MATURIN, Bertram. Act II, sc. 5.

⁷ As a captive I shall follow my captor, and not as a wife a husband. (Victorem captiva sequar, non nupta maritum.)
OVID, Heroides. Epist. III, l. 69.

⁸ An unwilling woman given to a man in marriage is not his wife but his enemy. (Hostis est uxor invita que ad virum numtum datur.)
PLAUTUS, Sickness. Act I, sc. 2, l. 84.

For what is wedlock forced but a hell,
An age of discord and continual strife?
Whereas the contrary bringeth bliss,
And is a pattern of celestial peace.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VI. Act V, sc. 5, l. 62.

⁹ But who may have a more ungracious life
Than a child's bird and a knave's wife?
JOHN SKELTON, Garlande of Laurell, l. 1452.

VII—Wife: Her Control

¹⁰ Avoid being affectionate to your wife or quarreling with her in the presence of strangers:
the one savors of folly, the other of madness.
CLEOBULUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Cleobulus.
Sec. 5.)

¹¹ What a pity it is that nobody knows how to manage a wife, but a bachelor.
GEORGE COLMAN THE ELDER, *The Jealous
Wife*. Act IV, sc. 1. (1761)

Every man can rule an ill wife but him that has her.
JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

¹² If you give your wife a yard, she'll take an ell.
THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. II,
act II, sc. 2.

knows.
THOMAS FULLER, *The Holy and the Profane
State: The Good Husband*.

He that tells his wife news is but newly married.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.
Who, like a fondling, to his wife tells news,
He hath not yet worn out his marriage shoes.
R. WATKINS, Flamma Sine Fumo.

No man should have a secret from his wife. She invariably finds it out.
OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act II.

¹⁴ First get absolute conquest over thyself, and then thou wilt easily govern thy wife.
THOMAS FULLER, Intro. ad Prudentiam, II, 26.

¹⁵ Who lets his wife go to every feast, and his horse drink at every water, shall have neither good wife nor good horse.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

¹⁶ He knocked at his wife's head, until
It opened unto him.
THOMAS HOOD, Tim Turpin.

¹⁷ Fasten the bolt; restrain her; but who shall keep the keepers themselves? The wife is cunning, and begins with them. (Pons seram, cohibe. Sed quis custodiet ipsos Custodes?
Cauta est et ab illis incipit uxor.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. VI, l. 347.

I do think it is their husbands' faults
If wives do fall. . . . Let husbands know Their wives have sense like them; they see and smell

And have their palates both for sweet and sour,
As husbands have.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act IV, sc. 3, l. 87.

¹ Nay, look not big, nor stamp, nor stare, nor fret;

I will be master of what is mine own;
She is my goods, my chattels; she is my house,
My household stuff, my field, my barn,
My horse, my ox, my ass, my any thing;
And here she stands, touch her whoever dare.

SHAKESPEARE, Taming of the Shrew, iii, 2, 230.

Why, man, she is mine own,
And I as rich in having such a jewel
As twenty seas, if all their sand were pearl,
The water nectar and the rocks pure gold.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act II, sc. 4, l. 168.

² Should all despair
That have revolted wives, the tenth of mankind
Would hang themselves.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act I, sc. 2, l. 198.

^{2a} Every evil, but not an evil wife.
Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 11a.

³ Who, for his business, from his wife will run,
Takes the best care to have her business done.
WYCHERLEY, The Country Wife. Act II.

⁴ Break her betimes, and bring her under by force,
Or else the grey mare will be the better horse.
UNKNOWN, Marriage of Wit and Science, II,
1. (1570)

Look you! The grey mare
Is ill to live with, when her whinny shrills
From tile to scullery, and her small good-man
Shrinks in his arm-chair while the fires of hell
Mix with his hearth.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. v, l. 441.

GRAY MAKE THE BETTER HORSE, see under HORSE.

VIII—Wife: The Breeches and the Crowing Hen

⁵ "And now, Madam," I addressed her, "we shall try who shall get the breeches."

ANTONIUS MUSA BRASSAVOLUS, *My Wife and
I*. 1540. (William Beloe, tr.)

I saw many women using hard words to their husbands: some striving for the breeches.
ROBERT GREENE, Works, xi, 219. (1592)

I am sure his wife wore the breeches.
SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Metamorphosis of Ajax,
63. (1596)

Children rule, old men go to school, women wear
the breeches.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy:
Democritus to the Reader. (1621)

⁸ Since you have given us the character of a wife who wears the breeches, pray say something of a husband that wears the petticoat.
ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 482. (1712)

⁷ You must not look to be my master, sir,

Nor talk in th' house as though you wore
the breeches.

JOHN FLETCHER, Rule a Wife and Have a Wife.
Act II. (1624)

⁹ For of all wise words of tongue or pen,
The wisest are these: "Leave pants to men."
S. E. KIER, Maud Muller A-Wheel.

⁹ Between Adam and me the great difference is,

Though a paradise each has been forced to resign,

That he never wore breeches till turned out of his,

While, for want of my breeches, I'm banished from mine.

THOMAS MOORE, Upon Being Obligated to Leave a Pleasant Party from the Want of a Pair of Breeches to Dress for Dinner In.

¹⁰ 'Tis a thing to me extremely displeasing
When the hen talks and the cock is silent.
(C'est chose qui me moult deplaist, Quand poule parle et coq se taist.)
GUILLAUME DE LORRE, Roman de la Rose.
(c. 1250)

They are sorry houses where the hens crow and the cock holds his peace.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruits, Fo. 33 (1578)

III thrives the hapless family that shows
A cock that's silent and a hen that crows.
FRANCIS QUARLES, History of Queen Esther.
Sec. 3. (1630)

III thrives that hapless family that shows
A cock that's silent, and a hen that crows:
I know not which live more unnatural lives,
Obeying husbands, or commanding wives.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.

¹¹ A whistling woman and a crowing hen
Is neither fit for God nor men.

UNKNOWN. (Notes and Queries, I, II, 164.)

Whistling girls and crowing hens
Will surely come to some bad ends.
UNKNOWN. A Cornwall proverb.

Girls that whistle and hens that crow
Will always have fun, wherever they go.
UNKNOWN. A modern variation.

¹² As the goodman saith, so say we;
As the goodwife saith, so it must be.
UNKNOWN. (CHAMBERS, Proverbial Folk-Lore, 7.)

It's my old girl that advises. She has the head.
But I never own to it before her. Discipline must be maintained.

DICKENS, Black House. Ch. 27.

¹³ Wilhelmus . . . submitted at home to a species of government neither laid down in Aristotle or Plato; in short, it partook of the nature of a pure, unmixed tyranny, . . . petticoat government.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Knickerbocker's History of New York. Ch. 4.

There was one species of despotism under which he had long groaned, and that was petticoat government.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Rip Van Winkle.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 149.

² He had by heart the whole detail of woe Xantippe made her good man undergo; How oft she scolded in a day he knew, How many pisspots on the sage she threw— Who took it patiently, and wiped his head: "Rain follows thunder," that was all he said.

POPE, The Wife of Bath: Prologue, l. 387.

Socrates . . . by all accounts undoubted head of the sect of the hen-pecked.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 479. (1712)

³ Seeing how you resemble each other, vilest of wives, vilest of husbands, I wonder you don't agree! (Cum sitis similes paresque vita, Uxor pessima, pessimus maritus, Miror non bene convenire vobis.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. viii, epig. 35.

IX—Wife: The Curtain Lecture

⁴ He was then lying under the discipline of a curtain lecture.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Tatler. No. 243, (1710)

Yes, she may toss her head and hector, But she shall have a curtain lecture.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of a Wife. Canto xxiv, l. 579. (1821)

Curtain-lectures made a restless night.

POPE, Wife of Bath, l. 155. (1717)

For which I have had already two curtain-lectures and a black and blue eye.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Virgin Widow, ii. (1649)

A Curtain Lecture; as it is read by a Country Farmer's Wife to her Good Man.

UNKNOWN, Title of book published 1638.

Mrs. Caudle's Curtain Lectures.

DOUGLAS JERROLD. Title of book. (1846)

⁵ Woman, wakeful woman's never weary, Above all, when she waits to thump her deary.

R. H. BARHAM, The Ghost.

⁶ If in your censure you prove sweet to me, I little care, believe 't, how sour you be.

RICHARD BRATSWAITE, A Boulster Lecture: Dedication. (1640)

Cur'd be the man, the poorest wretch in life, The crouching vassal, to the tyrant wife! . . .

Who must to her his dear friend's secret tell;

Who dreads a curtain lecture worse than hell.

Were such the wife had fallen to my part, I'd break her spirit or I'd break her heart.

BURNS, The Henpeck'd Husband.

⁷ The wife was pretty, trifling, childish, weak; She could not think, but would not cease to speak.

GEORGE CRABBE, Tales: The Struggles of Conscience.

⁸ For me, I neither know nor care Whether a Parson ought to wear A black dress or a white dress;

Fill'd with a trouble of my own,—

A Wife who preaches in her gown,

And lectures in her night-dress!

THOMAS HOOD, The Surplice Question.

She shakes the curtains with her kind advice.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. v, l. 79.

¹⁰ The bed that holds a wife is never free from wrangling; no sleep is to be got there! (Semper habet litas alteraque jurgia lectus In quo nupto jacet; minimum dormitur in illo.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 268.

¹¹ I find my wife has something in her gizzard that only wants an opportunity of being provoked to bring up.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 17 June, 1668.

¹² The contentions of a wife are a continual dropping.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xix, 13.

A continual dropping in a very rainy day and a contentious woman are alike.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 15.

¹³

My lord shall never rest;

I 'll watch him, tame and talk him out of patience;

His bed shall seem a school, his board a shrift.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 22.

¹⁴

It is well within the order of things

That man should listen when his mate sings;

But the true male never yet walked

Who liked to listen when his mate talked.

ANNA WICKHAM, The Affinity.

I would be married to a full man,

As would all women since the world began;

But from a wealth of living I have proved

I must be silent, if I would be loved.

ANNA WICKHAM, The Affinity.

X—Wife: Deliverance

¹⁵

"What? rise again with all one's bones," Quoth Giles, "I hope you fib:

I trusted, when I went to Heaven,
To go without my rib."
S. T. COLERIDGE, Epigram.

Oh! 'tis a precious thing, when wives are dead,
To find such numbers who will serve instead:
And in whatever state a man be thrown,
'Tis that precisely they would wish their own.
GEORGE CRABBE, Tales: The Learned Boy, l. 17.

Here lies my wife: here let her lie!
Now she's at rest, and so am I.
DRYDEN, Suggested Epitaph.

Down Theseus went to hell, Pirith his friend to find:
O that wives in these our days were to their mates as kind!
NICHOLAS GRIMALDI, Of Friendship.

Lycoris has buried all the female friends she had,
Fabianus: would she were the friend of my wife! (Omnes quas habuit, Fabiane, Lycoris amicas extulit. Uxor! fiat amica mea.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, epig. 24.

Already, Phileros, your seventh wife is being buried in your field. No man's field brings him greater profit than yours, Phileros. (Septima jam, Phileros, tibi conditur uxor in agro. Plus nulli, Phileros, quam tibi reddit ager.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 43.

A dead wife under the table is the best goods
in a man's house.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. I.

WILDE, OSCAR

I heard his golden voice and marked him trace
Under the common thing the hidden grace,
And conjure wonder out of emptiness,
Till mean things put on beauty like a dress
And all the world was an enchanted place.
ALFRED BRUCE DOUGLAS, The Dead Poet.

A delicate design that lay like lace
Upon the purple velvet of disgrace.
JOHN MACY, Couplets in Criticism: Wilde.

What has Oscar in common with art? except that he dines at our tables and picks from our platters the plums for the puddings he peddles in the provinces. Oscar . . . has the courage of the opinions . . . of others.
JAMES McNEILL WHISTLER, The (London)
World, 17 Nov., 1886.

As for borrowing Mr. Whistler's ideas about art, the only thoroughly original ideas I have ever heard him express have had reference to his own superiority as a painter over painters greater than himself.

OSCAR WILDE, Truth, 9 Jan., 1890.

Oscar, bourgeois malgré lui.

ALEXANDER MACGREGOR ROSE, Kaiser & Co.
Written for the Toronto Herald, in 1897, and signed A. M. R. Gordon, by which name Rose was known at the time. He had been minister of the Free Church, at Orkney, Scotland, and was shipped off to America because of intemperance. Erroneously attributed to Rodney Blake, pseudonym of
W. M. Clemens. Recited by Captain J. B.
Coghlan at the Union League Club, N. Y.,
21 April, 1899, causing an international incident. (See STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems.)

This was the "Day" foretold by yours and you
In whispers here, and there with beery clamours—
You and your rat-hole spies and blustering crew
Of loud Potsdamers.
And lo, there dawns another, swift and stern,
When on the wheels of wrath, by Justice'
token,
Breaker of God's own Peace, you shall in turn Yourself be broken.
SIR OWEN SEAMAN, Dies Ira: To the German
Kaiser. Punch, 19 Aug., 1914.

Thou Blot

Smear
Across the Day.
WILLIAM WATSON, To the German Emperor
after the Sack of Louvain.

Remember the German people are the chosen of God. On me, the German Emperor, the spirit of God has descended. I am His sword,
His weapon, and His viceregent.

WILL

I.—Will: Apophthegms

¹ Will without power is like children playing at soldiers.

GEORGE CANNING, The Rovers. Act iv.

Willful will do't, that's the word.

CONORREVE, The Way of the World. Act iv, sc. 2.

² Here vigor fail'd the towering fantasy:
But yet the will roll'd onward, like a wheel
In even motion, by the Love impell'd,
That moves the sun in Heaven and all the stars.
DANTE, Paradiso. Canto xxxiii. (Cary, tr.)

A breath of will blows eternally through the universe of souls in the direction of the Right and Necessary.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

³ 'T is what you will,—or will be what you would.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week i, day 3. (Sylvester, tr.)

He who is firm in will molds the world to himself. (Aber wer fest auf dem Sinne beharrt, der bildet die Welt sich.)

GOETHE, Hermann und Dorothea. Pt. ix, l. 303.

With will one can do anything.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 7.

All Life needs for life is possible to will.

TENNYSON, Love and Duty, l. 82.

⁴ The education of the will is the object of our existence.

⁶ To him that will, ways are not wanting.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jocula Prudentum. No. 726. (1640)

I fall back on my favourite proverb, "Where there's a will there's a way."

BULWER-LYTTON, The Caxtons. Pt. xviii, ch. 5.

The French form of the proverb is, "Vouloir c'est pouvoir."

When there's a will there's a way.

BERNARD SHAW, Fanny's First Play: Preface.

In idle wishes fools supinely stay;

Be there a will, and wisdom finds a way.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Birth of Flattery.

⁷ Where your will is ready, your feet are light.

GEORGE HIBBERT, Jocula Prudentum. No. 444.

A willing heart adds feather to the beel.

JOANNA BAILLIE, De Montfort. Act iii, sc. 2.

⁸ Will will have will though will woe win.

JOHN HAYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11.

Will is the cause of woe.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

⁹ I will this, I command this: let my will be the voucher for the deed. (Hoc volo, sic jubeo, sit pro ratione voluntas.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 223.

We'll take the will for the deed.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 49.

The will for deed I do accept.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week ii, day 3. (Sylvester, tr.)

You must take the will for the deed.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii; COLLEY CIBBER, The Rival Fools. Act iii.

¹⁰ Will thou, or will thou not, we will have our will.

LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus ix, l. 153.

¹¹ A tender heart; a will inflexible.

LONGFELLOW, John Endicott. Act iii, sc. 2.

¹² Not my will, but thine, be done.

New Testament: Luke, xxii, 42. See also under RESIGNATION.

¹³ The man who has the will to undergo all labor may win to any goal. (Ο άνθρωπος βουλόμενος δε ἀνθρώπων πονείν παρ' δε γένοιτο.)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 539.

¹⁴ The unconquerable will.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 106.

The star of the unconquered will,

He rises in my breast,

Serene, and resolute, and still,

And calm, and self-possessed.

LONGFELLOW, The Light of Stars. St. 7.

¹⁵ Even though the power be wanting, yet the will is praiseworthy. (Ut desint vires, tamen est laudanda voluntas.)

OVID, Epistulae ex Ponto. Bk. iii, epia. 4, l. 79.

Let not thy Will roar, when thy Power can but whisper.

FULLER, Introductio ad Prudentiam, i, 14.

¹⁶ Our wills and fates do so contrary run

That our devices still are overthrown.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 221.

At war 'twixt will and will not,

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, ii, 2, 33.

My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,
Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous shores
Of will and judgement.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, ii, 2, 63.

He wants wit that wants resolved will.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act ii, sc. 6, l. 12.

¹⁷ What he will be does, and does so much

That proof is call'd impossibility.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, v, 5, 28.

¹ Will was his guide, and grief led him astray.
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto i, st. 12.

² O, well for him whose will is strong!
He suffers, but he will not suffer long;
He suffers, but he cannot suffer wrong.
TENNYSON, Will, l. 1.

And I compel all creatures to my will.
TENNYSON, Geraint and Enid, l. 672.

Peggy has a whim of iron.

OLIVER HERFORD, referring to his wife, and explaining that the atrocious hat he was wearing was a whim of hers.

³ Nothing is so easy but it is difficult if you do it against your will. (Nullast tam facilis res quin difficilis siet. Quam invitus facias.)
TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 805.

Nothing is troublesome that we do willingly.
THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xvi, p. t11

⁵ The Will is the Man.
JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianæ. No. 29.

II—Will: Free Will

⁶ Where we are free to act, we are also free to refrain from acting, and where we are able to say No we are also able to say Yes. (Kai de ois to nai, kai to vai.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. iii, ch. 5, sec. 2.

⁷ No one can rob us of our free will. (Ἀπὸ τοῦ ἑαυτοῦ οὐ γίνεταί.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. iii, ch. 22, sec. 105.

The commander of the forces of a large State may be carried off, but the will of even a common man cannot be taken from him.

CONFUCIUS, Analectæ. Bk. ix, ch. 25.

The will cannot be compelled. (Voluntas non potest cogi.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

⁸ To deny the freedom of the will is to make morality impossible.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies: Calvinism.

⁹ All theory is against the freedom of the will, all experience for it.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1778.)

Say not the will of man is free
Within the limits of his soul—

Who from his heritage can see?

Who can his destiny control?

DONALD A. MACKENZIE, Free Will.

¹⁰ Good he made thee, but to persevere
He left it in thy power, ordain'd thy will
By nature free, not over-ruled by Fate

Inextricable, or strict necessity.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 525.

And binding Nature fast in Fate,
Left free the human Will.

Poet, Universal Prayer. St. 3.

¹¹ The only way of setting the will free is to deliver it from wilfulness.

J. C. AND A. W. HARR, Guesses at Truth.

¹² Our wills are ours, we know not how;
Our wills are ours, to make them thine.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam: Introduction. St. 4.

WILLOW

¹³ In the misty twilight
You can see their hair,

Weeping water maidens

That were once so fair.

WALTER PRICHARD EATON, The Willows.

¹⁴ Willow, in thy breezy moan,
I can hear a deeper tone;
Through thy leaves come whispering low,
Faint sweet sounds of long ago—

Willow, sighing willow!

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEIMANN, Willow Song.

¹⁵ Willows are weak, yet they bind other wood.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentium.

The wind aways the willow. (Fêng 'chui liu.)
UNKNOWN. A Chinese proverb.

¹⁶ Thou art to all lost love the best,
The only true plant found,
Wherewith young men and maids distress,
And left of love, are crown'd.

When once the lover's rose is dead,
Or laid aside forlorn,

Then willow-garlands, 'bout the head,

Bedew'd with tears, are worn.

ROBERT HERRICK, To the Willow-Trees.

¹⁷ We hanged our harps upon the willows in the midst thereof.

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxvii, 2.

¹⁸ To the brook and the willow that heard him complain,

Ah willow, willow,

Poor Colin sat weeping and told them his pain;

Ah willow, willow; ah willow, willow.

NICHOLAS ROWE, Song: Ah Willow.

On a tree by a river a little tom-tit

Sang, "Willow, titwillow, titwillow!"

And I said to him, "Dicky-bird, why do you sit Singing, 'Willow, titwillow, titwillow?'"

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act II.

Phyllis hath forsaken me,

Which makes me wear the willow-tree.

UNKNOWN, The Willow-Tree. (Ramus, As-Asquet, Ser. iii, bk. ii, No. 2.)

¹
Know ye the willow-tree Whose grey leaves quiver,
Whispering gloomily To yon pale river?
Lady, at even-tide Wander not near it:
They say its branches hide A sad lost spirit!
W. M. THACKERAY, The Willow-Tree.

²
My mother had a maid call'd Barbara:
She was in love, and he she loved proved mad
And did forsake her: she had a song of 'willow';
An old thing 'twas, but it express'd her fortune,
And she died singing it.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 26.

The poor soul sat sighing by a sycamore tree,
Sing all a green willow;
Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee,
Sing willow, willow, willow:
The fresh streams ran by her, and murmur'd her moans;
Sing willow, willow, willow;
Her salt tears fell from her, and soften'd the stones;
Sing willow, willow, willow.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 41.

A poor soul sat sighing under a sycamore tree;
O willow, willow, willow!
With his hand on his bosom, his head on his knee:
O willow, willow, willow!
Sing, O the green willow shall be my garland.
UNKNOWN, A Lover's Complaint Being Forsaken of His Love. (PEARCE, Reliques. Ser. i, bk. II, No. 8.)

All a green willow is my garland.
JOHN HAYWOOD, The Green Willow.

WILSON, WOODROW

³
And if he failed in part,
Only the years are strong
With patience that waits long;
With wisdom that sees far.
The years shall right the balance tilted wrong,
The years shall set upon his brows a star.
ADA ALDEN, Ave.

⁴
I served Woodrow Wilson for five years.
He is standing at the throne of a God whose approval he won and has received. As he looks down from there, I say to him: "I did my best. I am doing it now. You are still the captain of my soul."
NEWTON D. BAKER, Speech, Democratic Convention, 28 June, 1924.

⁵
He was sole out-post for that world-old hope
Humanity can never quite release:
He gave his heart, his life, his soul, to hold

Our eyes upon the gleam of lasting peace.
S. OMAR BARKER, Woodrow Wilson.

⁶
Spirit long shaping for sublime endeavor,
A Sword of God, the gleaming metal came
From stern Scotch ancestry, where whatsoever
Was true, was pure, was noble, won acclaim.
KATHARINE LEE BATES, Woodrow Wilson.

Here is the man who imposed himself as the supreme head of the continental empire of the United States. Who, further, handled that colossal power as if it were a sword in his hand.
... With this and the power of his thought he ends the war. And then in person he sets out to save humanity by ending war for ever. ... Wilson adventured for the whole of the human race.
Not as a servant, but as a champion. ... In Wilson, the whole of mankind breaks camp, sets out from home and wrestles with the universe and its gods.

WILLIAM BOLITHO, Twelve Against the Gods:
Woodrow Wilson, p. 332.

⁸
Beleaguered Liberty takes heart again,
Hearing afar the rescuing bugles blow;
And even in the strongholds of the foe
His name becomes the whispered hope of men.
ROBERT UNDERWOOD JOHNSON, The Leader.

⁹
What is the thing about his face
That makes me dream of something dim—
A crucifix at some torn place
And the shell-scarred face of Him?
HUBERT KELLEY, The Warrior Passes.

To Woodrow Wilson, the apparent failure, belongs the undying honour, which will grow with the growing centuries, of having saved
the "little child that shall lead them yet."

GEN. JAN CHRISTIAAN SMUTS, Letter, 8 Jan.,
1921. (N. Y. Evening Post, March 2, 1921.)

It was the human spirit itself that failed at Paris. ... It was not Wilson who failed there, but humanity itself. It was not the statesmen that failed, so much as the spirit of the peoples behind them.

GENERAL JAN SMUTS, Letter, 8 Jan., 1921.

I had to deal in the peace conference with two men, one of whom thought he was Napoleon and the other Jesus Christ.

GEORGES CLEMENCEAU, referring to Lloyd
George and Woodrow Wilson.

No man ever more fully exemplified the adage that the pen is mightier than the sword.
MARK SULLIVAN, of Wilson. (Our Times, v, 274.)

Here in his vast cavern, Æolus, their king, curbs by his authority the struggling winds and the roaring gales. (Hic vasto rex Æolus antro Luctantis ventos tempestatesque sonoras Imperio premit.)
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 53.

II—Wind: Description

The hushed winds wail with feeble moan
Like infant charity.

JOANNA BAILLIE, Orrin. Act iii, sc. 1.

Blow, Boreas, foe to human kind!
Blow, blustering, freezing, piercing wind!
Blow, that thy force I may rehearse,
While all my thoughts congeal to verse!
JOHN BANCROFT, To Boreas.

Cease, rude Boreas! blustering raller!
G. A. STEVENS, The Storm.

The wind
Sweeps the broad forest in its summer prime,
As when some master-hand exulting sweeps
The keys of some great organ.
BRYANT, Among the Trees, l. 63.

Wind of the sunny south! oh, still delay
In the gay woods and in the golden air,
Like to a good old age released from care,
Journeying, in long serenity, away.
BRYANT, October, l. 5.

And the South Wind—he was dressed
With a ribbon round his breast
That floated, flapped, and fluttered

In a riotous unrest,
And a drapery of mist
From the shoulder to the wrist
Floating backward with the motion of the waving hand he kissed.
*JAMES WYLLIE, The South Wind and
the Sun.*

Where hast thou wandered, gentle gale, to find
The perfumes thou dost bring?
BRYANT, May Evening. St. 4.

The faint old man shall lean his silver head
To feel thee; thou shalt kiss the child asleep.
BRYANT, Evening Wind. St. 4.

A breeze came wandering from the sky,
Light as the whispers of a dream;
He put the o'erhanging grasses by,
And softly stooped to kiss the stream,
The pretty stream, the flattered stream,
The shy, yet unreluctant stream.
BRYANT, The Wind and Stream. St. 2.

As winds come lightly whispering from the west,
Kissing, not ruffling the blue deep's serene.
BYRON, Child Harold. Canto ii, st. 70.

The winds with wonder whist,
Smoothly the waters kist.
*MILTON, On the Morning of Christ's Nativity,
l. 64.*

Mildly and soft the western breeze
Just kissed the lake, just stirred the trees.
SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto iii, st. 2.

There paused to shut the door
A fellow called the Wind,
With mystery before,
And reticence behind.
BLISS CARMAN, At the Granite Gate.

The wind is awake, pretty leaves, pretty leaves,
Heed not what he says, he deceives, he de-ceives;
Over and over To the lowly clover
He has lisped the same love (and forgotten it, too);
He'll be lisping and pledging to you.
JOHN VANCE CHENEY, The Way of It.

Loud wind, strong wind, sweeping o'er the mountains,
Fresh wind, free wind, blowing from the sea,

Pour forth thy vials like streams from airy fountains,
Draughts of life to me.
DINAH MARIA MULLOCK CRAIK, North Wind.

The winds that never moderation knew,
Afraid to blow too much, too faintly blew;
Or out of breath with joy, could not enlarge
Their straighten'd lungs.
DRYDEN, Astruc Reduc, l. 242.

The wind moans, like a long wail from some despairing soul shut out in the awful storm!
W. H. GIBSON, Pastoral Days: Winter.

Have you heard the wind go "Yo-o-o-o-o"?
Tis a pitiful sound to hear.
EVERETT FIELD, The Night Wind.

Perhaps the wind
Walls so in winter for the summer's dead,
And all sad sounds are nature's funeral cries
For what has been and is not.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. I.

No stir of air was there,
Not so much life as on a summer's day
Robs not one light seed from the feather'd grass,
But where the dead leaf fell, there did it
rest.

KEATS, Hyperion. Bk. I, l. 7.

Nought but a lovely sighing of the wind
Along the reedy stream; a half-heard strain,
Full of sweet desolation—balmy pain.

KEATS, I Stood Tip-toe Upon a Little Hill.

So near to mute the zephyrs flute
That only leaflets dance.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Outer and Inner. St. 1.

I hear the wind among the trees
Playing celestial symphonies;
I see the branches downward bent,
Like keys of some great instrument.

LONGFELLOW, A Day of Sunshine. St. 3.

Chill airs and wintry winds! my ear
Has grown familiar with your song;
I hear it in the opening year,
I listen, and it cheers me long.

LONGFELLOW, Woods in Winter. St. 7.

It's a warm wind, the west wind, full of birds'
cries;

I never hear the west wind but tears are in my eyes.

For it comes from the west lands, the old brown hills.

And April's in the west wind, and daffodils.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The West Wind.

While rocking winds are piping loud,
Or usher'd with a shower still,
When the gust hath blown his fill,
Ending on the rustling leaves,
With minute drops from off the eaves.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 126.

Never does a wilder song
Steal the breezy lyre along,
When the wind in odours dying
Weaves it with enamour'd sighing.

THOMAS MOORE, To Ross.

Mournfully, oh, mournfully,
The midnight wind doth sigh,
Like some sweet plaintive melody
Of ages long gone by.

WILLIAM MOTTERSWELL, The Midnight Wind.

The wind was a torrent of darkness among the gusty trees.

ALFRED NOYES, The Highwayman.

Who has seen the wind?
Neither you nor I:

But when the trees bow down their heads,
The wind is passing by.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Who Has Seen the Wind?

The gypsy wind goes down the night;
I hear him lilt his wander-call,
And to the old divine delight
Am I athrall.

CLINTON SCOLLARD, The Gypsy Wind.

The swiftest harts have posted you by land;
And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails,

To make your vessel nimble.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act II, sc. 4, l. 27.

Hamlet: The air bites shrewdly; it is very cold.

Horatio: It is a nipping and an eager air.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act I, sc. 4, l. 1.

The southern wind
Doth play the trumpet to his purposes,

And by his hollow whistling in the leaves
Foretells a tempest and a blustering day.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 1, l. 3.

We shall be winnow'd with so rough a wind
That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff,
And good from bad and no partition.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 194.

Blow, winds, and crack your cheeks! rage! blow!
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act III, sc. 2, l. 1.

A fresher gale
Begins to wave the wood and stir the stream, Sweeping with shadowy gust the fields of corn,

While the quail clamours for his running mate.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 1654.

Wild as the winds, across the howling waste
Of mighty waters.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 163.

I hear the little children of the wind
Crying solitary in lonely places.

WILLIAM SHARP, Little Children of the Wind.

O wild West Wind, thou breath of Autumn's being,

Thou, from whose unseen presence the leaves
dead

Are driven, like ghosts from an enchanter fleeing,

Yellow, and black, and pale, and hectic red,
Pestilence-stricken multitudes.

SHELLEY, Ode to the West Wind. Sec. 1.

O thou
Who chariotest to their dark wintry bed
The winged seeds, where they lie cold and low,
Each like a corpse within its grave, until Thine azure sister of the Spring shall blow
Her clarion o'er the dreaming earth.

SHELLEY, Ode to the West Wind. Sec. 1.

1 A wind arose among the pines; it shook
The clinging music from their boughs, and then
Low, sweet, faint sounds, like the farewell of ghosts,
Were heard: OH, FOLLOW, FOLLOW, FOLLOW
ME!

SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act II, sc. 1, 156.
And wind, that grand old harper, smote
His thunder-harp of pines.

ALEXANDER SMITH, A Life Drama. Sc. 2.
A wind arose and rush'd upon the South,
And shook the songs, the whispers, and the shrieks
Of the wild woods together; and a Voice
Went with it, "Follow, follow, thou shalt win."
TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. i, l. 96.

2 Sweet and low, sweet and low,
Wind of the western sea,
Low, low, breathe and blow,
Wind of the western sea!
TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. II, l. 456.

3 Do ye now dare, O winds, without command of mine, to mingle earth and sky, and raise confusion thus?

(Jam cælum terramque meo sine numine, venti, Miscere et tantas audetis tollere moles?)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 133. Neptune is addressing the winds, which Æolus, at the request of Juno, has loosed against the Trojan fleet.

WINDOW

4 Each window like a pill'ry appears,
With heads thrust thro' nail'd by the ears.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. II, canto III, l. 391.

5 From a window richly paint
With lives of many divers saint.
CHAUCER, Chaucer's Dream, l. 1847.
And diamonded with panes of quaint device
Indenumerable, of stains and splendid dyes.

KEATS, Rue of St. Agnes. St. 24.
And storied windows richly dight,
Casting a dim religious light.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 159.
Rich windows that exclude the light,
And passages that lead to nothing.

THOMAS GRAY, A Long Story, l. 7.
"Take!" quod she, and clapt the window to.
CHAUCER, The Miller's Tale, l. 554.

7 Better keep yourself clean and bright: you are the window through which you must see the world.

Of wayside inns,

When the rain begins

To darken the drear Novembers.

LONGFELLOW, Catawba Wine. St. 1.

Sing! Who sings

To her who weareth a hundred rings?

Ah, who is this lady fine?

The Vine, boys, the Vine!

The mother of the mighty Wine,

A roamer is she O'er wall and tree,

And sometimes very good company.

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, A Bacchanalian Song.

¹³ With crimson juice the thirsty southern sky

Sucks from the hills where buried armies lie,

So that the dreamy passion it imparts

Is drawn from heroes' bones and lovers' hearts.

O. W. HOLMES, The Banker's Secret, l. 127.

Wines that, heaven knows when,

Had suck'd the fire of some forgotten sun,

And kept it thro' a hundred years of gloom.

TENNISON, The Lover's Tale, l. 192.

¹⁴ O Varus, plant no tree in preference to the sacred vine. (Nullam, Vare, sacra vite prius severis arborem.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 18, l. 1.

Now drown care in wine. (Nunc vino pellite curas.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 7, l. 32.

Dispel the chill, piling high the logs upon the fire, and pour out with generous hand the four year old wine from the Sabine jar.

(Dissolve frigus ligna super foco
Large reponens atque benignius
Deprome quadrimum Sabina.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 9, l. 5.

When Horace wrote his noble verse,

His brilliant, glowing line,

He must have gone to bed the worse

For good Falernian wine.

No poet yet could praise the rose

In verse that so serenely flows

Unless he dipped his Roman nose

In good Falernian wine.

THEODORE MAYNARD, A Tankard of Ale.

Nor are cankering cares dispelled except by Bacchus' gift. (Neque Mordaces aliter diffugiunt sollicitudines.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 18, l. 4.

Bacchus opens the gate of the heart. (Aperit præcordia Liber.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 4, l. 89.

Bacchus scatters carking cares. (Dissipat Evhius curas edaces.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 11, l. 17.

Come, thou monarch of the vine,
Plump Bacchus with pink eye!
In thy fets our cares be drown'd,
With thy grapes our hairs be crown'd:
Cup us, till the world go round.

SHAKESPEARE, Anthony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 120.

Bacchus, ever fair and ever young.

DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 54.

Bacchus, that first from out the purple grape,
Crush'd the sweet poison of misused wine.

MILTON, Comus, l. 46.

He turn'd a fruit to an enchantment
Which cheers the sad, revives the old, inspires
The young, makes Weariness forget his toll,
And Fear her danger; opens a new world
When this, the present, falls.

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act i, sc. 2.

Mighty to inspire new hopes and powerful
To drown the bitterness of cares.

(Spes donare novas largus amaraque Curarum eluere efficac.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 12, l. 19.

Drown'd all in Rhenish and the sleepy mead.

JOHN KEATS, The Eve of St. Agnes. St. 39.

For fifty years the liquid joy has been curbed Within these ribs of oak waiting to touch the lips of man.

R. G. INGHAM, Works. Vol. vii, p. 348.

But that which most doth take my Muse and me,
Is a pure cup of rich Canary wine,

Which is the Mermaid's now, but shall be mine.

BEN JONSON, Epigrams: No. 101, Inviting a Friend to Supper.

Wine it is the milk of Venus,
And the poet's horse accounted:
Ply it and you all are mounted.

BEN JONSON, Verses Placed Over the Door at the Entrance into the Apollo Room at the Devil Tavern.

O for a beaker full of the warm South,
Full of the true, the blushful Hippocrene.

JOHN KEATS, Ode to a Nightingale. St. 2.

When thirsty grief in Wine we steep,
When healths and draughts go free,
Fishes that tipple in the deep,
Know no such liberty.

RICHARD LOVELACE, To Althea, from Prison.

Attic honey, thicken the nectar-like Falernian.
Such drink deserves to be mixed by Ganymede. (Attica nectarum turbatis mella Falernum. Misceri decet hoc a Ganymede merum.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xli, epig. 108. To blend with honey, the wine had to be old.
(PLINY, Historia Naturalis, xlv, 8.)

Note the superiority of wine over Venus!
I may say the magnanimity of wine; our jealousy turns on him that will not share!
GEORGE MEREDITH, The Egoist. Ch. 19.

An aged Burgundy runs with a beardless Port.
I cherish the fancy that Port speaks the sentences of wisdom, Burgundy sings the inspired Ode.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Egoist. Ch. xx.

As with new wine intoxicated both,
They swim in mirth, and fancy that they feel
Divinity within them breeding wings
Wherewith to scorn the earth.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 1008.

Wine to the poet is a winged steed:
Those who drink water gain but little speed.
(Οἷος τοῦ χαλάρου νέας νῆξος ἵππος ἀνέσθαι δι' οἶνον ὀδύς δι' οἶνον ἄνθρωπος.)

NICANORUS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xli, epig.
29.)

Perplex no more with Human or Divine,
To-morrow's tangle to the winds resign,
And lose your fingers in the tresses of
The Cypress-slender Minister of Wine.

OSCAR REYNOLDS, Rebél. St. 41. (Pungent, tr.)

Better be jocund with the fruitful Grape
Than sadden after none, or bitter Fruit.

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubáiyát. St. 54. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

You know, my Friends, with what a brave
Carousal

I made a second marriage in my house;
Divorced old barren Reason from my Bed,
And took the Daughter of the Vine to spouse.

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubáiyát. St. 55. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

The Grape that can with Logic absolute
The Two-and-Seventy jarring Sects confute:
The sovereign Alchemist that in a trice
Life's leaden metal into Gold transmute.

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubáiyát. St. 59. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

And much as Wine has play'd the Infidel,
And robb'd me of my Robe of Honour—Well,
I wonder often what the Vintners buy
One half so precious as the stuff they sell.

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubáiyát. St. 95. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

O sweet essence! How good, I should say, were your former contents, when the remains of them smell so delicious! (O suavis anima, quale in te dicam bonum Ante hac fuisse;
tales cum sint reliquiae!)

PHILIPUS, Fables. Bk. III, fab. 1, l. 5. The ass to the empty wine-jar.

Wine whets the wit, improves its native force,
And gives a pleasant flavour to discourse.

JOHN POMFREY, The Choice, l. 55.

So will I pass the night with wine-cup and
with song,

Till dawn shall cast its rays upon my wine.
(Sic noctem patera, sic ducam carmine, donec incipiat radios in mea vina dies.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iv, eleg. 6, l. 85.

Wine that maketh glad the heart of man.
Old Testament: Psalms, cly, 15. (Vinum bonum laetificet cor hominis.—Vulgate.)

Day and night my thoughts incline
To the blandishments of wine,
Jars were made to drain, I think;
Wine, I know, was made to drink.

R. H. STODDARD, A Jar of Wine.

Drink no longer water, but use a little wine for thy stomach's sake.

New Testament: I Timothy, v, 23.

Wine fills the veins, and healths are understood

To give our friends a tittle to our blood.

EDMUND WALLER, For Drinking of Healths,
l. 21. See also DRINKING: HEALTHS.

Corn shall make the young men cheerful, and new wine the maids.

Old Testament: Zechariah, ix, 17.

III—Wine: Its Faults

Wine in excess keeps neither secrets nor promises.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. II, ch. 43.

Wine hath drowned more men than the sea.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

So Noah, when he anchor'd safe on
The mountain's top, his lofty haven,
And all the passengers he bore
Were on the new world set ashore,
He made it next his chief design
To plant and propagate a vine,
Which since has overwhelm'd and drown'd
Far greater numbers, on dry ground,
Of wretched mankind, one by one,
Than all the flood before had done.

BUTLER, Satira Upon Drunkenness, l. 105.

And Noah he often said to his wife when he sat down to dine,

"I don't care where the water goes if it doesn't get into the wine."

G. K. CHESTERTON, The Flying Inn.

It was a wet world—and I gave it wine.
EDMUND VANCE COOKE, From the Book of Ex- tensions: Noah.

Wine turns a man inside outwards.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

Wine makes all sorts of creatures at table.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jocula Prudentum.

Inflaming wine, pernicious to mankind,
Unnerves the limbs, and dulls the noble mind.

HOMER, Iliad, Bk. vi, l. 330. (Pope, tr.)

And wine can of their wits the wise beguile,
Make the sage frolic, and the serious smile.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xiv, l. 520. (Pope, tr.)

He rails bitterly against Bacchus, and swears
there's a devil in every berry of his grape.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. II, No. 3.

There is a devil in every berry of the grape.

The Koran. Ch. 2.

O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee devil!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act II, sc. 3, l. 283.

Wine makes a man better pleased with himself. . . . But the danger is, that while a man grows better pleased with himself, he may be growing less pleasing to others. Wine gives a man nothing. . . . It only puts in motion what had been locked up in frost.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 28 April, 1778.)

Their sinfulness is greater than their use.
The Koran. Ch. 2. Of wine and gambling.

And when night
Darkens the streets, then wander forth the sons

Of Belial, flown with insolence and wine.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. I, l. 500.

¹ That's the great evil in wine: it catches you by the feet, it's a cunning wrestler. (Magnum hoc vitium vino est: Pedes captat primum, luctator doloust.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 1250. (Act v, sc. 1.)

² Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xx, 1.

Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babbling? who hath wounds without cause? who hath redness of eyes? They that tarry long at the wine.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiii, 29, 30.

Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his colour in the cup. . . . At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiii, 31, 32.

Take especial care that thou delight not in wine; for there never was any man that came to honour or preferment that loved it; for it transformeth a man into a beast, decayeth health, poisoneth the breath, destroyeth natural heat, deformeth the face, rotteth the teeth, and maketh a man contemptible.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, Instructions to His Son.

³ But the wine is bright at the goblet's brim, Though the poison lurk beneath.

D. G. ROSSETTI, The King's Tragedy. St. 61.

⁴ Wine kindles wrath. (Vinum incendit iram.)

SENECA, De ira. Bk. ii, sec. 19.

IV—Wine and Love

⁵ What fool is he that shadows seeks,
And may the substance gain!

Then if thou'lt have me love a lass,

Let it be one that's kind,

Else I'm a servant to the glass

That's with Canary lined.

ALEXANDER BROOME, The Resolve.

⁶ Where there is no wine there is no love.
(Οπου ή μηδέρ ήρως ούκ ήρως ήρως.)

EUPHRIDES, Baccha, l. 773.

⁷ A generous bottle and a lovesome she,
Are th' only joys in nature next to thee.

THOMAS ORWAY, Epistle to Mr. Duke.

⁸ Wine gives courage and makes men apt for passion. (Vina parant animos, faciliusque caloribus aptos.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 227.

Wine prepares the heart for love, unless you take too much. (Vina parant animum vereri, nisi plurima sumas.)

OVID, Remedium Amoris, l. 805.

What man can pretend to be a believer in love, who is an abjurer of wine? 'T is the test by which the lover knows his own heart. Fill a dozen bumpers to a dozen beauties, and she that flouts atop is the maid that has bewitched you.

SHERIDAN, School for Scandal. Act iii, sc. 3.

Bacchus and Phœbus are by Jove allied,
And each by other's timely beat supplied.

EDMUND WALLER, Drinking of Healths, l. 17.

⁹ Often have I sought to banish love's pain with wine, but grief turned all the wine to tears.
(Sæpe ego temptavi curas depellere vino;
At dolor in lacrimas verteret omne merum.)

TRAVILLUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. 5, l. 37.

Weep on, weep on, my pouting vine!

Heav'n grant no tears, but tears of wine.

THOMAS MOORE, Anacreontic: Press the Grape.

¹⁰ Wine gives us liberty, love takes it away.

Wine makes us princes, love makes us beggars.

WYCHERLEY, The Country Wife. Act i.

V—Wine and Women

^{10a} This is wisdom: to love wine,
Beauty, and the spring divine;
That is enough. The rest is vain.

(C'est la sagesse: aimer le vin,

La beauté, le printemps divin;

Cela suffit. La reste est vain.)

THÉODORE DE BANVILLE, C'est la Sagesse.

¹¹ I may not here omit those two main plagues and common dotages of human kind, wine and women, which have infatuated and besotted myriads of people; they go commonly together.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. 2, mem. 3, subs. 13.

¹² Few things surpass old wine; and they may preach

Who please,—the more because they preach in vain,—

Let us have wine and women, mirth and laughter,

Sermons and soda-water the day after.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 178.

¹³ Women and wine do make a man

A dotting fool all that they can.

EVANS, Revised Withals Dictionary. (1586)

¹⁴ Women, wine, and dice

Will bring a man to lice.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, Fo. 73.

Women and wine, game and deceit,

Make the wealth small and the wants great.

¹⁵ Wine and women into apostasy

Cause wise men to fall.

UNKNOWN, The Remedy of Love. (c. 1532).¹

¹⁷ Wine and wenches empty men's purses.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Love of a woman and a bottle of wine

Are sweet for a season, but last for a time.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 55.

¹ Who loves not women, wine, and song,
Remains a fool his whole life long.
(Wer nicht liebt Weiber, Wein, und Gesang, Der bleibt ein Narr sein Leben lang.)

JOHN HENRY VOSS, who included it in a collection of his poems. (REDLICH, Die Poetischen die Geisterkeller.) Usually ascribed to Martin Luther, but without the slightest warrant, except a passage in his Table-Talk (No. 728). Its first appearance in literature was in 1775, in Der Wandsbecker Bote, of Matthias Claudius, who incorporated it as a toast. Ascribed to Luther by Th. Weyler, who changed "Weiber," women, to "Weib," wife, to make it a little more decorous. (See BÜCHMANN, Geflügelte Worte.)

Then sing, as Martin Luther sang,
As Doctor Martin Luther sang:
"Who loves not wine, woman, and song,
He is a fool his whole life long!"

W. M. THACKERAY, A Credo. St. 1.

Thou art in danger, Cincius, on my word,
To die ere thou hast lived, which were absurd.
Open thine ears to song, thy throat to wine,
Thy arms unto that pretty wife of thine.
Philosophy, I have nowise forgot,
Is deathless, but philosophers are not.

RICHARD GARNETT, Epigram. (After Argentarius.)

In the order named these are the hardest to control: Wine, Women and Song.

FRANKLIN F. ADAMS, The Ancient Three.

One of the oldest and quietest roads to contentment lies through the conventional trinity of wine, woman and song.

RUFORD GUY TUCWELL, Address, Woman's National Democratic Club, Washington, D. C., May, 1934.

² Women, money and wine have their pleasure and their poison. (Femme, argent et vin, Ont leur bien et leur venin.)

UNKNOWN, A French proverb.

³ Baths, wine, and Venus bring decay to our bodies,

But baths, wine, and Venus make life worth living.

(Balnea, vina, Venus corrumpunt corpora
nostra,

Sed vitam faciunt balnea, Vina, Venus.)

UNKNOWN, Epitaph. (GRUTER, Monumenta.)

WINKING

⁴ There's a time to wink as well as to see.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1747.

⁵ Bean-pods are noisiest when dry,
And you always wink with your weakest eye.

BRET HARTE, The Tale of a Pony.

⁶ He that winketh with eye and looketh with the other

I will not trust him though he were my brother.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. 1, ch. 11.

⁷ Wink and shut their apprehensions up.

JOHN MARSTON, Antonio's Revenge: Prologue.

⁸ Hard must he wink that shuts his eyes from heaven.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Feast for Worms. Sec. III, 3.

⁹ You may wink and choose.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 216.

¹⁰ Although I wink I am not blind.

CLEMENT ROBINSON, Handful of Pleasant Delites. (1585)

¹¹ I will wink on her to consent, my lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 2, l. 333.

Wink each at other; hold the sweet jest up.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act III, sc. 2, l. 239.

¹² When most I wink, then do mine eyes best see.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xliii.

¹³ A wink's as good as a nod with some folks.

DOROTHY WORDSWORTH, Journal. Vol. i, p. 129.
(1802)

A nod is as good as a wink.

SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 25. (1822)

WINTER

¹⁴ O Winter! bar thine adamantine doors:

The north is thine; there hast thou built thy dark,

Deep-founded habitation. Shake not thy roofs,
Nor bend thy pillars with thine iron car.

WILLIAM BLAKE, To Winter.

O Winter, ruler of th' inverted year, . . .
I crown thee king of intimate delights,
Fire-side enjoyments, home-born happiness,
And all the comforts that the lowly roof
Of undisturb'd retirement, and the hours
Of long uninterrupted ev'ning, know.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 120.

Sec, Winter comes to rule the varied year,
Sullen and sad, with all his rising train—
Vapours, and clouds, and storms.

TROMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 1.

¹⁵ Nor from the perfect circle of the year
Can even Winter's crystal gems be spared.

CHRISTOPHER PHARSK CRANCH, December.

¹⁶ Hence, rude Winter; crabbed old fellow,
Never merry, never mellow!

Well-a-day! in rain and snow
What will keep one's heart aglow?

ALFRED DOMETT, A Glee for Winter.

¹⁷ But winter ling'ring chills the lap of May.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 172.

Winter lingered so long in the lap of Spring, that it occasioned a great deal of talk.

BILL NYE, Spring.

HORACE, Odes, Bk. i, ode 4, l. 1.

The sluggish winter returns to us. (Bruma recurrit iners.)

HORACE, Odes, Bk. iv, ode 7, l. 12.

² His breath like silver arrows pierced the air,
The naked earth crouched shuddering at his feet,

His finger on all flowing waters sweet
Forbidding lay—motion nor sound was there:—

Nature lay frozen dead,—and still and slow,
A winding sheet fell o'er her body fair,
Flaky and soft, from his wide wings of snow.
FRANCES ANNE KEMBLE, Winter, l. 9.

³ Oh the long and dreary Winter!
Oh the cold and cruel Winter!

LONGFELLOW, The Song of Hiawatha, Pt. xx.

Drag on, long night of winter, in whose heart,
Nurse of regret, the dead spring yet has part!

WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: Fostering of Aslang, conclusion.

Late February days; and now, at last,
Might you have thought that Winter's woe was past;

So fair the sky was and so soft the air.

WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: February.

⁴ Old Winter sad, in snow y-clad,
Is making a doleful din;

But let him howl till he crack his jaw,
We will not let him in. . . .

Come, lads, let's sing, till the rafters ring;
Come, push the can about;—

From our snug fireside this Christmas-tide
We'll keep old Winter out.

THOMAS NOEL, Old Winter.

⁵ Now there is frost upon the hill
And no leaf stirring in the wood;

The little streams are cold and still;
Never so still has winter stood.

GEORGE O'NEIL, Where It Is Winter.

⁶ But see, Orion sheds unwholesome dews;
Arise, the pines a noxious shade diffuse;
Sharp Boreas blows, and Nature feels decay,
Time conquers all, and we must Time obey.

POPE, Pastorals: Winter, l. 85.

⁷ A green winter makes a fat churchyard.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 42. (1670)

⁸ Here feel we but the penalty of Adam,
The seasons' difference, as the icy fang
And churlish chiding of the winter's wind,
Which, when it bites and blows upon my body,

Even till I shrink with cold, I smile and say,
"This is no flattery."

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, Act ii, sc. 1, l. 5.

Quake in the present winter's state and wish
The warmer days would come.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, Act ii, sc. 4, l. 5.

Winter tames man, woman and beast.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, Act iv, sc. 1, l. 24.

⁹ Winter's not gone yet, if the wild-geese fly that way.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, Act ii, sc. 4, l. 46.

¹⁰ When icicles hang by the wall,
And Dick the shepherd blows his nail,
And Tom bears logs into the hall,

And milk comes frozen home in pail,
When blood is nipp'd and ways be foul,
Then nightly sings the staring owl,

Tu-whit;
Tu-who, a merry note,

While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, Act v, sc. 2, l. 922.

When all aloud the wind doth blow,
And coughing drowns the parson's saw,

And birds sit brooding in the snow,
And Marian's nose looks red and raw,

When roasted crabs hiss in the bowl,
Then nightly sings the staring owl,

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, Act v, sc. 2, l. 931.

¹¹ Winter, which being full of care
Makes summer's welcome thrice more wish'd, more rare.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets, No. lvi.

A sad tale's best for winter;

I have one of sprites and goblins.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, Act ii, sc. 1, l. 25.

¹² Be like the sun and the meadow, which are not in the least concerned about the coming winter.

BERNARD SHAW, An Unsocial Socialist, Ch. 5.

¹³ If Winter comes, can Spring be far behind?

SHELLEY, Ode to the West Wind.

Lastly came Winter, clothed all in frieze,
Chattering his teeth for cold that did him chill,
Whilst on his hoary beard his breath did freeze,
And the dull drops, that from his purpled bill
As from a limbeck did adown distill.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene, Bk. vii, canto 7, st. 31.

¹⁴ Thus Winter falls,
A heavy gloom oppressive o'er the world,
Through Nature shedding influence malign,
And rouses up the seeds of dark disease.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 37.

Dread Winter spreads his latest glooms,
And reigns tremendous o'er the conquered year.
How dead the vegetable kingdom lies!

How dumb the tuneful! Horror wide extends
His desolate domain.

Justice turns her scale, so that wisdom cometh at the price of suffering. (Δίκαι βέ τοῖς πόν καθόλου παθειν κρείσσον.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 250.

Who knows useful things, not many things, is wise. (Ὁ χρησίμ' εἰδώς, οὐκ ὅ πολλ' εἰδώς, σοφός.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 218.

This is the mark of men just and wise as well—even in calamity not to cherish anger against the gods.

ÆSCHYLUS [?], Fragments. Frag. 240.

4 Wisdom consists in rising superior both to madness and to common sense, and in lending oneself to the universal illusion without becoming its dupe.

AMIEL, Journal, 11 Dec., 1872.

5 Many are wise in their own ways, that are weak for government or counsel.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

To be wise by rule and by experience are utterly opposite principles; so that he who is used to the one is unfit for the other.

BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. i, bk. 6.

6 It hath been an opinion that the French are wiser than they seem, and the Spaniards seem wiser than they are; but howsoever it be between nations, certainly it is so between man and man.

BACON, Essays: Of Seeming Wise.

The Italians are wise before the deed; the Germans in the deed; the French after the deed.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jaculus Prudentium.

Ask, who is wise?—You'll find the self-same man
A sage in France, a madman in Japan;
And here some head beneath a mitre swells,
Which there had tingled to a cap and bells.

THOMAS MOORE, The Sceptic, l. 17.

7 Wisdom is the knowledge of things human and divine and of the causes by which those things are controlled. (Sapientia est, . . . re-rum divinarum et humanarum causarumque quibus eæ res continentur, scientia.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 2, sec. 5.

They call him the wisest man to whose mind that which is required at once occurs. (Sapientissimur mentem.)

CICERO, Pro Cluentio. Ch. 31, sec. 84.

The wise man does nothing of which he can repent, nothing against his will, but does everything nobly, consistently, soberly, rightly.

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v,
ch. 28, sec. 81.

8 There is this difference between happiness and wisdom: he that thinks himself the happiest man, really is so; but he that thinks himself the wisest is generally the greatest fool.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 326.

9 In wisdom's ranks he stands the first,
Who stands prepared to meet the worst.

Whom, well inspir'd, the oracle pronounc'd
Wise of men,
MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iv, l. 274.
What is it to be wise?
'T is but to know how little can be known,

- To see all others' faults, and feel our own.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epil. iv, l. 260.
See also under SELF-KNOWLEDGE.
- ¹² He bids fair to grow wise who has discovered that he is a fool. (Non pote non sapere, qui se stultum intellegit.)
PUBLIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 598.
- ¹³ For when I dinna clearly see,
I always own I dinna ken,
And that's the way with wisest men.
ALLAN RAMSAY, The Clock and the Dial.
- ¹⁴ The doorstep to the temple of wisdom is a knowledge of our own ignorance.
CHARLES HADDEN SPURGEON, Gleanings among the Sheaves: The First Lesson.
- ¹⁵ One may almost doubt if the wisest man has learned anything of absolute value by living.
H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. I.
- ¹⁶ Disasters, do the best we can,
Will reach both great and small;
And he is oft the wisest man
Who is not wise at all.
WORDSWORTH, The Oak and the Broom. St. 7.

VI—Wisdom, After the Event

- ¹⁷ The wise man must be wise before, not after, the event. (Οὐ μετασοφίη, ἀλλὰ προσοφίη χρητὴς τοῦ ἄφρονος τὸν σοφόν.)
EPICURMUS, Fabulae Incertae. Frag. 5.
- ¹⁸ After the event, even a fool is wise. (Ἐχθρὸν δὲ τε σῴσις ἔργον.)
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 32.
He is a fool
Who only sees the mischiefs that are past.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 32. (Bryant, tr.)
- You are wise after the event. (Οἷα' ὅς τις βουκας ὄψα τῆς βλαβῆς ὕβριν.)
SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 1270.
- Their hindsight was better than their foresight.
HENRY WARD BEECHER [?].
- If a man had half as much foresight as he has twice as much hindsight, he'd be a lot better off.
ROBERT J. BURDETTE, Hawkeyes. Sometimes quoted, "If our foresight were as good as our hindsight, we'd be better off a damn sight."
- ¹⁹ Away, thou strange justifier of thyself, to be wiser than thou wert, by the event.
BEN JOHNSON, The Silent Woman. Act II, sc. 2.
- ²⁰ The event is the schoolmaster of fools. (Eventus stultorum magister est.)
LIVY, History. Bk. xx, sec. 39.
- ²¹ To protect the booty when it is too late.
(Post tempus praedae praesidium parum.)
PLAUTUS, Astheria, l. 394. (Act II, sc. 2.)

When the great steed
Is stole, thro' his taketh heed
And maketh the stable-door fast.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iv, l. 901.
(c. 1390)

It was not time to shut the stable when the horses be lost and gone.

WILLIAM CAXTON, Ætop, B, 245. (1484)

It is too late to shut the stable door when the steed is stolen.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 37. (1579)

When the horse has been stolen, the fool shuts the stable. (Quant le cheval est emblé dounke ferme fols l'estable.)

UNKNOWN, Les Proverbes de Villain.

So that we may not be like the Athenians, who never consulted except after the event done. (Ain que ne semblons es Atheniens, qui ne consultoient jamais sinon après le cas faict.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. ii, ch. 24.

Nine-tenths of wisdom is being wise in time.
THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, Lincoln, Neb.,
14 June, 1917.

The men who were yesterday so cautious and prudent, were now, after the event, ready and vainglorious. (Atque illi modo cauti ac sapientes prompti post eventum ac magniloqui erant.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Ch. 27.

2. Quoted as a common saying.

If a man could have half his wishes he would double his Troubles.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1752.

What one has wished for in youth, in old age one has in abundance. (Was man in der Ju-gend wünscht, hat man im Alter die Fülle.)

GOETHE, Wahrheit und Dichtung. Pt. B, Motto.

Most men let their wishes run away with them. They have no mind to stop them in their career, the motion is so pleasing.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 248.

The evil wish is most evil to the wisher. (Ἡ κατὰ βουλὴ τῇ βουλεύσαστι κακίστη.)

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 93.

¹ Wisheth, poor starveling elf! his paper kite may fly.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, The Schoolmistress.

² Now am I a tin whistle
Through which God blows,
And I wish to God I were a trumpet
—But why, God only knows.

J. C. SQUIRE, A Fresh Morning.

³ Wishers and woulders ben small house holders.

JOHN STANBRIDGE, Vulgaria. C6. (c. 1520) Quoted by JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, I, 11 (1546), and frequently thereafter.

Wishers and woulders are never good household-ers.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Wishes never can fill a sack.

TORRIANO, Italian Proverbs, 29. (1666)

⁴ As you cannot do what you wish, you should wish what you can do. (Quoniam non potest id fieri quod vis, id velis quod possit.)

TERENCE, Andria, I. 305. (Act II, sc. 1.)

When what you wish does not happen, wish for what does happen.

UNKNOWN, An Arabic proverb.

⁵ Take this in good part, whatsoever thou be,
And wish me no worse than I wish unto thee.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry: Think on the Poor.

⁶ We cannot wish for that we know not. (On ne peut désirer ce qu'on ne connaît pas.)

VOLTAIRE, Zeire. Act I, sc. 1.

⁷ I would it were not as I think;

I would I thought it were not.

SIR THOMAS WYATT, A Lament.

O, that I were where I would be,

Then would I be where I am not;

For where I am I would not be,

And where I would be I can not.

A. T. QUILLER-COUCH, The Ship of Stars. Ch. 12. Quoted.

⁸ Wishing, of all employments, is the worst;
Philosophy's reverse, and health's decay! . . .

Wishing is an expedient to the poor.

Wishing, that constant hectic of a fool.

Our wishes lengthen as our sun declines.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night V, l. 661.

Thy fickle wish is ever on the wing.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night VIII, l. 917.

WIT

I—Wit: Definitions

¹⁰ Wit without an employment is a disease.

BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. I, sec. II, para. 2, sub. 6.

¹¹ A witty thing never excited laughter; it pleases only the mind, and never distorts the countenance.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 March, 1748.

True wit never made us laugh.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims.

He is always laughing, for he has an infinite deal of wit.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 475.

I can't say whether we had more wit amongst us now than usual, but I am certain we had more laughing, which answered the end as well.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 32.

¹² If you have wit, use it to please, and not to hurt: you may shine like the sun in the temperate zones, without scorching.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 5 Sept., 1748.

If God gives you wit . . . wear it like your sword in the scabbard, and do not brandish it to the terror of the whole company. . . . A wise man will live as much within his wit as his income.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 21 July, 1752.

I have too thoughtful a wit: like a penknife in too narrow a sheath, too sharp for its body.

GEORGE HERBERT. (WALTON, Life of Herbert.)

¹³ Wit is so shining a quality that everybody admires it; most people aim at it, all people fear it, and few love it except in themselves.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 21 July, 1752.

¹⁴ A wit should no more be sincere than a woman constant; one argues a decay of parts, as t'other of beauty.

CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act I, sc. 6.

¹⁵ Thus reputation is a spur to wit,
And some wits flag through fear of losing it.

COWPER, Table Talk, I. 520.

¹⁶ Wit makes its own welcome, and levels all distinctions. No dignity, no learning, no force of character, can make any stand against good wit.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: The Comic.

¹⁷ Nothing more smooth than glass, yet nothing more brittle;

Nothing more fine than wit, yet nothing more fickle.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6472.

¹⁸ There must be more malice than love in the hearts of all wits.

B. R. HAYDON, Table Talk.

¹⁹ Wit is the salt of conversation, not the food.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Lectures on the English Comic Writers. Lecture I.

Those who cannot miss an opportunity of saying a good thing . . . are not to be trusted with the management of any great question.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics, p. 59.

¹ Wit's an unruly engine, wildly striking
Sometimes a friend, sometimes the engineer.
Hast thou the knack? pamper it not with liking:
But if thou want it, buy it not too dear.

Many affecting wit beyond their power,
Have got to be a dear fool for an hour.
GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 41.

² Wit is the clash and reconciliation of incongruities; the meeting of extremes round a corner.
LEIGH HUNT, Wit and Humour.

³ Wit, at its best, consists in the terse intrusion into an atmosphere of serene mental habit of some uncompromising truth.

PRILEANDER JOHNSON, Calymnists' Confessional. (Everybody's Magazine, May, 1920.)

⁴ Ev'n wit's a burthen, when it talks too long.
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 573. (Dryden, tr.)

A man does not please long when he has only one species of wit. (On ne plaît pas longtemps quand on n'a qu'une sorte d'esprit.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 413.

One wit, like a knuckle of ham in soup, gives a zest and flavour to the dish, but more than one serves only to spoil the pottage.

SMOLLETT, Humphrey Clinker.

⁵ Wit is nothing worth till it be dear bought.

HENRY MEDWALL, Nature. Pt. ii, l. 1292. (c. 1500)

It hath been an old said saw . . . that wit is better if it be the dearer bought.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 34.

Bought wit is best, but may cost too much.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1011.

Bought wit is dear.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Poemes.

⁶ Impromptu is truly the touchstone of wit. (L'impromptu est justement la pierre de touche de l'esprit.)

MOLIERE, Les Précieuses Ridicules. Sc. ix, l. 152.

⁷ Raillery is a mode of speaking in favor of one's wit at the expense of one's better nature. (La raillerie est un discours en faveur de son esprit contre son bon naturel.)

MONTESQUIEU, Pensées Diverses.

⁸ Wit is the most rascally, contemptible, beggarly thing on the face of the earth.

ARTHUR MURPHY, The Apprentice.

⁹ Wit when temperate is pleasing, when unbridled it offends. (Temperate suaves sunt argutie: Immodice offendunt.)

PRÆTORIUS, Fables. Bk. v, fab. 5, l. 41.

¹⁰ For wit and judgment often are at strife,
Tho' meant each other's aid, like man and wife.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 82.

¹¹ True wit is nature to advantage dress'd,
What oft was thought, but ne'er so well express'd.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 97. (1711)

Madame de Sévigné said the same thing: "C'est ce qu'on a toujours pensé, ce qu'on n'a jamais si bien dit," in Letters, No. 1289, written in 1690 but published after 1711.

So modest plainness sets off sprightly wit:
For works may have more wit than does them good.

As bodies perish thro' excess of blood.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 102.

¹² If faith itself has different dresses worn,
What wonder modes in wit should take their turn?

Oft, leaving what is natural and fit,
The current folly proves the ready wit;
And authors think their reputation safe,
Which lives as long as fools are pleas'd to laugh.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 246.

¹³ Wit is folly unless a wise man hath the keeping of it

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 174.

¹⁴ Wit, like fierce claret, when 't begins to pall,
Neglected lies, and 's of no use at all,
But, in its full perfection of decay,
Turns vinegar, and comes again in play.

CHARLES SACKVILLE, To Mr. Edward Howard.

¹⁵ Wit and wisdom are born with a man.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Learning.

¹⁶ Thou know'st we work by wit, and not by witchcraft;

And wit depends on dilatory time.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 378.

¹⁷ There's no possibility of being witty without a little ill-nature; the malice of a good thing is the barb that makes it stick.

SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act i, sc. 1.

Nae wut without a portion o' impertinence.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianae.

¹⁸ Surprise is so essential an ingredient of wit that no wit will bear repetition;—at least the original electrical feeling produced by any piece of wit can never be renewed.

SYDNEY SMITH, Lectures on Moral Philosophy, No. 10.

¹⁹ Wit consists in knowing the resemblance of things which differ, and the difference of things which are alike.

MADAME DE STAEL, Germany. Pt. III, ch. 8.

1 It is with wits as with razors, which are never so apt to cut those they are employed on as when they have lost their edge.

SWIFT, Tale of a Tub: Author's Preface.

As in smooth oil the razor best is whet,
So wit is by politeness sharpest set:
Their want of edge from their offence is seen;
Both pain us least when exquisitely keen.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 119.

Don't put too fine a point to your wit, for fear it should get blunted.

CERVANTES, Exemplary Novels: Little Gypsy.

2 Wit rules the heavens, discretion guides the skies.

TASSO, Gerusalemme. Bk. x, st. 20.

3 Backstair wit. (Esprit de l'escalier.)

M. DE TRÉVILLE. (PIERRE NICOLE, King's English, p. 32, note.)

I never have any wit until I am below stairs. (Je n'ai jamais d'esprit qu'au bas de l'escalier.)

LA BRUYÈRE, according to J.-J. Rousseau.

4 Lucian, well skill'd in scoffing, this has writ:
Friend, that's your folly which you think your wit;

This you vent oft, void both of wit and fear,
Meaning another, when yourself you jeer.

LEAUX WALTON, The Complaint Angler. Ch. 1.

5 Wit is more necessary than beauty; and I think no young woman ugly that has it, and no handsome woman agreeable without it.

WYCHERLEY, The Country Wife. Act i, sc. 1.

6 Against their wills what numbers ruin shun,
Purely through want of wit to be undone!
Nature has shown, by making it so rare,
That wit's a jewel which we need not wear.

YOUNG, Epistle to Mr. Pope. Epis. ii, l. 80.

7 Wit, how delicious to man's dainty taste!
'T is precious, as a vehicle of sense;

But, as its substitute, a dire disease.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 1232.

Wit, widow'd of good sense, is worse than nought.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 1264.

8 There is nothing breaks so many friendships as a difference of opinion as to what constitutes wit.

ELBERT HUMPHARD, Epigrams.

II—Wit: Apothegms

9 Melancholy men of all others are most witty.

ARISTOTLE. (BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, i, iii, l. 3.)

10 All this is but a web of the wit; it can work nothing.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Emptiness.

11 I can say a neat thing myself if they will give me time.

J. M. BARRIE, Forewell, Miss Julie Logan, p. 16.

12 An ounce of wit is worth a pound of sorrow.

13 What silly people wits are! (Que les gens d'esprit sont bêtes.)

BEAUMARCHAIS, Barbier de Séville. Act i, sc. 1.

14 Great wits and valours, like great states,
Do sometimes sink with their own weights.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 1, l. 269.

15 Here lies a king that ruled, as he saw fit,
The universal monarchy of wit.

THOMAS CAREW, Elegy Upon Dr. Donne.

Her wit was more than man, her innocence a child.

DRYDEN, Elegy on Anne Killigrew, l. 70.

As a wit, if not first, in the very first line.

GOLDSMITH, Retaliation, l. 96.

Of Manners gentle, of Affections mild;
In Wit a man; Simplicity, a child.

POPE, Epitaph on Mr. Gay.

16 Good wits jump; a word to the wise is enough.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 37.

See how good wits jump.

DAVID GARRICK, Correspondence. Vol. ii, p. 94.

Ah, where thy legs, that witty pair!

For "great wits jump"—and so did they.

THOMAS HOOD, To Grimaldi.

Great wits jump together. (Les beaux esprits rencontrent.)

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 11.

Your wit makes others witty. (Vot're esprit en donne aux autres.)

CATHERINE II, Letter to Voltaire.

It is having in some measure a sort of wit to know how to use the wit of others.

STANISLAUS, KING OF POLAND, Maxims and Moral Sentences.

It is by such encounters that wits become acquainted. (Les beaux esprits lernent einander durch dergleichen rencontre erkennen.)

ANDREAS GRYPHUS, Horribilicribrifax. Act iv, l. 7.

His eye begets occasion for his wit;

For every object that the one doth catch, The other turns to a mirth-moving jest.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 69.

This fellow pecks up wit, as pigeons pease,

And utters it again when God doth please:

He is wit's pedlar, and retails his wares

At wakes and warials, meetings, markets, fairs;

And we that sell by gross, the Lord doth know,

Have not the grace to grace it with such show.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 2, l. 315.

What a wit-snapper are you!

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 55.

Wilt thou show the whole wealth of thy wit in an instant?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 61.

Repair thy wit, good youth, or it will fall

To careless ruin.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 141.

He doth indeed show some sparks that are like wit.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 194.

Wit now and then, struck smartly, shows a spark.

COWPER, Table Talk, l. 663.

There's a skirmish of wit between them.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act 4, sc. 1, l. 64.

To leave this keen encounter of our wits,

And fall somewhat into a slower method.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 2, l. 115.

He . . . turn'd your wit the scamy side with-out.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 146.

Katharina: Where did you study all this goodly speech?

Petruchio: It is extempore, from my mother-wit.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 264.

From jiggling veins of rhyming mother wits.

MARLOWE, Tamburlaine the Great: Prologue, l. 1.

Look, he 's winding up the watch of his wit; by and by it will strike.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 12.

I am a great eater of beef, and I believe that does harm to my wit.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 3, l. 89.

For what says Quinapalus? "Better a witty fool than a foolish wit."

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 5, l. 39. "Quinapalus" is an imaginary author.

I am a fool, I know it: and yet, heav'n help me, I'm poor enough to be a wit.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act i, sc. 1.

His wit ran him out of his money, and now his poverty has run him out of his wits.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act v, sc. 2.

For though he is a wit, he is no fool.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 106.

Of course it's all tommy rot; but it's so brilliant, you know! How the dickens do you think of such things?

G. B. SHAW, John Bull's Other Island. Act i.

III—Wit: Lack of Wit

We grant, although he had much wit,

H' was very shy of using it,

As being loth to wear it out,

And therefore bore it not about;

Unless on holy days or so,

As men their best apparel do.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 1, l. 45.

He says but little, and that little said

Owes all its weight, like loaded dice, to lead.

His wit invites you by his looks to come,

But when you knock it never is at home.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 301.

You beat your pate, and fancy wit will come:

Knock as you please, there 's nobody at home.

POPE, Epigram: An Empty House.

Men of quality are above wit.

JOHN COWPER, Sir Cowley Nice.

Who can prove

Wit to be witty when with deeper ground

Dulness intuitive declares wit dull?

GEORGE ELIOT, A College Breakfast-party.

Of all wit's uses the main one
Is to live well with who has none.

R. W. EMERSON, Life.

Their heads sometimes so little that there is no room for wit; sometimes so long, that there is no wit for so much room.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy and Profane State.
Bk. iv, ch. 12.

Some of them are half-wits,
Two to a wit, there are a set of them.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News. Act i, sc. 1.

He must be a dull Fellow indeed, whom neither Love, Malice, nor Necessity, can inspire with Wit.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. iv.

No one shall have wit save we and our friends,
(Nul n'aura de l'esprit, hors nous et nos amis.)

MOLIERE, Les Femmes Savantes. Act iii, sc. 2.

Want o' wit is waur than want o' siller.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

They have a plentiful lack of wit.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 202.

What a pretty thing man is when he goes in his doublet and hose and leaves off his wit.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
v, sc. 1, l. 210.

Metinks sometimes I have no more wit than a Christian or an ordinary man has.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 3, l. 88.

WITCH, WITCHCRAFT

I have ever believed, and do now know, that there are Witches: they that are in doubt of these . . . are obliquely and upon consequence a sort, not of Infidels, but Atheists.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i,
sec. 30.

And, vow! Tam saw an unco sight!
Warlocks and witches in a dance: . . .
Coffins stood round, like open presses,
That shaw'd the dead in their last dresses;
And, by some devilish contrap sleight,
Each in its cauld hand held a light:

BURNS, Tam o' Shanter, l. 114.

[Witches] steal young children out of their cradles, ministerium demonum, and put deformed in their rooms, which we call changelings.

i, sec. ii, mem. 1, subs. 3.

I tell thee, that is Mambrino's helmet.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 7. A helmet of pure gold which rendered the wearer invisible.

They that burn you for a witch lose all their coals.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4974.

They who see the Flying Dutchman never, never reach the shore.

JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, The Flying Dutchman.

They are neither man nor woman—

They are neither brute nor human,

They are Ghouls!

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Bells.

An' all us other children, when the supper
things is done,

We set around the kitchen fire an' has the mostest fun

A-list'nin' to the witch tales 'at Annie tells about

An' the gobble-uns 'at gits you

Ef you Don't Watch Out!

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, *Little Orphant
Annie*.

This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet. He begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock.
He . . . squints the eye and makes the hare-lip.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 120.

Aroint thee, witch, aroint thee!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 128.

What are these,

So wither'd, and so wild in their attire;
That look not like the inhabitants o' th'
earth,

And yet are on 't?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 1, l. 33.

The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,

And these are of them.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 79.

Saw you the weird sisters?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 126.

I'll charm the air to give a sound,

While you perform your antic round.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 129.

The foul witch Sycorax.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 258.

Giving up witchcraft is giving up of Bible.

Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor windy suspiration of forced breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye,
Nor the dejected 'haviour of the visage,
Together with all forms, moods, shapes of grief,

That can denote me truly; these indeed seem,
For they are actions that a man might play,
But I have that within which passeth show;
These but the trappings and the suits of woe.

Shakespeare, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 76.

My grief lies all within;
And these external manners of laments
Are merely shadows to the unseen grief
That swells with silence in the tortured soul.

As the faculty of writing has been chiefly a masculine endowment, the reproach of making the world miserable has been always thrown upon the women.
 SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 18.

When a woman means mischief, if she but look upon her apron-strings the devil will help her presently.
 JOHN LACY, Dumb Lady. Act i.

"My officious friend," said I, "he that does not love a woman sucked a sow."
 SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Quevedo's Visions, 1344. (1667)

He that hates woman sucked a sow.
 SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

One woman drives out another so quickly in Paris, when one is a bachelor.
 GUY DE MAUPASSANT, All Over.

Women are not altogether in the wrong when they refuse the rules of life prescribed in the world, forso much as only men have established them without their consent.
 MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

Women have no rank. (Les femmes n'ont pas de rang.)
 NAPOLEON I, Sayings of Napoleon.

The only rank which elevates a woman is that which a gentle spirit bestows upon her.

An artful woman makes a modern saint.
 MATTHEW PRIOR, Epigrams: The Modern Saint.

A woman's work and washing of dishes is never at an end.
 JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. (1670)

When Darby saw the setting sun
 He swung his scythe, and home he run,
 Sat down, drank off his quart and said,
 "My work is done, I'll go to bed."
 "My work is done!" retorted Joan,
 "My work is done! Your constant tone,
 But hapless woman ne'er can say
 'My work is done' till judgment day."
 ST. JOHN HONEYWOOD, Darby and Joan.

Some respite to husbands the weather may send,

WILL B. ROGERS, (The Pathfinder No. 1866.)

7 Woman, God bless her by that name, for it is a far nobler name than lady.

WALTER VON DER VOGELWEIDE, Woman and Lady. (WALSH, Golden Treasury of Medieval Literature, p. 109.)

Give us that grand word "woman" once again,
And let's have done with "lady"; one's a term
Full of fine force, strong, beautiful and firm,
Fit for the noblest use of tongue or pen;
And one's a word for lackeys.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Women.

8 The female woman is one of the greatest institutions of which this land can boast.

ARTEMUS WARD, Woman's Rights.

She was born to make hash of men's buzzums.

ARTEMUS WARD, Piccolomini.

III—Woman: Her Creation

See also under Adam

12 God, when he made the first woman . . .
made her not of the head of Adam, for she should not climb to great lordship; . . .
also certes, God made not woman of the foot of Adam, for she should not be holden too low; for she can not patiently suffer; but God made woman of the rib of Adam, for woman should be fellow unto man.

CHAUCER, The Persones Tale. Sec. 79.

That the woman was made of a rib out of the side of Adam; not out of his feet to be trampled upon by him, but out of his side to be equal with him, under his arm to be protected, and near his heart to be loved.

MATTHEW HENRY, Note on Genesis, ii, 21, 22.

The woman was not taken

From Adam's head, we know,

To show she must not rule him—

'Tis evidently so.

The woman she was taken

From under Adam's arm,

So she must be protected

From injuries and harm.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, *Adam and Eve's Wedding
Song*. Written for Sarah Haggard on her marriage to Aaron Grigaby.

Not from his head was woman took,

As made her husband to o'erlook;

Not from his feet, as one designed
The footstool of the stronger kind;

But fashioned for himself, a bride;

As equal, taken from his side.

CHARLES WESLEY, Short Hymns on Select Passages of the Holy Scriptures.

She was not made out of his head, Sir,

To rule and to govern the man;

Nor was she made out of his feet, Sir,
By man to be trampled upon. . . .
But she did come forth from his side, Sir,
His equal and partner to be;
And now they are coupled together,
She oft proves the top of the tree.

Reason and religion teach us that we too are primary existences, that it is for us to move in the orbit of our duty around the holy center of perfection, the companions not the satellites of men.

EMMA WILLARD. Inscribed beneath her bust in Hall of Fame.

1 You see, dear, it is not true that woman was made from man's rib; she was really made from his funny bone.

BARNES, What Every Woman Knows, Act III.

2 Woman, they say, was only made of man: Methinks 'tis strange they should be so unlike! It may be all the best was cut away, To make the woman, and the naught was left Behind with him.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Scornful Lady, III, 2.

3 Auld Nature swears, the lovely dears
Her noblest work she classes, O:
Her prentice han' she tried on man,
An' then she made the lasses, O.
BURNS, Green Grow the Rashes.

Our sex, you know, was after yours designed:
The last perfection of the Maker's mind:
Heaven drew out all the gold for us, and left your dross behind.

DRYDEN, Amphitryon: Prologue.

Man was made when Nature was but an apprentice, but woman when she was a skilful mistress of her art.

EDWARD SHARPHAM, Cupid's Whirligig. (1607)
I have always said it: Nature meant woman to be her masterpiece. (Ich hab' es immer gesagt: das Weib wollte die Natur zu ihrem Meisterstücke machen.)

LESSING, Emilia Galotti. Act V, sc. 7.

4 To chase the clouds of life's tempestuous hours,
To strew its short but weary way with flow'rs,
New hopes to raise, new feelings to impart,
And pour celestial balsam on the heart;
For this to man was lovely woman giv'n,
The last, best work, the noblest gift of Heav'n.
T. L. PRACOCK, The Vision of Love, I. 1.

5 He beheld his own rougher make softened into sweetness, and tempered with smiles; he saw a creature who had, as it were, Heaven's second thought in her formation.

STEELE, The Christian Hero. Of Adam's first sight of Eve.

6 The man is, as a first creation, genuine;
The woman is the clearer, softer, and diviner,

For he was from the inorganic dirt unfolded,
But she came forth from clay which life before had moulded.

EURIPIDES, Melanippe Desmotis.

9 Women are ever in extremes; they are either better or worse than men.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Des Femmes.

10 There's no such thing as picking out the best woman; it's only a question of comparative badness. (Nam optima nulla potest eligi; Alia alia peior est.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, I. 139. (Act II, sc. 1.)
This woman is a bad piece of goods. (Mala mers, era, hæc et callida est.)

PLAUTUS, Cistellaria, I. 707. (Act IV, sc. 2.)

11 And yet believe me, good as well as ill,
Woman's at best a contradiction still.
Heav'n, when it strives to polish all it can
Its last best work, but forms a softer man.
POPE, Moral Essays. Epia. II, l. 269.

The soft, unhappy sex.

APRIL BROWN, The Wandering Beauty.

12 O Woman! in our hours of ease
Uncertain, coy, and hard to please,
And variable as the shade

When pain and anguish wring the brow,
A ministering angel thou!

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto VI, st. 30.

We women seldom fail at a pinch.
BEN JONSON, Bartholomew Fair. Act I.
'Twas ever thus, when in life's storm

Hope's star to man grows dim,
An angel kneels, in woman's form,
And breathes a prayer for him.

GRONOV POPE MORRIS, Pocahontas.

The soul's armour is never well set to the heart unless a woman's hand has braced it.

ROXBOROUGH, Sermons and Lilies: Of Queens' Gardens.

13 A man gains no possession better than a good woman, nothing more horrible than a bad one.

Loss not time to contradict her,
Nor endeavour to convict her. . .
Only take this rule along,
Always to advise her wrong,
And reprove her when she's right;
She may then grow wise for spite.

SWIFT, Daphne, l. 29.

² Wicked women bother one. Good women bore
one. That is the only difference between them.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act iii.

I find that, ultimately, there are only two kinds of women, the plain and the coloured.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray,
Ch. 4; A Woman of No Importance. Act iii.

The world is perfectly packed with good women.
To know them is a middle-class education.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act iii.

Oh, there was a woman-hater hated women all he could,

And he built himself a bungle in a dingle in the wood;

Here he lived and said of ladies things I do not think he should,

"If they're good, they're not good-looking; if good-looking, they're not good."

CLARE KUMMER, In the Dingle-Dongle Bell.

V—Woman: Saint Abroad, Devil at Home

³ A woman is a fury and a hurtful spirit in the house, an angel in the church, an ape in the bed, a mule unbridled in the field, and a goat in the garden.

BIRCHER, Nobility of Women, 127. (1539)

We limit the comely parts of a woman to consist in four points: that is to be a shrew in the kitchen, a saint in the church, an angel at the board, and an ape in the bed, as the Chronicle reports by Mistress Shore, paramour to King Edward the Fourth.

GEORGE PUTTENHAM, English Poetrie, 299. (1589)

According to that wise saying, women be saints in the church, angels in the street, devils in the kitchen, and apes in your bed.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, Blurt, Master-Constable,
Act iii, sc. 3. (1602)

You are pictures out of doors,
Bells in your parlours, wild-cats in your kitchens,
Saints in your injuries, devils being offended, Players in your housewifery, and housewives in your beds.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 110.

She in beauty, education, blood,

Holds hand with any princess of the world.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 493.

Who is Silvia? what is she,

That all our swains commend her?

Holy, fair, and wise is she;

The heaven such grace doth lend her,

That she must admired be.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Act iv, sc. 2, l. 39.

She is her self of best things the collection.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia: Thyrsis and Dams.

O Woman, you are not merely the handiwork of God, but also of men; these are ever endowing you with beauty from their hearts.

. . . You are one half woman and one half dream.

RABINDRANATH TAGORE, The Gardener. No. 59.

TEKLYSON, The Princess: Prologue, l. 48.

Scarce of earth nor all divine.

TEKLYSON, Adeline, l. 3.

² Amoret! as sweet and good
As the most delicious food,
Which, but tasted, does impart
Life and gladness to the heart.

EDMUND WALLER, To Amoret, l. 39.

How small a part of time they share
That are so wondrous sweet and fair!

EDMUND WALLER, Go, Lovely Rose, l. 19.

³ O! what's a table richly spread,
Without a woman at its head?

THOMAS WATSON, The Progress of Discontent.

Now in hot, now in cold,
Full woeful is the household
That wants a woman.

UNKNOWN, (Towneley Plays, No. 13, l. 419.
c. 1388)

⁴ How all her care was but to be fair,
And all her task to be sweet.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Heart of the Rose.

⁵ The sweetest woman ever Fate
Perverse denied a household mate,
Who, lonely, homeless, not the less
Found peace in love's unselfishness. . . .
Through years of toil and soil and care,
From glossy tress to thin gray hair,
All unprofaned she held apart
The virgin fancies of the heart.

WHITTIER, Snow-Bound, l. 352.

A woman tropical, intense,
In thought and act, in soul and sense,
She blended in a like degree
The vixen and the devotee.

WHITTIER, Snow-Bound, l. 531. Referring to Harriet Livermore.

⁶ Angels listen when she speaks;
She's my delight, all mankind's wonder;
But my jealous heart would break
Should we live one day asunder.

JOHN WILMOT, My Dear Mistress Has a Heart.

⁷ She was a Phantom of delight
When first she gleamed upon my sight;
A lovely Apparition sent
To be a moment's ornament;
Her eyes as stars of Twilight fair;
Like Twilight's, too, her dusky hair;
But all things else about her drawn
From May-time and the cheerful Dawn.

WORDSWORTH, She Was a Phantom of Delight.

I saw her upon nearer view,
A Spirit, yet a Woman too! . . .
A Creature not too bright or good
For human nature's daily food;
For transient sorrows, simple wiles,
Pains, blame, love, kisses, tears, and smiles.

And now I see with eye serene
The very pulse of the machine; . . .
A perfect Woman, nobly planned;
To warn, to comfort, and command;
And yet a Spirit still, and bright
With something of angelic light.

WORDSWORTH, She Was a Phantom of Delight.

⁸ 'T is hers to pluck the amaranthine flower
Of Faith, and round the sufferer's temples bind
Wreaths that endure affliction's heaviest shower,
And do not shrink from sorrow's keenest wind.

WORDSWORTH, Weak Is the Will of Man.

⁹ But Woman is rare beyond compare,
The poets tell us so;

How little they know of Woman
Who only women know!
CAROLYN WELLS, Woman.

VII—Woman: A Curse

⁹ The wicked woman, full of subtlety,
Worse than a fox in crafty hardihood.

ARIOSO, Orlando Furioso. Canto xvi, st. 13.

¹⁰ There is nothing in the world worse than a woman
By nature shameless—save some other woman.

(ΑΑΝ' οὐ γὰρ δυνάτω ἀνασχύνων φύσει γυναικὸν οὐδὲν κάκιοις εἰς ἀνδρα ὡς ἐπ' αἱ γυναῖκες.)

ARISTOPHANES, Thezmochoriazuse, l. 531.

A shameless woman is the worst of men.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. v, l. 468.

A man shall walk behind a lion rather than behind
a woman.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 61a.

¹¹ Oh the gladness of her gladness when she's glad,
And the sadness of her sadness when she's sad,
But the gladness of her gladness,
And the sadness of her sadness
Are as nothing, Charles,

To the badness of her badness when she's bad.
J. M. BARRIE, Rosalind. Quoted.

Oh, the shrewdness of her shrewdness when she's shrewd,

And the rudeness of her rudeness when she's rude;
But the shrewdness of her shrewdness and the rudeness of her rudeness,
Are as nothing to her goodness when she's good.

UNKNOWN, A Libel Answered.

¹² There is no other purgatory but a woman.

BAUMONT and FLETCHER, Scornful Lady. Act III.

Women are the gate of hell.

St. JEROME.

Were't not for gold and women, there would be no damnation.

CYRIL TOWNSEND, Revenge's Tragedy. Act II, sc. 1.

¹³ Oh, woman, woman! thou shouldst have few wins
Of thine own to answer for! Thou art the author

Of such a book of follies in a man,
That it would need the tears of all the angels
To blot the record out!

BULWHA-LYTTON, The Lady of Lyons. Act v, sc. 1.

Women are not a hobby—they're a calamity.
ALEXANDER BRALOWSKY, Interview at Minneapolis, 1931.

From Adam's wife, that proved a curse,
Though God had made her for a blessing,
All women born are so perverse
No man need boast their love possessing.

ROBERT BRIDGES [DROCHE], Triplet.

The world is full of women, and the women full of wile.

GELETT BURGESS, Willy and the Lady.

A woman (tho' the phrase may seem uncivil)
As able—and as cruel—as the Devil!

BURNS, Scotts Prologue for Mrs. Sutherland,
l. 27. Referring to Queen Elizabeth.

Pricking her fingers with those cursèd pins,
Which surely were invented for our sins,
Making a woman like a porcupine,
Not to be rashly touch'd.

BYRON, Don Juan, Canto vi, st. 61.

There's no music when a woman is in the concert.

DEXTER, II The Honest Whore. Act iv, sc. 1.

And I find more bitter than death the woman, whose heart is snares and nets, and her hands
as bands.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 26.

All wickedness is but little to the wickedness of a woman.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xiv, 19.

Woman—a foe to friendship, an unescapable punishment, a necessary evil.

St. CHRYSOSTOM.

There is no evil so terrible as a woman. (Older oldu baidu, de yurh, nakor.)

EURIPIDES, Fragment.

Oh, woman, perfect woman! what distraction
Was meant to mankind when thou wast made a devil!

What an inviting hell invented.

JOHN FLETCHER, Monsieur Thomas. Act iii, sc. 1.

'Tis woman that seduces all mankind;
By her we first were taught the wheedling arts.

JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act i, sc. 2.

When toward the Devil's House we tread,
Woman's a thousand steps ahead.
(Denn geht es zu des Bösen Haus Das Weib hat tausend Schritt voraus.)

GOETHE, Faust, Pt. I, sc. 21, l. 147.

Women's feet run still astray

If to ill they know the way.

WILLIAM HARRINGTON, Caesars.

Mankind, from Adam, have been women's fools;

Women, from Eve, have been the devil's tools:
Heaven might have spar'd one torment when we fell;

Not left us women, or not threatened hell.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, The She-Gallants.

Of all the plagues with which the world is curst,
Of every ill, a woman is the worst.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, British Enchanters. Act II, l. 1.

He seldom errs

Who thinks the worst he can of womankind.

JOHN HOMER, Douglas. Act II, sc. 3.

O woman, woman, when to ill thy mind

Is bent, all hell contains no fouler fiend.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 531. (Pope, tr.)

What mighty woes

To thy imperial race from woman rose.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 541. (Pope, tr.)

Nothing is more unbearable than a woman of wealth. (Intolerabilius nihil est quam femina dives.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 460.

I met a lady in the meads,

Full beautiful—a faery's child;

Her hair was long, her foot was light,

And her eyes were wild. . . .

She took me to her elfin grot,

And there she wept, and sigh'd full sore,

And there I shut her wild, wild eyes

With kisses four. . . .

I saw pale kings, and princes too,

Pale warriors, death-pale were they all:

They cried—"La Belle Dame sans Merci

Hath thee in thrall!"

KEATS, La Belle Dame Sans Merci.

When the Himalayan peasant meets the he-bear in his pride,

He shouts to scare the monster, who will often turn aside.

But the she-bear thus accosted rends the peasant tooth and nail.

For the female of the species is more deadly than the male.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Female of the Species.

But when hunter meets with husband, each confirms the other's tale—

The female of the species is more deadly than the male.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Female of the Species.

And as seen from any angle, 'twas a wisely ordered plan,

For the female of the species is the mother of the man.

LEO J. RABBITTE, The Female of the Species: A Reply. One of many replies to Kipling's poem.

Oh, the years we waste and the tears we waste

And the work of our head and hand
Belong to the woman who did not know
(And now we know that she never could know)
And did not understand!

RUDYARD KIPPLING, The Vampire.

Somewhere she waits to make you win, your soul in her firm white hands—
Somewhere the gods have made for you the Woman Who Understands.

EVERARD JACK APPLETON, The Woman Who Understands.

¹ Nature doth paint them further to be weak, frail, impatient, feeble and foolish; and experience hath declared them to be unconstant, variable, cruel, and lacking the spirit of counsel.

JOHN KNOX, *The First Blast of the Trumpet
Against the Monstrous Regiment of Women*.

² "Now women are troublesome cattle to deal with mostly," said Goggins.

SAMUEL LOVER, Handy Andy. Ch. 36.

Lor', but women's rum cattle to deal with,
The first man found that to his cost,
And I reckon it's just through a woman
The last man on earth'll be lost.

G. R. SIMS, Moll Jarvis o' Morley.

³ A cunning woman is a knavish fool.

GEORGE LYTTLETON, Advice to a Lady.

⁴ There is more death in women than we think.
JOHN MASSFIELD, *The Widow in the Bye
Street*. Pt. II, l. 171.

⁵ All women be evils, yet necessary evils.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus. (1583) A rendering of the Latin proverb, "Malum est Muller, sed necessarium malum," a translation of the Greek of Menander.

As for the women, though we scorn and flout 'em,
We may live with, but cannot live without 'em.
FREDERIC REYNOLDS, The Will. Act I, sc. 1.

⁶ Nothing is worse than a woman, even a good one. (Οὐδὲν γυναικὸς χείρον, οὐδὲ τῆς καλλῆς.)

MENANDER. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, epig.
286.)

There are many wild beasts on land and in the sea, but the deadliest of all is woman. (Πολλὰ κατὰ γῆν καὶ κατὰ θάλατταν θηρία ὄντων, μικροτέρων δὲσι θνητῶν γυνή.)

MENANDER, Upobolismos. Frag. 488.

Her dove-like eyes turn'd to coals of fire,
Her beautiful nose to a terrible snout,
Her hands to paws, with nasty great claws,
And her boom went in and her tail came out.
R. H. BARHAM, A Lay of St. Nicholas.

⁷ O why did God,
Creator wise, that peopl'd highest Heaven
With spirits masculine, create at last
This novelty on earth, this fair defect
Of nature, and not fill the world at once

With men as angels without feminine,
Or find some other way to generate
Mankind? This mischief had not then befall'n.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. x, l. 888.

What mighty ills have not been done by woman!
Who was't betray'd the Capitol? A woman.
Who lost Mark Antony the world? A woman.
Who was the cause of a long ten years' war,
And laid at last old Troy in ashes? Woman,
Destructive, damnable, deceitful woman!
THOMAS OTWAY, The Orphan. Act III, sc. 1.

Find out some song that describes
Women's hypocrisies, their subtle wiles,
Betraying smiles, feign'd tears, inconstancies;
Their painted outsides, and corrupted minds,
The sum of all their follies, and their falsehoods.
THOMAS OTWAY, The Orphan. Act III, sc. 1.

⁸ Ah, wasteful woman, she who may
On her sweet self set her own price,
Knowing man cannot choose but pay,
How has she cheapen'd Paradise;
How given for nought her priceless gift,
How spoil'd the bread and spill'd the wine,
Which, spent with due, respective thrift,
Had made brutes men, and men divine.
COVENTRY PATMORE, The Angel in the House:
Canto III, Unhkrift.

⁹ Every woman is a source of annoyance, but she has two good seasons, the one in her bridal chamber and the other in her grave.
(Πόσα γυνὴ χέλοι ἐστὶν ἔχει δ' ἀγαθὸς δὶω ὥρας, τὴν μίαν ἐν θαλάμῳ, τὴν μίαν ἐν θανάτῳ.) PALLADAS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, epig.
381.)

With a wife are two days of pleasure; the first is the joy of the marriage day and night; the second to be at the wife's sepulture.

THOMAS INGELAND, The Disobedient Child, 32.
(c. 1560)

Although all womankind be nought, yet two good days hath she:

Her marriage day, and day of death, when all
she leaves to thee.

TIMOTHY KENDALL, Flower of Epigrams, 143.

In every marriage two things are allowed,
A wife in wedding-sheets and in a shroud;
How can a marriage state then be accurst,
Since the last day's as happy as the first?

peiores esse quam unam.)

PLAUTUS, Cursus, l. 592. (Act v, sc. 1.)

Quoted as a saying from an ancient poet.

He who can avoid women, let him avoid them.
(Qui potest mulieres vitare, vitet.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus. Act I, sc. 2.

A woman finds it much easier to do ill than well. (Mulieri nimio male facere melius est onus, quam bene.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus. Act II, sc. 5, l. 17.

1 Give God thy broken heart, He whole will make it:

Give woman thy whole heart, and she will break it.

EDMUND PRESTWICH, The Broken Heart.

2 Weal and women cannot pan,
But woe and women can.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 355.

3 Amongst women (some will say) there is but two faults, and those are, they can neither do nor say well.

BARNARD RICH, Faults. Fo. 23. (1606)

Men have many faults;
Poor women have but two:
There's nothing good they say,
And nothing right they do.

4 Parasite women.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Metropolitan Magazine, May, 1916; also Foes of Our Own Household.

5 Because of their vices, women have ceased to deserve the privileges of their sex; they have put off their womanly nature and are therefore condemned to suffer the diseases of men.

SENeca, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epist. xciv, 21.

6 There's no motion
That tends to vice in man, but I affirm
It is the woman's part: be it lying, note it,
The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiving, hers;
Lust and rank thoughts, hers; revenges, hers;
Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain,

Nice longings, slanders, mutability,
All faults that may be named, nay, that hell knows,

Why, hers, in part or all; but rather, all;
For even to vice
They are not constant, but are changing still

One vice, but of a minute old, for one
Not half so old as that.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act II, sc. 5, l. 20.

You jig, you amble, and you lisp, and nickname God's creatures, and make your wantonness your ignorance. Go to, I'll no more on 't; it hath made me mad.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act III, sc. 1, l. 151.

So curses all Eve's daughters, of what complexion soever.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act IV, sc. 2, l. 24.

7 Beautiful tyrant! Send angelical!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act III, sc. 2, l. 75.

Her only fault, and that is faults enough,
Is that she is intolerable curst
And shrewd and froward, so beyond all measure
That, were my state far worse than it is,
I would not wed her for a mine of gold.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act I, sc. 2, l. 88.

8 Is folly then so old? Why, let me see,—
About what time of life may folly be?
Oh! she was born, by nicest calculation,
One moment after woman's first creation.

W. R. SPENCER, Fashionable Friends: Prologue.

9 The women were proposed to be taxed according to their beauty and skill in dressing, . . . but constancy, charity, good sense, and good nature were not rated, because they would not bear the charge of collecting.

SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels: Voyage to Laputa.

10 There are some meannesses which are too mean even for man—woman, lovely woman alone, can venture to commit them.

THACKERAY, A Shabby Genteel Story. Ch. 3.

In point of morals the average woman is, even for business, too crooked.

STEPHEN LEADLOCK, The Woman Question.

11 Regard the society of women as a necessary unpleasantness of social life, and avoid it as much as possible.

LEO TOLSTOY, Diary.

A woman without a laugh in her . . . is the greatest bore in existence.

Ay, me, how weak a thing
The heart of woman is!

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act II, sc. 4, l. 39.

⁴ Poets, beware! never compare
Women to aught in earth or in air.

THOMAS HAYNES BAYLY, Song.

⁵ Yet when I hold her best, she's but a woman,
As full of frailty as of faith; a poor slight woman,

And her best thoughts but weak fortifications.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Little French Lawyer. Act II, sc. 2.

With my frailty don't upbraid me,
I am woman as you made me;
Cautelous doubting or despairing,
Rashly trusting, idly fearing,
If obtaining, still complaining;
If consenting, still repenting.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, Semele to Jupiter.

Women are never stronger than when they arm themselves with their weaknesses.

MADAME DU DEFFAND, Letter to Voltaire.

⁶ Women have no wilderness in them,
They are provident instead,
Content in the tight hot cell of their hearts
To eat dusty bread.

LOUISE BOGAN, Women.

⁷ Most illogical
Irrational nature of our womanhood,
That blushes one way, feels another way,
And prays, perhaps, another!

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. II, l. 701.

We're all so,—made so—'tis our woman's trade
To suffer torment for another's ease.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. VII, l. 222.

⁸ The souls of women are so small,
That some believe they've none at all;
Or if they have, like cripples, still They've but one faculty, the will.

Considered spurious.

When greater perils men environ,
Then women show a front of iron;
And, gentle in their manner, they
Do bold things in a quiet way.

THOMAS DUNN ENGLISH, Betty Zane.

When danger comes in an honorable way, a woman's heart grows chill with fear; but if she is doing a bold bad thing her courage never fails.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 94.

What wilt not woman, gentle woman, dare

When strong affection stirs her spirit up?

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Madoc. Pt. ii, canto 2, l. 125.

Women commonly eat more sparingly, and are less curious in their choice of meat; but if once you find a woman gluttonous, expect from her very little virtue.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letters. Vol. ii, p. 323.

She knifed me one night 'cause I wished she was white,

And I learned about women from 'er!

RUDYARD KIPPLING, The Ladies.

There is a false modesty which is vanity;
a false glory which is levity; a false grandeur which is meanness; a false virtue which is hypocrisy; and a false wisdom which is prud-ery.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Des Femmes.

As soon as a woman begins to be ashamed of what she ought not, she will not be ashamed of what she should. (Næ simul pudere quod non oportet cæperit; quod oportet non pudebit.)

LIVY, Annals. Bk. xxxiv, sec. 4.

¹ The life of woman is full of woe,
Toiling on and on and on,
With breaking heart, and tearful eyes,
And silent lips, and in the soul
The secret longings that arise,
Which this world never satisfies!
Some more, some less, but of the whole
Not one quite happy, no, not one!

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. ii.

² All women are ambitious naturally.

MARLOWE, Hero and Leander. Sestiad i, l. 428.

³ Feminine policy has a mysterious method;
it is better to leave it to them. (La police feminine a un train mysterieux; il faut le leur quitter.)

⁴ A woman with a passion for buying. (Ad dominam . . . emacem.)

OVIN, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 421.

And life made wretched out of human ken,
And miles of shopping women served by men.

JOHN MASFIELD, Biography. St. 7.

⁵ However ugly she may be, every woman is pleased with her own looks. (Pessima sit, nulli non sua forma placet.)

OVIN, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 614.

Haughtiness is natural in the fair, and pride waits on beauty. (Fastus inest pulchris, sequitur-que superbia formam.)

OVIN, Fasti. Bk. i, l. 419.

As is the body, so is the soul of tender women frail. (Ut corpus, teneris ita mens infirma puellis.)

OVIN, Heroides. Epis. xix, l. 7.

⁶ Regret is a woman's natural food—she thrives upon it.

A. W. PINERO, Sweet Lavender. Act iii.

⁷ Woman indeed was born of delay itself.
(Mulier profecto nata est ex ipsa mora.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 1292. (Act iv,
sc. 7.)

Women have many faults, but the worst of them all is that they are too pleased with themselves and take too little pains to please the men.
(Multa mulierum sunt vitia, sed hoc e multis maximumst, Quom sibi nimis placent minusque addunt operam, uti placent viris.)

PLAUTUS, Pænimus, l. 1203. (Act v, sc. 4.)

⁸ Nothing so true as what you once let fall,
"Most women have no characters at all,"
Matter too soft a lasting mark to bear,

And best distinguish'd by black, brown, or fair.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 1.

In men, we various ruling passions find;
In women two almost divide the kind;
Those only fix'd, they first or last obey,
The love of pleasure, and the love of sway.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 207.

Pleasures the sex, as children birds, pursue,
Still out of reach, yet never out of view.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 231.

Heav'n gave to woman the peculiar grace
To spin, to weep, and cully human race.

POPE, The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 160.

⁹ A woman who meditates alone meditates evil.
(Mulier cum sola cogitat, male cogitat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 369.

¹⁰ Such, Polly, are your sex—part truth, part fiction;
Some thought, much whim, and all a contradiction.

RICHARD SAVAGE, To a Young Lady.

¹¹ If ladies be but young and fair,
They have the gift to know it.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7,
l. 37.

'Tis beauty that doth oft make women proud; . . .

'Tis virtue that doth make them most admired; . . .

'Tis government that makes them seem divine.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act i, sc. 4, l. 128.

There was never yet fair woman but she made mouths in a glass.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 35.

Complacencies of the peignoir, and late
Coffee and oranges in a sunny chair.

WALLACE STEVENS, Sunday Morning.

¹² A woman moved is like a fountain troubled,
Muddy, ill-seeming, thick, bereft of beauty;
And while it is so, none so dry or thirsty
Will deign to sip or touch one drop of it.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
v, sc. 2, l. 142.

Why are our bodies soft and weak and smooth,
Unapt to toil and trouble in the world,
But that our soft conditions and our hearts
Should well agree with our external parts?

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
v, sc. 2, l. 165.

For women are as roses, whose fair flower
Being once display'd, doth fall that very hour.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 4,
l. 39.

¹³ In the beginning, said a Persian poet—Allah took a rose, a lily, a dove, a serpent, a little honey, a Dead Sea apple, and a handful of clay. When he looked at the amalgam—it was a woman.

WILLIAM SHARP. (Portfolio, July, 1894, p. 6.)

¹ No woman will deny herself the romantic luxury of self-sacrifice and forgiveness when they take the form of doing something agreeable.

BERNARD SHAW, Fanny's First Play, Act iii.

² For a woman glory can only be a splendid mourning for lost happiness. (La gloire ne saurait être pour une femme qu'un deuil éclatant du bonheur.)

MADAME DE STAËL, Pensées Détachées.

³ How foolish and miserably superstitious all we women are! (Ut stultæ et misere omnes sumus Religiosæ!)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 649. (Act iv, sc. 1.)

⁴ I have to thank God I'm a woman,
For in these ordered days a woman only
Is free to be very hungry, very lonely.

ANNA WICKHAM, The Affinity.

Love and grief and motherhood,
Fame and mirth and scorn—
These are all shall befall
Any woman born.

MARGARET WIDEMER, A Cyprian Woman.

I was, being human, born alone;
I am, being woman, hard beset;
I live by squeezing from a stone
The only nourishment I get.

ELINOR WYLIE, Let No Charitable Hope.

⁵ Often change doth please a woman's mind.

A woman's way to charm is not by writing.

ANNE FINCH, COUNTESS OF WINCHILSEA, Aristomenes; Prologue, l. 31.

Cécile: Do you think it wrong for a girl to know Latin?

Pierre: Not if she can cook a hare or a partridge as well as Mademoiselle Auclair! She may read all the Latin she pleases.

WILLA CATHER, Shadows on the Rock.

⁸ Women, in my observation, have little or no difference in them, but as they are or are not distinguished by education.

DANIEL DEFOS, The History of Projects; Of Academies.

⁹ A wise woman is twice a fool.
ERASMUS, Colloquies.

When an ass climbeth a ladder you may find wisdom in women.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 5546.

¹⁰ I hate a learned woman. May there never be in my shode a woman knowing more than a woman ought to know. (Σοφὴν δὲ μισῶ. Μὴ γὰρ ἐν γυναικὶ ὁμοίως εἴη φρονεῖσα πλεον ἢ γυναῖκα χρῆ.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 640.

I hate a woman who is forever poring over the Grammar of Palamon, who observes all the rules and laws of language, who quotes from ancient poets that I never heard of, and corrects her unlettered friends for slips of speech that no man need trouble about: let husbands at least be permitted to make slips in grammar!

JUVENAL, Satires, Sat. vi, l. 451.

Men hate learned women.

TENNYSON, The Princess, Pt. ii, l. 442.

'Tis pity learned virgins ever wed.

BYRON, Don Juan, Canto i, st. 22.

¹¹ The brain-women never interest us like the heart-women; white roses please less than red.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table, Ch. 6.

¹³ When you educate a man you educate an individual; when you educate a woman you educate a whole family.

DR. CHARLES D. McIVER, Address, North Carolina College for Women.

¹⁴ She can be as wise as we,
And wiser when she wishes.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Marian, St. 1.

¹⁵ A witty woman is a treasure; a witty beauty is a power.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways.

I know a thing that 's most uncommon;
(Envy, be silent and attend!)

I know a reasonable woman,

Handsome and witty, yet a friend.

POPE, On a Certain Lady at Court.

Make the door upon a woman's wit, and it will out at the casement.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, Act iv, sc. 1, l. 162.

¹⁶ A learned woman is not of much account in the world. A clever woman rules as much of it as lies in her neighbourhood—that is to say, as much as she cares to rule.

H. S. MERIDMAN, The Sowers, Ch. 7.

¹⁷ I'd as lief your little head
Should be cumbered up with lead

As with learning, live or dead,
Or with brains.

RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, To Doris.

1 If a young lady has that discretion and modesty, without which all knowledge is little worth, she will never make an ostentatious parade of it, because she will rather be intent on acquiring more, than on displaying what she has.

HANNAN MORE, Thoughts on Conversation.

2 So I wonder a woman, the Mistress of Hearts,
Should descend to aspire to be Master of Arts;
A Ministering Angel in woman we see,
And an angel need covet no other Degree.

CHARLES NEAVES, O Why Should a Woman Not Get a Degree?

3 Be to her virtues very kind;
Be to her faults a little blind;
Let all her ways be unconfin'd;
And clap your padlock—on her mind.

MATTHEW PRIOR, An English Padlock, l. 78.
(c. 1700) Quoted by Bickerstaffe, The Padlock. Act ii, sc. 3.

4 A blue-stocking is the scourge of her husband, children, friends, servants, and every one. (Une femme bel-esprit est le fléau de son mari, de ses enfants, de ses amis, de ses valets, de tout le monde.)

ROUSSEAU, Emile. Bk. i, ch. 5.

Every blue-stocking will remain a spinster as long as there are sensible men on the earth. (Toute fille lettrée restera fille toute sa vie, quand il n'y aura que des hommes sensés sur la terre.)

ROUSSEAU, Emile. Bk. i, ch. 5.

I always thought a tinge of blue
Improved a charming woman's stocking.

R. M. MILNES, Four Lovers. Pt. ii.

5 She was a woman of no mean endowments: she could write verses, bandy jests, and use language which was modest, or tender, or wanton; in fine, she was possessed of a high degree of wit and charm.

SALLUST, Catiline. Ch. 25. Of Sempronius.

A woman of charm is as rare as a man of genius.

SALVADOR DE MADARIAGA, Americans Are Boys.

6 Seek me a woman that hath a familiar spirit.

7 Most learned of the fair, most fair of the learned.

JACQUES SARRAZARD, Inscription to Cassandra Marchesia, in an edition of the latter's poems. (GREENWELL, Memoirs of Politian.)

8 Women have great talent, but no genius, for they always remain subjective.

SCHOPENHAUER, The World as Will and Idea.

9 If her breath were as terrible as her terminations, there were no living near her; she would infect to the north star.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 256.

For there be women, fair as she,
Whose verbs and nouns do more agree.

BRET HARTE, Mrs. Judge Jenkins.

10 Men call you fair, and you do credit it,
For that yourself ye daily such do see:
But the true fair, that is the gentle wit
And virtuous mind, is much more praised of me.

EDMUND SPENSER, Amoretti. Sonnet lxxix.

11 Enthusiasm about art is become a function of the average female being, which she performs with precision and a sort of haunting sprightliness.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Ch. 1.

12 She look'd as grand as doomsday and as grave!

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. i, l. 185.

For she was crammed with theories out of books.
TENNYSON, The Princess: Conclusion, l. 35.

13 In the East, women religiously conceal that they have faces; in the West, that they have legs. In both cases they make it evident that they have but little brains.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 31 Jan., 1852.

14 Very learned women are to be found, in the same manner as female warriors; but they are seldom or never inventors.

VOLTAIRE, Philosophical Dictionary; Women.

We issued gorged with knowledge, and I spoke:
"Why, sirs, they do all this as well as we."

"They hunt old trails," said Cyril, "very well; But when did woman ever yet invent?"

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. ii, l. 366.

15 There is nothing in the whole world so unbecoming to a woman as a nonconformist conscience.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act ii.

16 Ladies supreme among amusements reign;
By nature born to soothe, and entertain.

Their prudence in a share of folly lies:
Why will they be so weak, as to be wise?

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire vi, l. 190.

X—Woman: Her Power

17 Let men say what'er they will
Woman, woman, rules them still.

ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, The Sultan. Act II, sc. 1.

As Father Adam first was fool'd,
A case that's still too common,
Here lies a man a woman rul'd:

The Devil ruled the woman.

ROBERT BURNS, Epitaph on a Hen-Pecked Country Squire.

Disguise our bondage as we will,
Tis woman, woman rules us still.

THOMAS MOORE, Sovereign Woman.

Beshrew my heart, but it is wond'rous strange;
Sure there is something more than witchcraft in them,

That masters ev'n the wisest of us all.

NICHOLAS ROWE, Jane Shore. Act iv, sc. 1.

Why, this it is, when men are ruled by women.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 1, l. 62.

Women wear the breeches.

A noble man is led far by woman's gentle words.
(Ein edler Mann wird durch ein gutes Wort Der Frauen weit geführt.)

GÖTTE, Iphigenia auf Tauris. Act i, sc. 2, l. 162.

God in his harmony has equal ends
For cedar that resists and reed that bends;
For good it is a woman sometimes rules.

VICTOR HUGO, Estradmus. Pt. v.

Nature has given women so much power that the law has very wisely given them little.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letters. Vol. i, p. 104.

For them the Ceylon diver held his breath,
And went all naked to the hungry shark;
For them his ears gush'd blood; for them in death,
The seal on the cold ice with piteous bark

Lay full of darts; for them alone did seethe
A thousand men in troubles wide and dark.

KEATS, Isabella. St. 15.

Never any good came out of female domination. God created Adam master and lord of living creatures, but Eve spoiled all.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk. No. 727.

Better the devil's than a woman's slave.

MASSINGER, Parliament of Love. Act ii, sc. 2.

She can flourish staff or pen,

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 37.

He will not manage her, although he mount her.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 598.

Woman reduces us all to the common denominator.

BERNARD SHAW, Great Catherine. Sc. 1.

"One moral's plain," cried I, "without more fuss;

Man's social happiness all rests on us:

Through all the drama—whether damn'd or not—

Love gilds the scene, and women guide the plot."

SHERIDAN, The Rivals: Epilogue.

It is said of the horses in the vision, that "their power was in their mouths and in their tails." What is said of horses in the vision, in reality may be said of women.

Ladies whose smiles embroiled the world.

WILLIAM WATSON, Father of the Forest, I, 5.

² The history of women is the history of the worst form of tyranny the world has ever known. The tyranny of the weak over the strong. It is the only tyranny that lasts.

OSCAR WILDE, Women of No Importance, III.

XI—Woman: Her Advice

³ Woman's counsel is either too dear or too cheap. (Consilium feminile nimis carum aut nimis vile.)

ALBERTANO OF BRESCIA, Liber Consolationis. Cited as a common saying.

The counselling of women is either too dear, or else too little of price.

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibee. Sec. 15, l. 2285.

⁴ Ah! gentle dames, it gars me greet,
To think how monie counsels sweet,
How monie lengthen'd, sage advices,
The husband frae the wife despises!

BURNS, Tam o' Shanter, l. 33.

⁵ The best counsel is that of woman. (El primer consejo Ha de ser de la muger.)

CALDERON, El Médico de su Honra. Act I, sc. 2.

She generally gave herself very good advice (though she very seldom followed it).

CARROLL, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, I.

⁶ A woman's advice has little value, but he who won't take it is a fool.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. II, ch. 7.

⁷ Let no man value at a little price
A virtuous woman's counsel; her wing'd spirit
Is feather'd oftentimes with heavenly words.

CHAPMAN, The Gentleman Usher. Act IV, sc. 1.

⁸ Woman been wise in short avyusement.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Ek. IV, l. 936.

⁹ For women, with a mischief to their kind,
Fervent, with bad advice, our better mind.

DEYTER, The Cock and the Fox, l. 555.

A woman's counsel brought us first to woe,
And made her man his paradise forego,
Where at heart's ease he liv'd; and might have been

As free from sorrow as he was from sin.

DEYTER, The Cock and the Fox, l. 557.

¹⁰ Take the first advice of a woman and not the second. (Primo dedo mulieris consilio, secundo noli.)

SEMPRUS NORMANNUS. (GRYLAUS, Adagia, p. 150.)

Take the first advice of a woman, and not the second (Prends le premier conseil d'une femme, et non le second), for in processes of reasoning, out of which the second counsels spring, women may and will be inferior to us.

RICHARD CHEVENIX TRENCK, Proverbs and Their Lessons, IV, 89.

¹¹ Would men but follow what the sex advise,
All things would prosper, all the world grow wise.

POPE, January and May, l. 67.

As false as the devil.

JOHN CLARKE, Paramiologia, 139. (1639)

¹⁵ Woman's love is writ in water!

Woman's faith is traced on sand!

W. E. AYTOUN, Charles Edward at Versailles, I, 201.

This record will for ever stand,

"Woman, thy vows are traced in sand."

BYRON, To Women, l. 21.

Woman's faith, and woman's trust—

Write the characters in dust.

SCOTT, The Betrothed. Ch. 20.

¹⁶ But when I trust a wild fool, and a woman,
May I lend gratis, and build hospitals.

BAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Scornful Lady, III.

Trust a woman?

I'll trust the devil first; for he dare be Better than 's word sometime.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Chances. Act II, sc. 1.

A woman's oaths are waters, break with shaking.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Chances. Act II, sc. 1.

¹⁷ Believe a woman or an epitaph,

Or any other thing that's false.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 78.

1 Women I know are dressed in rags,
Women I know in lace,
And one in a dusky robe of gold
With a hooded cloak of mace;
But every robe and every rag
Is a secret hiding place.

ESTHER LILIAN DUFF, Not Three—But One.

2 A woman-friend! He that believes that weakness

Steers in a stormy night without a compass.
JOHN FLETCHER, Women Pleas'd, Act ii, sc. 1.

Who to a woman trusts his peace of mind,
Trusts a frail bark, with a tempestuous wind.
GEORGE GRANVILLE, The British Enchanters,
Act ii, sc. 1.

Who trusts himself to women, or to waves,
Should never hazard what he fears to lose.
JOHN OLDMIXON, Governor of Cyprus.

3 Her promise of friendship for any avail
Is as sure to hold as an eel by the tail.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. i, ch. 10.

He that hath a woman hath an eel by the tail.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Stornful Lady,
Act ii, sc. 1.

A woman and a wet eel both have slippery tails.
JAMES SHIRLEY, Arcadia, Act v, sc. 1.

4 As false
As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth,
As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf,
Pard to the hind, or stepdame to her son;
Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood,

As false as Cressid.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, Act iii,
sc. 2, l. 198.

5 Women have tongues of craft, and hearts of guile,
They will, they will not; fools that on them
trust;
For in their speech is death, hell in their
smile.

(Femina è cosa garrula e fallace:
Vuole e disvuole, è folle uom chi sen fida,
Sì tra sé volge.)

TASSO, Jerusalem Delivered, Canto xix, st. 84.

6 Commit thy ship unto the wind,
But not to faith of womankind;
For there's more credit in a wave
Than any faith that women have.

UNKNOWN, Women's Unfaith, (c. 1693)

7 False, but, however false, beloved still. (Perfida, sed, quamvis perfida, cara tamen.)

13 Lo, which sleights and subtleties
In women been!

CHAUCER, The Merchant's Tale: Epilogue, l. 3.

The wiles and guiles that women work,
Dissembled with an outward show,
The tricks and toys that in them lurk,
The cock that treads them shall not know.
SHAKESPEARE (?), The Passionate Pilgrim, l. 335.

14 Dust is lighter than a feather,
And the wind more light than either:
But a woman's fickle mind
More than feather, dust, or wind.
(Quid pluma levius?—Pulvis. Quid pulvere?
Ventus.

Quid vento? Mulier. Quid muliere? Nihil.)
WALTER DAVISON, Poetical Rhapsody, (1602)
Davison quotes the Latin as Incerti Auctoris.

What is lighter than the wind? a feather.
What is lighter than a feather? fire.
What lighter than fire? a woman.
What lighter than a woman? Nothing.
(Vente quid levius? fulgur. Quid fulgure? Gamma.
Flamma quid? mulier. Quid mulier? nihil.)
UNKNOWN, (Harleian MS. Po. 47, No. 3362.)

Pray, what is lighter than a feather?

Dust, my friend, in summer weather.
What's lighter than the dust, I pray?
The wind that blows them both away.
What is lighter than the wind?
The lightness of a woman's mind.
And what is lighter than the last?
Ah, now, my friend, you have me fast!
UNKNOWN. (Notes and Queries, 11 Aug., 1866.)

A woman often is but a feather in the wind.
(Une femme souvent N'est qu'une plume au vent.)

VICTOR HUGO, Le Roi S'Amuse. Act iv, sc. 2. (1832)

Woman is as fickle as a feather in the wind.
(La donna è mobile Qual piuma al vento.)

F. M. PIAVE. (VENDU, Rigoletto.) Piave wrote the libretto. (1851)

1 Woman often changes; foolish the man who trusts her. (Souvent femme varie; Bien fol est qui s'y fie.)

FRANÇOIS I OF FRANCE. Written by him with his ring on a window of the château of Chambord. Sometimes quoted, "Tout femme varie." (THÉOPHILE, Essai sur Divers Arts; BRANTÔME, Œuvres, vii, 395.)

2 He ploughs in sand, and sows against the wind,
That hopes for constant love of woman kind.

THOMAS FULLER, Medicina Gymnastica. Vol. x, p. 7.

He ploughs the waves, and sows the sand,
And seeks to gather the wind in a net,
Whose hopes on the heart of a woman are set.
(Ne l'onde solca, e ne l'arcia semina,
E'l vago vento sperta in rete accogliere
Ch' sue speranze fonda in cor di femina.)

JACOPO SANNAZARO, Ecologa Octava.

He waters, plows, and soweth in the sand,
And hopes the flick'ring wind with net to hold,
Who hath his hopes laid upon woman's hand.

4 What is there in this vile earth that more commendeth a woman than constancy?
JOHN LYLE, Euphues and His England.

5 There is no accounting for the actions of a woman.

NAPOLEON I. (O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile.)

6 How many pictures of one nymph we view,
And how unlike each other, all how true!
Arcadia's countess here, in ermined pride,
Is there, Pastora by a fountain side:
Here Fannia, lecting on her own good man,

And there a naked Leda with a swan. . . .
Whether the charmer sinner it, or saint it,
If folly grow romantic, I must paint it.
Come then, the colours and the ground prepare;
Dip in the rainbow, trick her off in air;
Choose a firm cloud before it fall, and in it
Catch, ere she change, the Cynthia of this minute.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 5.

Papilla, wedded to her am'rous spark,
Sighs for the shades—"How charming is a park!"

A park is purchased; but the Fair he sees
All bathed in tears—"Oh, odious, odious trees!"

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 37.

Ladies, like variegated tulips show;
'Tis to their changes half their charms they owe;
Fine by defect, and delicately weak,
Their happy spots the nice admirer take.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 41.

She went from Op'ra, Park, Assembly, Play,
To morning walks, and prayers three hours a day;

To part her time 'twixt reading and Bohea,
To muse, and spill her solitary tea;
Or o'er cold coffee trifle with the spoon,
Count the slow clock, and dine exact at noon.

POPE, Epistle to Mrs. Teresa Blount on Leaving Town, l. 13.

To give the sex their due,
They scarcely are to their own wishes true;
They love, they hate, and yet they know not why;

"Constant in nothing but inconstancy."

POPE. Quoting Richard Barnfield. See under FORTUNE.

7 No, no, I'll love no more; let him who can Fancy the maid who fancies every man;
In some lone place I'll find a gloomy cave,
There my own hands shall dig a spacious grave:

Then all unseen I'll lay me down and die

Since woman's constancy is—all my eye.

WILLIAM BARNES RHODES, Bombastes Furioso.

8 The vows of women
Of no more bondage be, to where they are made,
Than they are to their virtues; which is nothing.

women who love me.

BERNARD SHAW, The Philanderer. Act II.

² Yet do not my folly reprove;

She was fair—and my passion begun:
She smiled—and I could not but love;
She is faithless—and I am undone.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Pastoral Ballad. Pt. IV.

³ I know the nature of women: they won't when you would; when you won't, they long for it all the more. (Novi ingenium mulierum: Nolunt ubi velis, ubi nolis cupiunt ultro.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 812. (Act IV, sc. 7.)

When I say that I know women, I mean I know that I don't know them. Every single woman
I ever knew is a puzzle to me, as, I have no

My lord, you know what Virgil sings—
Woman is various and most mutable.

TENNYSON, Queen Mary. Act III, sc. 6, l. 77.

⁵ Shall I, wasting in despair,
Die because a woman's fair?
Or make pale my cheeks with care
'Cause another's rosy are?

Be she fairer than the day,
Or the flow'ry meads in May,
If she think not well of me,
What care I how fair she be?

GEORGE WITKER, The Lover's Resolution.

Be she meeker, kinder, than

Turtle-dove or pelican,
If she be not so to me,
What care I how kind she be?

GEORGE WITKER, The Lover's Resolution.

If she undervalue me,
What care I how fair she be?

SIR WALTER RALEIGH [?], His Further Resolution.

⁶ O faithless world, and thy most faithless part,
A woman's heart!

The true shop of variety, where sits
Nothing but fits

And fevers of desire, and pangs of love,
Which toys remove.

SIR HENRY WOTTON, The World.

⁷ Why should I sing of woman
And the softness of night,

When the dawn is loud with battle

And the day's teeth bite,
And there's a sword to lay my hand to
And a man's fight?

W. H. WRIGHT, Song Against Women.

I fear no power a woman wields
While I can have the woods and fields.
ERNEST MCGAFFEY, Song.

⁸ Woman's love is but a blast,
And turneth like the wind.

XIV—WOMAN: Her Tongue

^{8a} Ten measures of speech descended on the world; women took nine and men one.
Babylonian Talmud: Kiddushin, fo. 49b.

⁹ As men
Do walk a mile, women should talk an hour,
After supper: 'tis their exercise.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Philaster. Act II, sc. 4.

The pleasure of talking is the inextinguishable passion of a woman, coeval with the act of breathing.

LE SAGE, Gil Blas. Bk. VII, ch. 7.

¹⁰ I have but one simile, and that's a blunder,
For wordless woman, which is silent thunder.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto VI, st. 57.

¹¹ I am a woman, needs must I speak.

CHAUCER, The Merchant's Tale, l. 1061.

Do you not know I am a woman? when I think,
I must speak.

A free-tongued woman,
And very excellent at telling secrets.

MIDDLETON AND MARSHALL, The Old Law. Act
IV, sc. 2.

How hard it is for women to keep counsel!

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act II, sc. 4, l. 9.

¹⁶ Half the sorrows of women would be averted if they could repress the speech they know to be useless—nay, the speech they have resolved not to utter.

GEORGE ELIOT, Felix Holt. Ch. 2.

¹ I am very fond of the company of ladies. I like their beauty, I like their delicacy, I like their vivacity, and I like their silence.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (SEWARD, Johnsoniana, 617.)

Silence in woman is like speech in man, Deny't who can.

BEN JONSON, Epicure. Act II, sc. 2.

² Such a clatter of words pours from her tongue that you would think all the pots and bells were being clashed together. (Verborum tanta cadit vis, Tot pariter pelves ac tintinnabula dicas Pulsari.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 440.

I know that we women are all justly accounted chatterboxes; and then there is that old proverb, "Never now, nor in any age, such a wonder as a dumb woman." (Nam mutum loquaces merito omnes habemur, Nec mutam profecto repertam ullum esse Aut hodie dicunt mulierem aut ullo in seculo.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 124. (Act II, sc. 1.)

³ High flights she had, and wit at will; And so her tongue lay seldom still: For in all visits who but she To argue, or to repartee?

MATTHEW PRINCE, Hans Carvel, l. 5.

⁴ It is better to dwell in a corner of the house-top than with a brawling woman in a wide house.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxi, 9.

⁵ One tongue is enough for a woman.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 59. This proverb is sometimes ascribed to John Milton, because he used it when asked if he intended to teach his daughters Greek and Latin.

You wished me to a wife, fair, rich and young, That had the Latin, French and Spanish tongue. I thank't, and told you I dear'd none such, And said, One language may be tongue too much.

Then love I not the learned? yes, as my life; A learned mistress, not a learned wife.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Of Women Learned in the Tongues. (Epigrams. Bk. iv, epig. 261.)

⁶ And the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for 't.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act II, sc. 2, l. 338.

Think you a little din can daunt mine ears? Have I not in my time heard lions roar? Have I not heard the sea puff'd up with winds? Rage like an angry boar chafed with sweat? Have I not heard great ordinance in the field, And heaven's artillery thunder in the skies? Have I not in a pitched battle heard Loud 'arums, neighing steeds, and trumpets' clang?

And do you tell me of a woman's tongue, That gives not half so great a blow to hear As will a chestnut in a farmer's fire?

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act I, sc. 2, l. 200.

I will board her, though she chide as loud As thunder when the clouds in autumn crack.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act I, sc. 2, l. 95.

Say that she rail; why then I'll tell her plain She sings as sweetly as a nightingale:

Say that she frown; I'll say she looks as clear As morning roses newly wash'd with dew: Say she be mute and will not speak a word; Then I'll commend her volubility, And say she uttereth piercing eloquence.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act II, sc. 1, l. 171.

⁷ To be slow in words is a woman's only virtue SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act III, sc. 1, l. 338.

⁸ Grief hath two tongues, and never woman yet Could rule them both without ten women's wit.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 1007.

⁹ Silence gives grace to woman. (Τῷ σιωπῇ χάρις ἔσται γυναικί.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 293.

A silent woman is always better than a talkative one. (Tacitast melior mulier semper quam loquens.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. v, l. 103.

When lovely woman stoops to folly,
And finds too late that men betray,
What charm can soothe her melancholy?
What art can wash her guilt away?

The only art her guilt to cover,
To hide her shame from every eye,
To give repentance to her lover,

And wring his bosom, is—to die.

GOLDSMITH, Song. (Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 24.)

And one false step entirely damns her fame,
In vain with tears the loss she may deplore,
In vain look back on what she was before;
She sets like stars that fall, to rise no more.

BERNARD SHAW, An Unsocial Socialist. Ch. 18.

XIX—Woman: A Woman's Vengeance

⁸ The fool that willingly provokes a woman
Has made himself another evil angel,
And a new hell, to which all other torments
Are but mere pastime.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Cupid's Revenge. Act III.

⁹ Women do most delight in revenge.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. III, sec. 12.

Sweet is revenge—especially to women.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 124.

And their revenge is as the tiger's spring,
Deadly, and quick, and crushing.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 199.

No vengeance like a woman's!

GEORGE GRANVILLE, The British Enchanters. Act v, sc. 2.

Not ev'n the soldier's fury, rais'd in war,
The rage of tyrants, when defiance stings 'em!
The pride of priests, so bloody when in power!
Are half so dreadful as a woman's vengeance.

RICHARD SAVAGE, Sir Thomas Overbury.

¹⁰ I've seen your stormy seas and stormy women,
And pity lovers rather more than seamen.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 53.

And her brow clear'd, but not her troubled eye;
The wind was down, but still the sea ran high.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 120.

And femininely meaneth furiously,
Because all passions in excess are female.

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act III, sc. 1.

¹¹ We shall find no fiend in hell can match the fury of a disappointed woman,—scorned, alighted, dismissed without a parting pang.

COLLEY CIBBER, Love's Last Shift. Act iv, sc. 1. (1696)

Heav'n has no rage like love to hatred turn'd,
Nor hell a fury like a woman scorn'd.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act III, sc. 8. Concluding lines. (1697)

Is any Panther's, Lioness's rage
So furious, any Torrent's fall so swift
As a wrong'd woman's hate?

XX—Woman: A Woman's Will

He is a fool who thinks by force or skill
To turn the current of a woman's will.

CALDERON, Adventures of Five Hours. Act v, sc. 3, l. 483. (Samuel Tuke, tr.)

Where is the man who has the power and skill
To stem the torrent of a woman's will?
For if she will, she will, you may depend on't;
And if she won't, she won't; so there's an end on't.

UNKNOWN, Inscription, on pillar, Dane John Field, Canterbury, Eng. (London Examiner, 31 May, 1829.)

She is one of them to whom God bade ho;
She will all have, and will right nought forego.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. I, ch. 11.

First, then, a woman will, or won't,—depend on't;

If she will do't, she will; and there's an end on't.

But, if she won't, since safe and sound your trust is,

Fear is affront: and jealousy injustice.

When they die, they will have their wills while they live.

JOHN MARSHWICKHAM, Diary, p. 92. (1602)

Men, dying, make their wills, but wives
Escape a task so sad;

Why should they make what all their lives
The gentle dames have had?
J. G. Saxe, Woman's Will.

Thus it shall befall
Him, who to worth in women overtrusting,
Lets her will rule; restraint she will not brook;
And left to herself, if evil thence ensue,
She first his weak indulgence will accuse.

XXI—Woman and the Home

The works of women are symbolical.

We sew, sew, prick our fingers, dull our sight,
Producing what? A pair of slippers, sir,
To put on when you're weary.

E. B. BACWING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. I, l. 466.

Dusting, darning, drudging, nothing is great or small,

Nothing is mean or irksome, love will hallow it all.

WALTER CHALMERS SMITH, Hilda Among the Broken Gods. Bk. II.

She was so diligent, with-outen sloth,

To serve and please everich in that place,

That all her loved that looked upon her face.

CHAUCER, Tale of the Man of Lawe, l. 432.

Her natural turn is grave and domestic; and she seems to have been raised by her aunts à la grace, instead of being raised in a hot bed, as most young ladies are of late.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 30 Sept., 1757.

In her very style of looking

There was cognisance of cooking!

From her very dress were peeping

Indications of housekeeping!

ROBERT BUCHANAN, White Rose and Red.

Her best and safest club is the home. . . .

Sensible and responsible women do not want to vote. The relative positions to be assumed by man and woman in the working out of our civilization were assigned long ago by a higher intelligence than ours.

GROVER CLEVELAND, (Ladies' Home Journal, April and October, 1903.)

When housewives all the house forsake,

And leave good men to brew and bake,

Withouten guile, then be it said,

That house doth stand upon its head.

A woman is to be from her house three times: When she is christened, married, and buried.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 480.

³ A wife, domestic, good, and pure,
Like snail, should keep within her door;
But not, like snail, with silver track,
Place all her wealth upon her back.

W. W. HOW, Good Wives.

Apples us'd to paint a good housewife upon a snail, which intimated that she would be as slow from gadding abroad, and when she went she should carry her house upon her back; that is, she should make all sure at home.

JAMES HOWELL, Fairy of Beasts, p. 58. (1660)

Phidias made the statue of Venus at Elis with one foot upon the shell of a tortoise, to signify two great duties of a virtuous woman, which are to keep home and be silent.

W. DE BRITAINNE, Human Prudence, p. 134.

All virtuous women, like tortoises, carry their house on their heads, and their chappel in their heart, and their danger in their eye, and their souls in their hands, and God in all their actions.

XXIV—Woman and Love

See also Love in Man and Woman

Women wish to be loved without a why or a wherefore; not because they are pretty, or good, or well-bred, or graceful, or intelligent, but because they are themselves.

AMEL, Journal, 17 March, 1868.

A woman can be anything that the man who loves her would have her be.

J. M. BARRIE, Tommy and Grisel, p. 31.

As a man thinketh, so is she.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

A woman, like the Koh-i-noor,
Mounts to the price that's put on her.

COVENTRY PATMORE, The Angel in the House: The Koh-i-noor.

A woman who is loved always has success.

VICKI BAUM, Grand Hotel, p. 132.

If I ever really love it will be like Mary Queen of Scots, who said of her Bothwell that she could follow him round the world in her nightgown.

J. M. BARRIE, What Every Woman Knows. Act ii.

THROUGH THICK AND THIN, see under PROVERBS.

A compliment for a woman in love is like a sudden warmth falling around her—it is intoxication—it is like strong wine, one grows drunk with it.

HENRY BERNSTEIN, The Thief. Act ii.

A woman . . . always feels herself complimented by love, though it may be from a man incapable of winning her heart, or perhaps even her esteem.

ABEL STEVENS, Life of Madame de Staël. Ch. 3.

The heart of woman tastes no truer joy,
Is never flatter'd with such dear enchantment—
'Tis more than selfish vanity—as when
She hears the praises of the man she loves.

JAMES THOMSON, Tancred and Sigismunda. Act i, sc. 1.

For women (I am a woman now like you)

There is no good of life but love.
ROBERT BROWNING, In a Balcony.

1 All women love great men
If young or old; it is in all the tales.

ROBERT BROWNING, In a Balcony.

Such great achievements cannot fail
To cast salt on a woman's tail.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 1, l. 277.

I love you for the sake of what you are,
And not of what you do.

JEAN INGELW, Honours. Pt. 1, st. 43.

Intellect may subdue women—make slaves of them; and they worship beauty perhaps as much as you do. But they only love forever and are mated when they meet a noble nature.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Richard Feverel. Ch. 13.

It is always interesting, in the case of a great man, to know how he affected the women of his acquaintance.

JOHN MORLEY, Burke, p. 116.

Mrs. Allonby: We women adore failures. They lean on us.

Lord Thingworth: You worship successes. You cling to them.

Mrs. Allonby: We are the laurels to hide their baldness.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance.
Act i.

2 And all because a lady fell in love.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 51.

So loving and so lovely.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 193.

If women could be fair and yet not fond.

EDWARD DE VERE, Woman's Changeableness.

3 Why did she love him? Curious fool!—be still—

Is human love the growth of human will?

BYRON, Lara. Canto ii, st. 22.

4 There are women whose talent it is to serve.
And some are great lovers.

JOHN DRINKWATER, Mary Stuart.

5 The hearts of women sicken for love more than do the hearts of men, but honor curbs desire.

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 220.

Every woman loves more than a man loves, but out of shame she hides the sting of love, although she be mad for it. (Πάντα γυνὴ φιλεῖ πλέον ἀνδρὶ: αἰδέσθην δὲ καὶ οὐκ ἐκέρχεται ἔρωτος, τρυφῶντα καὶ αὐτῇ.)

a woman!

FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act iv, sc. 2.

A curse attends that woman's love

Who always would be pleasing.

JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act ii, sc. 2.

8 "I love you" is all the secret that many, nay, most women have to tell. When that is said, they are like China-crackers on the morning of the fifth of July.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Professor at the Breakfast-
Table*. Ch. 8.

9 And beaux were turn'd to flambeaux where she came.

THOMAS HOOD, Bianca's Dream, l. 12.

10 How could I tell I should love thee to-day
Whom that day I held not dear?

How could I know I should love thee away

When I did not love thee near?

JEAN INGELW, Supper at the Mill.

11 Never will you find a woman who spares the man who loves her; for though she be herself aflame, she delights to torment him.
(Nullum invenies quæ parcat amanti; Ardeat

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 674.

⁶ 'Tis never for their wisdom that one loves the wisest, or for their wit that one loves the wittiest; 'tis for benevolence and virtue and honest fondness one loves people; the other qualities make one proud of loving them, too.

HISTER LYNCH PROZZI, Letter to Fanny Burney, 1781.

⁷ Oh! say not Woman's love is bought
With vain and empty treasure!
Oh! say not Woman's heart is caught
By ev'ry idle pleasure!

When first her gentle bosom knows
Love's flame, it wanders never,
Deep in her heart the passion glows;
She loves, and loves for ever!

UNKNOWN. An Italian proverb.

⁸ Things too wonderful for me, which I knew not.

Old Testament: Job, xlii, 3.

There be three things which are too wonderful for me, yea, four which I know not: The way of an eagle in the air; the way of a serpent upon a rock; the way of a ship in the midst of the sea; and the way of a man with a maid.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxx, 18, 19.

There be triple ways to take, of the eagle or the snake,

Or the way of a man with a maid.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Long Trail.

There be three things full hard to be known which way they will draw. The first is of a bird sitting upon a bough. The second is of a vessel in the sea. And the third is the way of a young man.

UNKNOWN. (Reliq. Antiquæ, i, 233. 1417)

O day and night, but this is wondrous strange!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 164.

There is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 385.

Can such things be,
And overcome us like a summer's cloud,
Without our special wonder?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 110.

¹¹ Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pity too.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act i, sc. 4, l. 81.

'Twas strange, 'twas passing strange;

'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 160.

place, Dearborn, Mich.*

II—Woods: Description

17 This forest looks the way
Nightingales sound.
GRACE HAZARD CONKLING, Frost on a Window.

18 In the midway of this our mortal life,
I found me in a gloomy wood astray,
Gone from the path direct.
(Nel mezzo del cammin di nostra vita
Mi ritrovai per una selva oscura,
Che la diritta via era smarrita.)
DANTE, Inferno. Canto i, l. 1.

19 As oft as on the earth I've lain
I've died and come to life again
For only men who are brave and good
Can come out changeless from a wood.
MARY CAROLYN DAVIES, Out of the Earth.

20 At the gates of the forest, the surprised man of the world is forced to leave his city estimates of great and small, wise and foolish.
The knapsack of custom falls off his back.
EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

When a lady rallied Adam Smith on his plain dress, he pointed to his well-bound library, and said, "You see, Madame, I am a beau in my books." The farmer in this month [October] is very patient of his coarse attire, and thinks, "at least, I am a beau in my woods."
EMERSON, Journals, October, 1864.

The woods appear
With crimson blotches deeply dashed and crossed,—
Sign of the fatal pestilence of Frost.
BAYARD TAYLOR, Mon-da-Min. St. 38.

21 To linger silent among the healthful woods, musing on such things as are worthy of a wise and good man, (Tacitum silvas inter reptare salubres, Curantem quicquid dignum sapiente bonoque est.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 4, l. 4.

22 The perplex'd paths of this drear wood,
The nodding horror of whose shady brows
Threats the forlorn and wand'ring passenger.

^{1a} The forests of America, however slighted by man, must have been a great delight to God;
for they were the best he ever planted.

JOHN MUIR, The American Forests. (Atlantic Monthly, vol. lxxx, p. 145.)

² Hath not old custom made this life more sweet Than that of painted pomp? Are not these woods

More free from peril than the envious court?

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 2.
Under the shade of melancholy boughs,
Lose and neglect the creeping hours of time.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 111.

Unfrequented woods

⁵ The woods please us above all things. (Nobis placeant ante omnia sylvæ.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. ii, l. 62.

In such green palaces the first kings reign'd,

Slept in their shades, and angels entertain'd;

With such old counsellors they did advise,

And, by frequenting sacred groves, grew wise.

EDMUND WALLER, On St. James' Park, l. 71.

⁶ One impulse from a vernal wood

May teach you more of man,

Of moral evil and of good,

Than all the sages can.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 5.

And, oh! he had that merry glance

That seldom lady's heart resists,

Lightly from fair to fair he flew,

And loved to plead, lament, and sue—

Suit lightly won, and short-lived pain,

For monarchs seldom sigh in vain.

not worth the winning.

LONGFELLOW, Courtship of Miles Standish. Pt. iii.

¹⁷ Archly the maiden smiled, and, with eyes

overrunning with laughter,

Said, in a tremulous voice, "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?"

LONGFELLOW, The Courtship of Miles Standish. Pt. III, conclusion.

I wooed the blue-eyed maid,
Yielding, yet half afraid,
And in the forest's shade
Our vows were plighted.

LONGFELLOW, The Skeleton in Armor.

Ere long the time will come, sweet Preciosa,
When that dull distance shall no more divide us;

And I no more shall scale thy wall by night
To steal a kiss from thee, as I do now.

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act I, sc. 3.

Her virtue and the conscience of her worth,
That would be woo'd, and not unsought be won.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 502.

The time I've lost in wooing,
In watching and pursuing
The light that lies
In woman's eyes,

Has been my heart's undoing.

THOMAS MOORE, The Time I've Lost in Wooing.

The heart of the wooer is warm, but warmer
The heart of the wooing.

RICHARD REALY, Indirection.

I touch her, like my beads, with devout care,
And come unto my courtship as my prayer.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, A Devout Lover.

It was a happy age when a man might have wooed his wench with a pair of kid leather gloves, a silver thimble, or with a tawdry lace; but now a velvet gown, a chain of pearl, or a coach with four horses will scarcely serve the turn.

BARNABE RICH, My Lady's Looking Glass.

Afraid he would now, and now, and now, pop the question; which he had not the courage to put.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison, vi, xi, 101.

And frame love ditties passing rare,
And sing them to a lady fair.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto I, st. 7.

Most fair,
Will you vouchsafe to teach a soldier terms
Such as will enter at a lady's ear
And plead his love-suit to her gentle heart?

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 2, l. 98.

I was not born under a rhyming planet, nor I cannot woo in festival terms.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, v, 2, 41.

Now, as I said before, I was never a maker of phrases.

I can march up to a fortress and summon the place to surrender,
But march up to a woman with such a proposal, I dare not.

I'm not afraid of bullets, nor shot from the mouth of a cannon,
But of a thundering "No!" point-blank from the mouth of a woman,
That I confess I'm afraid of, nor am I ashamed to confess it!

LONGFELLOW, Courtship of Miles Standish. Pt. II.

She 's beautiful and therefore to be woo'd:
She is a woman, therefore to be won.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VI. Act v, sc. 3, l. 78.

She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd;
She is a woman, therefore may be won.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, ii, 1, 82.

Was ever woman in this humour woo'd?

Was ever woman in this humour won?

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act I, sc. 2, l. 228.

For nature framed all women to be won,

TASSO, Jerusalem Delivered. Bk. ii, st. 15.

Be merry, and employ your chiefest thoughts
To courtship and such fair ostents of love
As shall conveniently become you there.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 8, l. 43.

You have brought her into such a canaries as 'tis wonderful.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 61.

If you were men, as you are men in show,
You would not use a gentle lady so;
To vow and swear and superpraise my parts,
When I am sure you hate me with your hearts.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 151.

She wish'd she had not heard it, yet she wish'd

That heaven had made her such a man: she thank'd me,
And bade me, if I had a friend that loved her,

I should but teach him how to tell my story,
And that would woo her.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act I, sc. 3, l. 162.

Gentle thou art and therefore to be won,
Beauteous thou art, therefore to be assailed;
And when a woman woos, what woman's son
Will sourly leave her till she have prevailed?

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xli.

Women are angels, wooing:
Things won are done, joy's soul lies in the doing;

That she belov'd knows nought that knows not this:

Men prize the thing ungain'd more than it is.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, I, 2, 312.

Our kindred, though they be long ere they are wooed, they are constant being woo: they are burs, I can tell you; they'll stick where they are thrown.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 118.

There is a young lady I have set my heart on; though whether she is a-goin' to give me hern, or give me the mitten, I ain't quite satisfied.

II—Wooring: Its Delights

All soft and sweet the maid appears,

With looks that know no art,

And though she yields with trembling fears,

She yields with all her heart.

APRHA BEHN, The Emperor of the Moon. Act iii, sc. 3.

Much ado there was, God wot!

He would love and she would not.

She said, Never was man true;

He said, None was false to you.

He said, He had lov'd her long;

She said, Love should have no wrong.

Coridon would kiss her then;

She said, Maids must kiss no men

Till they did for good and all.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Phyllida and Coridon.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act

iv, sc. 2, l. 66.

Wooring thee, I found thee of more value

Than stamps in gold or sums in sealed bags;

And 'tis the very riches of thyself

That now I aim at.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.

Act iii, sc. 4, l. 15.

III—Wooring: Advice

Woo the fair one when around

Early birds are singing;

When o'er all the fragrant ground

Early herbs are springing:

When the brookside, bank, and grove

All with blossom laden,

Shine with beauty, breathe of love,
Woo the timid maiden.

BRYANT, Love's Lessons.

1 She that with poetry is won,
Is but a desk to write upon;
And what men say of her they mean
No more than on the thing they lean.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 1, l. 591.

2 Maidens, like moths, are ever caught by glare,
And Mammon wins his way where seraphs might despair.

BYRON, Child Harold. Canto 1, st. 9.

The miller, he becht her a heart leal and loving;
The laird did address her wi' matter mair moving:
A fine pacing-horse, wi' a clear, chained bridle,
A whip by her side, and a bonie side-saddle!

ROBERT BURNS, Meg o' the Mill.

3 He that will win his dame must do
As love does when he draws his bow;
With one hand thrust the lady from,
And with the other pull her home.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 1, l. 449.

4 A man shall win us best with flattery.
CHAUCER, Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 76.

Have you not found out that every woman is infallibly to be gained by every sort of flattery, and every man by one sort or other?

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 16 March, 1752.

The firmest purpose of a woman's heart
To well-timed, artful flattery may yield.

GEORGE LILLO, Elmerick.

5 He behaved as most professed admirers do.
Said some civil things of my face, talked much of his want of merit, and the greatness of mine; mentioned his heart, gave a short tragedy speech, and ended with pretended rapture.

GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer. Act v, l.

6 If doughty deeds my lady please,
Right soon I'll mount my steed;
And strong his arm and fast his seat,
That bears frae me the meed, . . .

Then tell me how to woo thee, Love,
O tell me how to woo thee!

For thy dear sake nae care I'll take,
Tho' ne'er another throw me.

ROBERT CUNNINGHAM-GRAHAM, Tell Me How to Woo Thee.

7 But, alas! alas! for the Woman's fate,
Who has from a mob to choose a mate
'Tis a strange and painful mystery!
But the more the eggs, the worse the hatch;
The more the fish, the worse the catch;
The more the sparks, the worse the match;
Is a fact in Woman's history.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmarnock: Her Courtship. St. 7.

8 The surest way to hit a woman's heart is to take aim kneeling.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, The Way to a Woman's Heart.

9 If I speak to thee in friendship's name,
Thou think'st I speak too coldly;
If I mention Love's devoted flame,
Thou say'st I speak too boldly.

THOMAS MOORE, How Shall I Woo?

10 Frivolous minds are won by trifles: many have found useful the deft arranging of a cushion; it has helped, too, to stir the air

13 Friendship is constant in all other things
Save in the office and affairs of love:
Therefore all hearts in love use their own tongues;

Let every eye negotiate for itself
And trust no agent.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
ii, sc. 1, l. 182.

14 If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully.
Or if thou think'st I am too quickly won,
I'll frown and be perverse and say thee nay,
So thou wilt woo: but else, not for the world.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 94.

15 Win her with gifts, if she respect not words;
Dumb jewels often in their silent kind
More than quick words do move a woman's mind.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act iii, sc. 1, l. 89.

Flatter and praise, commend, extol their graces;
Though ne'er so black, say they have angels' faces.

That man that hath a tongue, I say, is no man,
If with his tongue he cannot win a woman.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act iii, sc. 1, l. 102.

Say that upon the altar of her beauty
You sacrifice your tears, your sighs, your heart:
Write till your ink be dry and with your tears
Moist it again, and frame some feeling line.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act iii, sc. 2, l. 73.

Giving presents to a woman to secure her love, is as vain as endeavouring to fill a sieve with water.

Who fears to ask, doth teach to be deny'd.

ROBERT HERRICK, No Bashfulness in Begging.

I'll woo her as the lion woos his brides.

JOHN HOME, Douglas. Act i, sc. 1.

I now will court her in the conqueror's style;

"Come, see, and overcome."

MASSINGER, The Maid of Honour. Act ii, sc. 1.

The adventurous lover is successful still.

POPE, Prologue for Mr. D'Urfey's Last Play.

A pressing lover seldom wants success,

Whilst the respectful, like the Greek, sits down

And wastes a ten years' siege before one town.

NICHOLAS ROWE, To the Inconstant: Epilogue,
l. 18.

He her chamber-window will ascend

And with a corded ladder fetch her down.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Act iii, sc. 1, l. 39.

He that climbs the tall tree has won right to the fruit,

He that leaps the wide gulf should prevail in his suit.

SCOTT, The Talisman. Ch. 26.

Ah, me! it was he that won her

Because he dared to climb!

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Nocturne.

Never give her o'er;

For scorn at first makes after-love the more.

If she do frown, 'tis not in hate of you,

But rather to beget more love in you:

If she do chide, 'tis not to have you gone,

For why, the fools are mad, if left alone.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Act iii, sc. 1, l. 94.

Foul words and frowns must not repel a lover;

What though the rose have prickles, yet 'tis pluck'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 573.

He that after ten denials

Dares attempt no further trials,

Hath no warrant to acquire

The dainties of his chaste desire.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Wooing Stuff.

Bring therefore all the forces that ye may,

And lay incessant battery to her heart;

Plaints, prayers, vows, ruth, sorrow, and dis-

may;

Those engines can the proudest love convert.

And, if those fail, fall down and die before her;
So dying live, and living do adore her.
EDMUND SPENSER, Amoretti. Sonnet xiv.

V—Wooring: Pursuer and Pursued

1 While I am I, and you are you,
So long as the world contains us both,
Me the loving and you the loth,
While the one eludes, must the other pursue.
ROBERT BROWNING, Life in a Love.

In fact, 'tis the season of billing and cooing,
Amorous flying and fond pursuing.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Fine Weather on the Gentia. Pt. I, st. 1.

2 'Tis leap year, lady, and therefore very good to enter a courtier.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Bussy d'Ambois. Act I, sc. 1. (1608) The custom of women proposing in leap year is said to have originated from a law passed in Scotland in 1228; another legend attributes it to St. Patrick.

Alas! to seize the moment
When heart inclines to heart,
And press a suit with passion,
Is not a woman's part.

If man come not to gather
The roses where they stand,
They fade among their foliage;
They cannot seek his hand.
BRYANT, Song. From the Spanish of Iglesias.

What then in love can woman do?
If we grow fond they shun us;
And when we fly them, they pursue,
And leave us when they've won us.
JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act III, sc. 8.

We cannot fight for love, as men may do;
We should be woo'd and were not made to woo.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act II, sc. 1, l. 241.

Though I lov'd you well, I woo'd you not;
And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man,
Or that we women had men's privilege
Of speaking first.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act III, sc. 2, l. 134.

3 Most complying, When denying,
And to be follow'd only flying.
WILLIAM CONGREVE, Samle to Jupiter.

4 Flee it [love], and it will flee then,
Follow it, and it will follow thee.
THOMAS HOWELL, H. His Devices, 64. (1581)

I have pursued her as love hath pursued me;
which hath been on the wing of all occasions. . . .
And that hath taught me to say this:
"Love like a shadow flies when substance love
pursues;
Pursuing that that flies, and flying what pursues."

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act II, sc. 2, l. 208. (1600)

5 Follow a shadow, it still flies you,
Seem to fly it, it will pursue:
So court a mistress, she denies you;
Let her alone, she will court you.
Say are not women truly, then,
Styled but the shadows of us men?
BEN JONSON, That Women Are but Men's Shadows.

Flee, and she follows; follow, and she'll flee;
Than she there's none more coy; there's none more fond than she.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. I, No. 4.

6 Coy Hebe flies from those that woo,
And shuns the hands would seize upon her;
Follow thy life, and she will sue
To pour for thee the cup of honor.
J. R. LOWELL, Hebe. St. 7.

7 You pursue, I fly; you fly, I pursue. Such is my mind. (Insequeris, fugio; fugis, insequor; hæc mihi mens est.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 83.

8 'Tis the quarry that flees that the hunter follows; what he takes he leaves behind, and ever strains to the prey ahead. (Venator sequitur fugientia; septa relinquit Semper et inventis ulteriora petit.)
OVID, Amores. Bk. II, eleg. 9, l. 9.

Many women desire what flees them; they hate what is too forward. (Quod refugit, multæ cupiunt: odere quod instat.)
OVID, Art Amatoria. Bk. I, l. 717.

9 Ah, whither shall a maiden flee,
When a bold youth so swift pursues,
And siege of tenderest courtesy,
With hope perseverant, still renews?
COVENTRY PATMORE, The Angel in the House.
Canto XII, The Chase.

10 You think that you are Ann's suitor; that you are the pursuer and she the pursued; that it is your part to woo, to persuade, to prevail, to overcome. Fool: it is you who are the pursued, the marked-down quarry, the destined prey.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act II.
Pursued man loves to think himself pursuer.
EDMUND VANCE COOKE, *From the Book of Ex-
tenuations: Ruth*.

A man always chases a woman until she catches
him.

UNKNOWN. (Columnist in El Paso Times.)

11 My love is male and proper-man
And what he'd have he'd get by chase,
So I must cheat as women can
And keep my love from off my face.
'Tis folly to my dawning, thrifty thought
That I must run, who in the end am caught.
ANNA WICKHAM, The Contemplative Quarry.

VI—Wooring and Repenting

¹ Of her scorn the maid repented,
And the shepherd of his love.

ANNA LETITIA BARRAULD, Leave Me, Simple Shepherd.

² And she, she lies in my hand as tame
As a late pear basking over the wall;
Just a touch to try and off it came;
'Tis mine—can I let it fall?

ROBERT BROWNING, A Light Woman.
That you're in a terrible taking,
By all these sweet oglings I see,
But the fruit that will fall without shaking,
Indeed is too mellow for me.

LADY MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, To a Lady Making Love.

³ For this is a sort of engagement, you see,
Which is binding on you but not binding on me.

WILLIAM ALLEN BUTLER, Nothing to Wear.

⁴ I'm jilted, forsaken, outwitted;
Yet think not I'll whimper or bawl—
The lass is alone to be pitied
Who ne'er has been courted at all; . . .
What though at my heart he has tilted,
What though I have met with a fall?
Better be courted and jilted
Than never be courted at all.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Jilted Nymph.
Never wedding, ever wooring,
Still a love-lorn heart pursuing,
Read you not the wrong you're doing
In my cheek's pale hue?
All my life with sorrow strewing—
Wed, or cease to woo.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Maid's Remonstrance.

⁵ It's better to change your attitude an' pay some heart balm than to be dug up later an' analyzed.

KIRK HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast, p. 85.

⁶ A fool there was and he made his prayer
(Even as you and I)
To a rag and a bone and a hank of hair
(We called her the woman who did not care)
But the fool he called her his lady fair—
(Even as you and I)

RUDYARD KIPPLING, The Vampire, St. 1. Written to accompany the description of Burne-Jones's picture, "The Vampire," in the catalogue of the 1897 summer exhibition of the New Gallery, London.

⁷ Ye shall know my breach of promise.
Old Testament: Numbers, xiv, 34.
Chops and Tomato sauce. Yours, Pickwick.
Chops! Gracious heavens! and Tomato sauce!
Gentlemen, is the happiness of a sensitive and confiding female to be trifled away by such shallow artificers as these?

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers, Ch. 34.

Thou didst swear to me upon a parcel-gilt goblet, sitting in my Dolphin-chamber, at the round table, by a sea-coal fire, on Wednesday in Wheeson week, when the prince broke thy head for liking his father to a singing-maid of Windsor, thou didst swear to me then, as I was washing thy wound, to marry me, and make me my lady thy wife. Canst thou deny it?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, Act II, sc. 1, l. 93.

⁸ Who wooed in haste, and means to wed at leisure.

SHAKESPEARE, Taming of the Shrew, III, 2, 11.

⁹ Words are the physicians of a mind diseased.
(Ὁρῶνς νοσοῦντας εὖναι λόγους λέγει.)
ÆSCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 380.

The spoken word is man's physician in grief.
(Λόγους λόγους ἔστιν ἀνθρώπου λόγους.)
MENANDER, Fragment, No. 559.

¹⁰ Words are the tokens current and accepted for conceits, as moneys are for values.
BACON, Advancement of Learning, Bk. II.

Words are wise men's counters, they do but reckon by them; but they are the money of fools.
THOMAS HOBBES, Leviathan, Pt. I, ch. 4.

¹¹ All words are pegs to hang ideas on.
HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit: Human Mind.

Dialect words—those terrible marks of the beast to the truly genteel.

THOMAS HARDY, Mayor of Casterbridge, Ch. 20.

¹³ For what are the voices of birds
Ay, and of beasts—but words, our words,
Only so much more sweet?

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes, Pt. IV.

¹⁴ Articulate words are a harsh clamor and dis-sonance. When man arrives at his highest perfection, he will again be dumb!

HAWTHORNE, American Note-Books, April, 1841.

¹⁵ A word is not a crystal, transparent and unchanging, it is the skin of a living thought and may vary greatly in color and content according to the circumstances and time in which it is used.

JUSTICE O. W. HOLMES, Decision. (Truism v. Eisner, 245 U.S. 418.)

Life and language are alike sacred. Homicide and verbiage—that is, violent treatment of a word with fatal results to its legitimate meaning, which is its life—are alike forbidden.

HOLMES, Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table, Ch. 1.

¹ Words are the soul's ambassadors, who go abroad upon her errands to and fro.

JAMES HOWELL, Of the Strange Vestu of Words.

² Sincere words are not grand.

LAO-TSE, The Simple Way, No. 81.

^{2a} We should have a great many fewer disputes in the world if words were taken for what they are, the signs of our ideas only, and not for things themselves.

JOHN LOCKE, Essay on the Human Understanding, Pt. iii, ch. 10.

³ Things were first made, then words.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, A Wife.

As shadows attend substances, so words follow upon things.

RICHARD CHENEVIX TRENCH, Study of Words.

⁶ Out, idle words, servants to shallow fools! Unprofitable sounds, weak arbitrators!

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, St. 146.

Weasel words are words that suck all the life out of the words next to them, just as a weasel sucks an egg and leaves the shell.

STEWART CHAPLIN, The Stained-Glass Political Platform, (Century Mag., June, 1900, p. 305.)

One of our defects as a nation is a tendency to use what have been called "weasel words." When a weasel sucks an egg, the meat is sucked out of the egg; and if you use a "weasel word" after another there is nothing left of the other.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, at St. Louis, Mo., 31 May, 1916.

Spare my pronunciation's vagaries . . ."

To that she merely said, "Vagaries!"

MORRIS BISHOP, Why and How I Killed My Wife.

⁵ Well, "slithy" means "lithe and slimy."
. . . You see it's like a portmanteau—there are two meanings packed up into one word.

LEWIS CARROLL, Through the Looking-Glass.
Ch. 6. Hence "portmanteau word," a word formed by combining the elements of two other words.

Pennyboy: Emissaries? stay, there's a fine new word, Tom;

Pray God it signify anything! what are emissaries?

Thomas: Men employed outward, that are sent abroad

To fetch in the commodity.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News. Act i, sc. 1.

I will maintain the word with my sword to be a good soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command, by heaven. Accommodated; that is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated; or, when a man is, being, whereby, a' may be thought to be accommodated; which is an excellent thing.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 82.

⁶ "The question is," said Alice, "whether you can make words mean so many different things."

"The question is," said Humpty Dumpty,
"which is to be master—that's all."

LEWIS CARROLL, Through the Looking-Glass
Ch. 6.

⁷ Words are the dress of thoughts; which should no more be presented in rags, tatters, and dirt, than your person should.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 25 Jan., 1750.

⁸ Philologists who chase

A panting syllable through time and space,
Start it at home, and hunt it in the dark
To Gaul, to Greece, and into Noah's ark.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 691.

And torture one poor word ten thousand ways.

DRYDEN, Mac Flecknoe, l. 208

How many quarrels, how many important ones, have been caused by doubt as to the meaning of this single syllable, "Hoc" (Combien de querelles, et combien importantes, a produit au monde le doute du sens de cette syllabe, "Hoc.")

MONTAIGNE, Essays Bk. ii, ch. 12. Referring to the controversies on transubstantiation,
"Hoc est corpus meum."

Imperious some a classic fame demand
For heaping up, with a laborious hand,
A waggon-load of meanings for one word.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 85.

Each wight who reads not, and but scans and spells,

Each word-catcher that lives on syllables.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 165.

⁹ The little and, the tiny if,
The ardent ahs and ohs,

They haunt the lanes of poesy,
The boulevards of prose.

NATHALIA CRANE, Allanvers.

¹⁰ He had used the word in its Pickwickian sense . . . he had merely considered him a humbug in a Pickwickian point of view.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 1. A paraphrase of a quarrel between Brougham and Canning in the House of Commons, 17
April, 1823.

"Do you spell it with a 'V' or a 'W'?" inquired
the judge

"That depends upon the taste and fancy of the speller, my Lord," replied Sam.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 34.

"Put it down a we, my Lord, put it down a we."

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 34.

¹¹ As long as words a different sense will bear,
And each may be his own interpreter,
Our airy faith will no foundation find,
The word's a weathercock for ev'ry wind.

DRYDEN, The Hind and Panther. Pt. i, l. 462.

¹ There is no choice of words for him who clearly sees the truth. . . . Any word, every word in language, every circumstance, becomes poetic in the hands of a higher thought.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

² Grant me some wild expressions, Heavens, or I shall burst. . . . Words, words, or I shall burst.

FARQUHAR, The Constant Couple. Act v, sc. 3.

With long-tailed words in osity and ation.

J. HOOKHAM FREER, The Monks and the Giants. Canto i, l. 6.

While words of learned length and thund'ring sound

Amazed the gazing rustics rang'd around.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 213.

Words a foot-and-a-half long. (Sesquipedalia verba.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 98.

Physicians deafen our ears with the honorificabilitudinitatibus of their heavenly Panotheca, their sovereign guisicum.

THOMAS NASH, Lenten Stuff. (1599)

Thou art not so long by the head as honorificabilitudinitatibus.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 1, l. 44. (1594)

The iron age returned to Erubus, And Honorificabilitudinitatibus Thrust out the kingdom by the head and shoulders.

BRAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Mad Lover.

This word is said to have first appeared in 1548 in a volume entitled The Complaynt of Scotland. It was no doubt a stock example of the longest Latin word.

⁴ Harsh words, though pertinent, uncouth appear;

None please the fancy who offend the ear.

GARTH, The Dispensary. Canto iv, l. 204.

⁵ I had always imagined that Cliché was a suburb of Paris, until I discovered it to be a street in Oxford.

PHILIP GUBALLA, Some Historians.

⁶ I hate to see a load of band-boxes go along the street, and I hate to see a parcel of big words without anything in them.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk, II, 190.

⁷ Some scurvy quaint collection of fustian phrases, and uplandish words.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Faire Maids of the Exchange. Act II, sc. 2.

⁸ Sorrowful words become the sorrowful, angry words the passionate, jesting words the merry, and solemn words the grave. (Tristia maestum Voltum verba decent, iratum plena minarum, Ludentem lasciva, severum seria dictu.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 105.

⁹ How forcible are right words!

Old Testament: Job, vi, 25.

Hold fast the form of sound words.

New Testament: II Timothy, i, 13.

¹⁰ The study of words is the first distemper of learning.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Notæ. Quoting BACON.

¹¹ His words were simple words enough,

And yet he used them so,

That what in other mouths was rough

In his seemed musical and low.

J. R. LOWELL, The Shepherd of King Admetus.

¹² How many honest words have suffered corruption since Chaucer's days!

THOMAS MIDDLETON, No Wit, No Help, Like a Woman's. Act II, sc. 1.

¹³ His words, . . . like so many nimble and airy servitors, trip about him at command.

MILTON, Apology for Smectymnus.

High words, that bore

Seemance of worth, not substance.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 528.

Words repeated again have as another sound, so another sense.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. III, ch. 12.

¹⁴ To bring in a new word by the head and shoulders, they leave out the old one.

MONTAIGNE, Essays: Bk. III, ch. 5.

The third refinement observable in the letter I send you consists of the choice of certain words invented by some pretty fellows, such as banter, bamboozle, . . . and kidney . . . some of which are now struggling for the vogue, and others are in possession of it.

SWIFT, The Tailor, 28 Sept., 1710.

¹⁵ I almost had forgotten

That words were meant for rhyme:

And yet how well I knew it—

Once upon a time!

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, I Almost Had Forgotten.

¹⁶ In words as fashions the same rule will hold, Alike fantastic if too new or old:

Be not the first by whom the new are tried,

Nor yet the last to lay the old aside.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. II, l. 133.

Command old words, that long have slept, to wake,

Words that wise Bacon, or brave Raleigh spake.
POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii,
epist. 2, l. 167.

So all my best is dressing old words new.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. lxxvi.

That would be howl'd out in the desert air,
Where hearing should not latch them.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 193.

7 The fool hath planted in his memory
An army of good words; and I do know
A many fools, that stand in better place,
Garnish'd like him, that for a tricky word
Defy the matter.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
iii, sc. 5, l. 71.

His very words are a fantastical banquet, just so many strange dishes.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
ii, sc. 3, l. 21.

The words of his mouth were smoother than butter, but war was in his heart: his words were softer than oil, yet were they drawn swords.
Old Testament: Psalms, lv, 21.

See also under SPEECH.

19 The time will come when three words, uttered with charity and meekness, shall receive a far more blessed reward than three thousand volumes written with disdainful sharpness and wit.

RICHARD HOOKER, Ecclesiastical Polity.

20 No simple word
That shall be uttered at our mirthful board,
Shall make us sad next morning; or affright
The liberty that we'll enjoy to-night.

BEN JONSON, Epigrams. No. 101.

21 Smooth words in place of gifts. (Dicta docta pro datis.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 525. (Act iii, sc. 1.)

So spake those wary foes, fair friends in look,

And so in words great gifts they gave and took,
And had small profit, and small loss thereby.

He scatter'd not in ears, but grafted them,
To grow there and to bear.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
i, sc. 2, l. 53.

Whose words all ears took captive.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
v, sc. 3, l. 17.

Let not his smoothing words Bewitch your hearts.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 156.

VII—Words: Bitter Words

3 A blow with a word strikes deeper than a blow with a sword.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
i, sec. ii, mem. 4, subs. 4. Quoted as an old saying.

Sharp words make more wounds than surgeons can heal.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Mirror of Man. Sig.
A4. (1594)

An acute word cuts deeper than a sharp weapon.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 575.

More sharp word than sword.
UNKNOWN, Ancrene Riwe, 74. (c. 1270)

4 Your little words are hard and cold,
You try to use them in a sling
As David did to slay the bold
Goliath—but they only sting!
MAY BRINKLEY, Pebbles.

5 Religion, freedom, vengeance, what you will—
A word 's enough to raise mankind to kill.
BYRON, Lara. Canto ii, l. 122.

A single little word can strike him dead. (Ein Wörtlein kann ihn fällen.)
LUTHER, Table-Talk. No. 430. Referring to the Pope.

6 She dealt her pretty words like blades,
As glittering they shone,
And every one unbared a nerve
Or wanted with a bone.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. v, No. 29.

7 Whatsoever word thou speaketh, that abash thou also hear. ('Ὅτις αὖ ἐλάττω λόγος, τοῖς καὶ ἐλαττωθήσεται.)

I know thou'rt full of love and honesty, And weigh'st thy words before thou givest them breath.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 118.

¹⁸ Deep in my heart subsides the infrequent word, And there dies slowly throbbing like a wounded bird.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Her Portrait. St. 3

X—Words: Their Beauty

1 What things have we seen Done at the Mermaid! heard words that have been
So nimble and so full of subtle flame
As if that every one from whence they came
Had meant to put his whole wit in a jest,
And resolved to live a fool the rest
Of his dull life.

FRANCIS BEAUMONT, Letter to Ben Jonson.

God wove a web of loveliness,
Of clouds and stars and birds,
But made not any thong at all
So beautiful as words.

ANNA HEMPELZAD BRANCH, Her Words.

2 My words are little jars
For you to take and put upon a shelf,
Their shapes are quaint and beautiful,
And they have many pleasant colours and lustres
To recommend them.

Also the scent from them fills the room
With sweetness of flowers and crushed grasses.

AMY LOWELL, A Gift.

Such little, puny things are words in rhyme:
Poor feeble loops and strokes as frail as hairs;
You see them printed here, and mark their chime,
And turn to your more durable affairs.
Yet on such petty tools the poet dares
To run his race with mortar, bricks and lime,
And draws his frail stick to the point, and stares
To aim his arrow at the heart of Time.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Quickening.

3 Words, like fine flowers, have their colours too.
EARNEST REYS, Words.

4 I love smooth words, like gold-enameled fish
Which circle slowly with a silken swish,
And tender ones, like downy-feathered birds:
Words shy and dappled, deep-eyed deer in herds.

ELINOR WYLIE, Pretty Words.

XI—Words: Their Finality

5 A word once spoken revoked can not be.
ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Shyp of Folsy, p. 108.
(1509)

Boys flying kites haul in their white winged birds.
You can't do that way when you're flying words.
"Careful with fire," is good advice we know;
"Careful with words," is ten times doubly so.
Thoughts unexpressed may sometimes fall back
dead;

But God Himself can't kill them when they're said.

WILL CARLETON, First Settler's Story. St. 21.

6 A word spoken is an arrow let fly.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 486.
The arrow belongs not to the archer when it has once left the bow; the word no longer belongs to the speaker when it has once passed his lips.

HARRIS, Religion and Philosophy: Preface.

7 Winged words. ("Ἑρμα πτερόεσσα.")

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xx, l. 331. This phrase occurs 46 times in the Iliad and 58 times in the Odyssey.

Winged words. (Geflügelte Worte.)

GEORGE BUCHMANN. Title of his book on proverbs and famous phrases.

Our words have wings, but fly not where we would.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. iii.

8 It is as easy to recall a stone thrown violently from the hand as a word which has left your tongue. (Ὁρ' ἐκ χειρὸς μολόνα καρτερὸν λίθου ἄρ' ἀνασχεῖν, οὐτ' ἀπὸ γλώσσης λόγον.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 1092K.

The word once spoken flies beyond recall. (Semel emissum volat irrevocabile verbum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 71.

The written word, unpublished, can be destroyed, but the spoken word can never be recalled. (Delere licebit Quod nunc edideris; necrit vox missa reverti.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 389.

9 Look out how you use proud words.

When you let proud words go, it is not easy to call them back.

CARL SANDBURG, Primer Lesson.

10 O! many a shaft, at random sent,
Finds mark the archer little meant!
And many a word at random spoken
May soothe or wound a heart that's broken!
SCOTT, Lord of the Isles. Canto v, st. 18.

Thy actions to thy words accord.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iii, l. 9.

Say well and do well, end with a letter,
Say well is good, but do well is better.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 194.

Though language forms the preacher,
'Tis "good works" make the man.

ELIZA COOK, Good Works.

Good words and ill deeds deceive wise and fools.

JOHN DAVIES, Scourge of Folly, 46. (1611)

That you can speak so well, and do so ill!

MABINGER, The Fatal Dowry. Act iv, sc. 4.

What pity 'tis, one that can speak so well,
Should, in his actions, be so ill.

MABINGER, Parliament of Love. Act iii, sc. 3.

Feeble deeds are vainer far than words.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. iv, ch. 3.

Go put your creed into the deed,
Nor speak with double tongue.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, Ode: Concord.

Words and deeds are quite indifferent forms of the divine energy. Words are also actions, and actions are a kind of words.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

Never should this thing have been,
That words with men should more avail than deeds.

(Ἀνθρώποις οὐκ ἔχρη ποτε τῶν πραγμάτων τῇ γλώσσῃ ἰσχύειν πλέον.)

EURIPIDES, Hecuba, l. 1187.

Deeds not words.

FLETCHER, The Lover's Progress. Act iii, sc. 6.

For now the field is not far off

Where we must give the world a proof

Of deeds, not words.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 867.

Deeds are males, words are females.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruits. Fo. 32. (1578) "Le parole son femmine, i fatti son maschi" has a point in Italian which it lacks in English.

They say in Italy, that deeds are men, and words are but women.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. i, sec. 5, letter 21.

Words are women, deeds are men.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

In frequent use thereafter.

I am not yet so lost in lexicography as to forget that words are the daughters of the earth, and that things are the sons of heaven.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary of the English Language: Preface.

Words are the daughters of earth, and deeds are the sons of heaven.

SIR WILLIAM JONES. Translating a Hindoo proverb.

Words are men's daughters, but God's sons are things.

To honour his own word as if his God's.
TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 469.

WORDSWORTH, WILLIAM

¹⁷ Time may restore us in his course
Goethe's sage mind and Byron's force;
But where will Europe's latter hour
Again find Wordsworth's healing power?
MATTHEW ARNOLD, Memorial Verses.

¹⁸ No poet ever took himself more seriously than did William Wordsworth; however wide his outlook, he lived as a sectary in a closed system, and imagined that whatever he happened to think was of primary importance.
ROBERT BRIDGES, Collected Essays. Vol. II.

¹⁹ Just for a handful of silver he left us,
Just for a riband to stick in his coat—
Found the one gift of which fortune bereft us,
Lost all the others she lets us devote.
ROBERT BROWNING, The Lost Leader. Wordsworth's acceptance of the laureateship and a pension had seemed a defection from the Liberal cause.

²⁰ That mild apostate from poetic rule,
The simple Wordsworth, framer of a lay
As soft as evening in his favourite May, . . .
Who, both by precept and example, shows
That prose is verse, and verse is merely prose.
BYRON, English Bards, Scotch Reviewers, l. 236.

Yet not to vulgar Wordsworth let us stoop,
The meanest object of the lowly group,
Whose verse, of all but childish prattle void,
Seems blessed harmony to Lamb and Lloyd.

BYRON, English Bards, Scotch Reviewers, l. 903.

Let simple Wordsworth chime his childish verse.

BYRON, English Bards, Scotch Reviewers, l. 917.

One finds also a kind of sincerity in his speech.
But for prolixity, thinness, endless dilution, it excels all the other speech I have heard from mortals.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Essays: Wordsworth.

Is Wordsworth a bell with a wooden tongue?
R. W. EMERSON, Journals, 1863.

This will never do!

FRANCIS LORD JEFFREY, Review, of Wordsworth's Excursion, (Edinburgh Review.)

Although Jeffrey completely failed to recognize Wordsworth's real greatness, he was yet not wrong in saying of the Excursion as a work of poetic style, "This will never do!"

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Poems of William Wordsworth: Preface.

A modern Moses who sits on Pisgah with his back obstinately turned to that promised land, the Future; he is only fit for those old maid tabbies, the Muses.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Review of Wordsworth's Poems.

To William Wordsworth, true philosopher and inspired poet, who, by the special gift and calling of Almighty God, whether he sang of man or of nature, failed not to lift up men's hearts to holy things.

JOHN KEEL, Lectures on Poetry: Dedication.

Wordsworth in sonnet is a classic too
And on that grass plot sits at Milton's side.

W. S. LANDOR, To the Author of Festus.

We are not called upon to place great men of his stamp as if they were collegians in a class-list.

JOHN MONLEY, Miscellanies: Introduction to Wordsworth.

To his own self not always just,
Bound in the bonds that all men share,—
Confess the failings as we must,
The lion's mark is always there!
Nor any song so pure, so great,
Since his, who closed the sightless eyes,
Our Homer of the war in Heaven,
To wake in his own Paradise.

FRANCIS TURNER PALGRAVE, Wordsworth.

This laurel greener from the brows
Of him that utter'd nothing base.

THOMSON, To the Queen.

Wordsworth, thy music like a river rolls

Among the mountains, and thy song is fed
By living springs far up the watershed.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Wordsworth.

What hadst thou that could make such large amends

For all thou hadst not, and thy peers possessed,

Motion and fire, swift means to radiant ends?

Thou hadst, for weary feet, the gift of rest.

WILLIAM WATSON, Wordsworth's Grave, ii, 3.

No word-mosaic artificer, he sang

A lofty song of lowly weal and dole.

Right from the heart, right to the heart it sprang,

Or from the soul leapt instant to the soul.

WILLIAM WATSON, Wordsworth's Grave, iii, 3.

He [Wordsworth] found in stones the sermons he had already hidden there.

5 My new-cut ashlar takes the light
Where crimson-blank the windows flare;
By my own work, before the night,
Great Overseer, I make my prayer.

RUDYARD KIPLING, A Dedication.

Father, I scarcely dare to pray,
So clear I see, now it is done,
How I have wasted half my day,
And left my work but just begun.

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, A Last Prayer.

6 But till we are built like angels—with hammer and chisel and pen,
We will work for ourself and a woman, for ever and ever, amen.

RUDYARD KIPLING, An Imperial Rescript.

This we learned from famous men,
Knowing not its uses,
When they showed, in daily work,
Man must finish off his work—
Right or wrong, his daily work—
And without excuses.

RUDYARD KIPLING, A School Song.

7 The Sons of Mary seldom bother, for they have inherited that good part;
But the Sons of Martha favour their Mother of the careful soul and the troubled heart.

And because she lost her temper once, and because she was rude to the Lord her Guest,
Her Sons must wait upon Mary's Sons, world without end, reprove, or rest.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Sons of Martha, St. 1.

And the Sons of Mary smile and are blessed—they know the angels are on their side.

They know in them is the Grace confessed, and for them are the Mercies multiplied.

They sit at the Feast—they hear the Word—they see how truly the Promise runs.

They have cast their burden upon the Lord, and—the Lord He lays it on Martha's Sons!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Sons of Martha, St. 8.

And Jesus answered and said unto her, Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things: But one thing is needful; and Mary has chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her.

New Testament: Luke, x, 41, 42.

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. ii, ch. 17.
- All work . . . is noble; work is alone noble.
CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. iii, ch. 4.
- Blessed is he who has found his work; let him ask no other blessedness.
CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. iii, ch. 11.
- The "wages" of every noble work do yet lie in Heaven or else nowhere.
CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. iii, ch. 12.
- ⁵ The best worship, however, is stout working.
THOMAS CARLYLE, Letter to His Wife.
- The glory of a workman, still more of a master-workman, that he does his work well, ought to be his most precious possession; like the "honour of a soldier" dearer to him than life.
THOMAS CARLYLE, Shooting Niagara. Sec. 7.
- ⁶ Work, and your house shall be duly fed:
Work, and rest shall be won;
I hold that a man had better be dead
Than alive when his work is done.
ALICE CARY, Work.
- Work and thou wilt bless the day
Ere the toil be done;
They that work not, can not pray,
Can not feel the sun.
God is living, working still,
All things work and move;
Work, or lose the power to will,
Lose the power to love.
J. S. DWIGHT, Working.
- ⁷ Honor lies in honest toil.
GROVER CLEVELAND, Letter Accepting Nomination for President, 18 August, 1894.
- ⁸ Night and day! night and day!
Sound the song the hours rehearse!

- Work and play! work and play!
The order of the universe.
JOHN DAVIDSON, Piper, Play.
- Give me simple laboring folk,
Who love their work,
Whose virtue is a song
To cheer God along,
H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.
- ⁹ There is no substitute for hard work.
THOMAS A. EDISON. (Golden Book, April, 1931.)
- As a cure for worrying, work is better than whiskey.
THOMAS A. EDISON, Interview on Prohibition.
- Hard work is the best investment a man can make.
C. M. SCHWAB, Ten Commandments of Success.
- ¹⁰ The high prize of life, the crowning fortune of a man, is to be born with a bias to some pursuit which finds him in employment and happiness.
EMERSON, *Conduct of Life: Considerations by
the Way*.
- Truly, one thing is sweet
Of things beneath the Sun;
This, that a man should earn his bread and eat,
Rejoicing in his work which he hath done.
JOSEPHINE PRESTON PEABODY, The Singing Man.
- ¹¹ I look on that man as happy, who, when there is question of success, looks into his work for a reply.
EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.
- Too busy with the crowded hour to fear to live or die.
EMERSON, Quatrains: Nature.
- The sum of wisdom is, that the time is never lost that is devoted to work.
EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Success.

ami, c'est encor le travail.)
COLLIN D'HARLEVILLE, Mœurs du Jour, l. 4.
- ¹⁵ Your work and labour of love.
New Testament: Hebrews, vi, 10.
- And only the Master shall praise us, and only the Master shall blame;
And no one shall work for money, and no one shall work for fame;
But each for the joy of the working, and each,
in his separate star,
Shall draw the Thing as he sees it, for the God of Things as They Are!
RUDYARD KIPING, The Seven Seas: L'Esvoi.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jaculus Prudentium.

If you work for yourself you do it for your own amusement, which is all right; if you work for others, you reap nothing but ingratitude.

GUY DE MAUPASSANT, Waiver, A Bock.

Work is something you want to get done; play is something you just like to be doing.

HARRY LEON WILSON, The Spenders, p. 26.

² Any man who has a job has a chance.

⁴ Every child should be taught that useful work is worship and that intelligent labor is the highest form of prayer.

R. G. INGERSOLL, How to Reform Mankind.

⁵ If you will let me, I will wish you in your future what all men desire—enough work to do, and strength enough to do your work.

RUPWARD KIPPLING, Address to Medical Students, 1903.

⁶ But finding ample recompense
For life's ungarlanded expense
In work done squarely and unwasted days.

J. R. LOWELL, Under the Old Elm.

⁷ In the morning, when thou art sluggish at rousing, let this thought be present: "I am rising to a man's work." (Ἐγὼ ἀνδρῶν ἔργον ἐκτελοῦμαι.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations, Bk. v, sec. 1.

Give us this day our daily work.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Philistine. Vol. xxv, p. 51.

Thank God every morning when you get up that you have something to do that day which must be done whether you like it or not. Being forced to work and forced to do your best, will breed in you temperance and self-control, diligence and strength of will, cheerfulness and content, and a hundred virtues which the idle will never know.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Town and Country Sermons.

⁸ The sick man is not to be pitied who has a remedy in his sleeve. (Le malade n'est pas à plaindre, qui a la guérison en sa manche.) i.e., his arm, capable of work.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. III, ch. 3.

⁹ Work is the sustenance of noble minds. (Generosos animos labor nutrit.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epist. xxi, 5.

¹⁰ A piece of work
So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In workmanship and value.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act II, sc. 4, l. 72.

^{10a} Great is work which lends dignity to man.
Babylonian Talmud: Nedarim, p. 49b.

Flay a carcass in the market to earn thy living, and say not, "I am a great man and it is beneath my station."

Babylonian Talmud: Pesachim, p. 113a.

¹¹ Good for the body is the work of the body, good for the soul the work of the soul, and good for either the work of the other.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 23 Jan., 1841.

¹² Work is the inevitable condition of human life, the true source of human welfare.

¹⁶ In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread.
Old Testament: Genesis, iii, 19. Frequently misquoted "In the sweat of thy brow."

Which I have earned with the sweat of my brows.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. I, bk. i, ch. 4.

Let us go forth and resolutely dare with sweat of brow to toil our little day.

MILTON, Treatise of Education.

¹⁷ Work—work—work
Till the brain begins to swim;

Work—work—work

Till the eyes are heavy and dim! . . .
Stitch—stitch—stitch,

In poverty, hunger, and dirt,
Sewing at once with a double thread,
A Shroud as well as a Shirt.

THOMAS HOOD, The Song of the Shirt.

¹⁸ For men must work, and women must weep,
And there's little to earn, and many to keep,
Though the harbour bar be moaning.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Three Fishers. St. 1.

For men must work, and women must weep,
And the sooner it's over the sooner to sleep;
And good-bye to the bar and its moaning.
CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Three Fishers. St. 3.

1 Who first invented work, and bound the free
And holy-day rejoicing spirit down
To the ever-haunting importunity
Of business? . . . Sabbathless Satan!
CHARLES LAMB, Sonnet: Work. See also under

I.—World: Definitions

7 The world is a great poem, and the world's
The words it is writ in, and we souls the thoughts.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Everywhere.

8 The created world is but a small parenthesis in eternity.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt.
iii, sec. 29.

The world was made to be inhabited by beasts,
but studied and contemplated by man.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i,
sec. 13.

The world to me is but a dream or mock-show, and we all therein but Pantalcons and Antics, to my severer contemplations.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i,
sec. 41.

For the world, I count it not an inn, but an hospital, and a place, not to live, but to die in.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii,
sec. 11. See also LIFE: AN INN.

9 The severe schools shall never laugh me out of the philosophy of Hermes, that this visible world is but a picture of the invisible, wherein, as in a portrait, things are not truly, but in equivocal shapes, and as they counterfeit some more real substance in that invisible fabric.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i,
sec. 15.

Hath this world, without me wrought,
Other substance than my thought?
Lives it by my sense alone,
Or by essence of its own?

FREDERIC HENRY HEDGECOCK, Questionings.

The visible world is but man turned inside out that he may be revealed to himself.

HENRY JAMES THE ELDER. (J. A. KELLOG, Digest of the Philosophy of Henry James.)

This outer world is but the pictured scroll
Of worlds within the soul;
A coloured chart, a blazoned missal-book,
Whereon who rightly look
May spell the splendours with their mortal eyes,
And steer to Paradise.

ALFRED NOYES, The Two Worlds.

My God, I would not live
Save that I think this gross hard-seeming world
Is our misshaping vision of the Powers
Behind the world, that make our griefs our gains.
TENNYSON, The Sisters, l. 223.

The true mystery of the world is the visible, not the invisible.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 2.

10 What, in fact, is the world? A glass which shines,
Which a breath has made, and which a breath
can destroy.
(Quel est-il en effet? C'est un verre qui luit, Qu'un souffle a produit, et qu'un souffle peut détruire.)

GILLES DE CAUX, L'Horloge de Sable. (D'IS-RAELI, Curiosities of Literature.)

11 The world is a wheel, and it will all come round right.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 70.

12 The world is a divine dream, from which we may presently awake to the glories and certainities of day.

EMERSON, *Nature, Addresses, and Lectures:
Spirit*.

The existing world is not a dream, and cannot with impunity be treated as a dream; neither is it a disease; but it is the ground on which you stand, it is the mother of whom you were born.
EMERSON, *Nature, Addresses, and Lectures:
The Conservative*.

13 Our Copernican globe is a great factory or shop of power, with its rotating constellations, times, and tides.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Resources.

The world is a proud place, peopled with men of positive quality, with heroes and demigods standing around us, who will not let us sleep.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Books.

1 This world's a city, full of straying streets,
And death's the market place, where each one meets.

JOHN FLETCHER, Two Noble Kinsmen. Act i, sc. 5.
This world's a city full of crooked streets,
Death's the market-place where all men meet;
If life were merchandise that men should buy,
The rich would always live, the poor might die.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4841. From the Italian, "Il mondo è fatto a scale, Chi le scende, e chi le sale."

3 The world is a beautiful book, but of little use to him who cannot read it. (Il mondo è un bel libro, ma poco serve a chi non lo sa leggere.)

GOLDONI, Pamela. Act i, sc. 14.

The world is woman's book. (Le monde est le livre des femmes.)

ROUSSEAU.

4 The world is nothing but vanity cut out into several shapes.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 240.

5 The world!—it is a wilderness,
Where tears are hung on every tree.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Melancholy, l. 13.

6 There are two worlds; the world that we can measure with line and rule, and the world that we feel with our hearts and imaginations.

LEIGH HUNT, Men, Women, and Books: Fiction and Matter-of-Fact.

7 The world, in its best state, is nothing more than a larger assembly of beings, combining to counterfeit happiness which they do not feel.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Adventurer. No. 120.

8 The world is a nettle; disturb it, it stings.
Grasp it firmly, it stings not.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. i, canto 3, sec. 2.
Let any man once show the world that he feels
Afraid of its bark, and 'twill fly at his heels:
Let him fearlessly face it, 'twill leave him alone:
But 'twill fawn at his feet if he flings it a bone.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. i, canto 2, st. 7.
See also BOLDNESS; ITS VIRTUES.

9 The world is but a perpetual see-saw. (Le monde n'est qu'une bransloire perenne.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2.

11 The world is not a "prison house" but a kind of spiritual kindergarten where millions of bewildered infants are trying to spell God with the wrong blocks.

E. A. ROBINSON, Letter to the Bookman, March,

1897 (p. 7), referring to a short notice of his first book, The Torrent and the Night Before, by Harry Thurston Peck, which had appeared in the issue of The Bookman for February, 1897 (p. 510), and in which Mr. Peck had said, "The world is not beautiful to him, but a prison-house."

12 The world is a looking glass, and gives back to every man the reflection of his own face.
Frown at it and it will in turn look sourly upon you; laugh at it and with it, and it is a jolly kind companion.

THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Ch. 2.

The world is a mirror of infinite beauty, yet no man sees it. It is a Temple of Majesty, yet no man regards it. It is a region of Light and Peace, did not men disquiet it. It is the Paradise of God.

THOMAS TRAHERNE, Centuries of Meditations.

13 The world is but a frozen kind of gas.
A transient ice we sport on, where, alas!
Diverted by the pictures in the glass,
We heed not the Realities that pass.

J. T. TROWBRIDGE, Idealist.

14 What is this world? A net to snare the soul.
GEORGE WHETSTONE, The World.

15 I have often said, and oftener think, that this world is a comedy to those that think, a tragedy to those that feel—a solution of why
Democritus laughed and Heraclitus wept
HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Sir Horace Mann,
31 Dec., 1769.

16 The world's a prophecy of worlds to come.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 16.

17 What a dark world—who knows?—

¹⁷ Daff'd the world aside, And bid it pass.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 96.

¹⁸ Why, then the world's mine oyster,
Which I with sword will open.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act ii, sc. 2, l. 2.

¹⁹ I consider the world as made for me, not me for the world. It is my maxim therefore to enjoy it while I can, and let futurity shift for itself.

SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 45.

²⁰ The world knows nothing of its greatest men.

SIR HENRY TAYLOR, I Philip van Artevelde.
Act i, sc. 5, l. 19.

The world will commonly end by making men
what it thinks them.

SIR HENRY TAYLOR, The Statesman, p. 135.

²¹ One world at a time.

H. D. THOREAU, Remark. See 2298:5.

²² 'Tis a very good world to live in,
To lend, or to spend, or to give in;
But to beg, or to borrow, or to get a man's own,

It's the very worst world that ever was known.
JOHN WILMOT, EARL OF ROCKESTER, The

World. A slightly different version attributed to J. Bromfield appeared in the Mirror, 12 Sept., 1840. Quoted by Washington Irving (Tales of a Traveller: Pt. ii, Motto).

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 1173.

² Let the world pass.

But moveatur terra, let the world wag.
JOHN SKELTON, Speke, Parrot. St. 13. (a. 1529)
To let the world wag and take mine ease in mine inn.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)
Let the world slide, let the world go;
A fig for care and a fig for woe!

JOHN HEYWOOD, Be Merry Friends. (c. 1560)
Let the world slide.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew: Induction. Sc. 1, l. 6. (1594)

Let the world slip.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew: Induction. Sc. 2, l. 146.

Do well and right, and let the world sink.
GEORGE HERBERT, Country Parson. Ch. 29.

³ The world is wiser than it was.
From the French, "Le monde n'est plus fat," stated by Rabelais to be a common proverb in 1533.

FRANCIS BACON, The World.

⁶ Happy the man who . . . gets acquainted with the world early enough to make it his bubble, at an age when most people are the bubbles of the world!

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 5 May, 1751.

⁷ Or may I think when toss'd in trouble,
This world at best is but a bubble.

MICHAEL MOOR, Bubbles.

⁸ The pleasure, honour, wealth of sea and land
Bring but a trouble;

The world itself, and all the world's command
Is but a bubble.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. i, No. 6.

My soul, what's lighter than a feather? Wind.
Than wind? The fire. And what than fire? The mind.
What's lighter than the mind? A thought. Than thought?

This bubble world. What than this bubble? Nought.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. i, No. 4. See also under WOMAN: HER FICKLENESS.

⁹ The world is full of care, and much like unto a bubble;

Women and care and care and women, and women and care and trouble.

¹⁰ God is the author, men are only the players.
These grand pieces which are played upon earth have been composed in heaven. (Dieu est le poëte, les hommes ne sont que les acteurs. Ces grandes pièces qui se jouent sur la terre ont été composées dans le ciel.)

BALZAC, Socrate Chrétien.

¹¹ All our pride is but a jest;
None are worst and none are best;
Grief and joy, and hope and fear
Play their pageants everywhere:
Vain opinion all doth sway,
And the world is but a play.

THOMAS CAMPION, Song: Whether Men Do Laugh or Weep.

¹² The world's a stage where God's omnipotence,
His justice, knowledge, love and providence,
Do act the parts.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week i, day 1.

I take the world to be but as a stage,
Where net-masked men do play their personage.
DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes: Dialogue Between Heraclitus and Democritus.

Pythagoras said that this world was like a stage,
Whereon many play their parts; the lookers-on the sage

Philosophers are, saith he, whose part is to learn
The manners of all nations, and the good from the bad to discern.

RICHARD EDWARDS, Damon and Pythias.

¹³ If this world be a stage, what hours we give
To tedious make-up in the tiring-room.

JOHN ESKRINE, At the Front. Sonnet iii.

¹⁴ Shall I speak truly what I now see below?
The World is all a carcass, smoke and vanity,
The shadow of a shadow, a play

And in one word, just Nothing.

OWEN FELLITHAM, Resolves. (1666) A paraphrase of the Latin lines said to have been left by Lipsius, to be inscribed on his tomb,

- ¹ The world's a theatre, the earth a stage,
Which God and nature do with actors fill.
JOHN HEYWOOD, The Author to His Book.
- ² The world's a stage,—as Shakespeare said,
one day;
The stage a world—was what he meant to say.
O. W. HOLMES, Prologue, l. 9.
There is that smaller world which is the stage,
and that larger stage which is the world.
ISAAC GOLOBE, *The Theatre of George Jean
Nathan*, p. 3.
- ³ The world's a stage on which all parts are played.
MIDDLETON, A Game of Chess. Act v, sc. 2.
- ⁴ Is it not a noble farce wherein kings, republics, and emperors have for so many ages played their parts, and to which the vast universe serves for a theatre?
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 36.
All the world must practice stage-playing. We must play our parts duly.
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 10.
- ⁵ I hold the world but as the world, Gratiano;
A stage where every man must play a part.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i,
sc. 1, l. 77.
All the world's a stage.
And all the men and women merely players:
They have their exits and their entrances;
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His acts being seven ages. At first the infant,
Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms.
And then the whining school-boy, with his satchel
And shining morning face, creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school. And then the lover,
Sighing like furnace, with a woeful ballad
Made to his mistress' eyebrow. Then a soldier,
Full of strange oaths and bearded like the pard,
Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble reputation
Even in the cannon's mouth. And then the justice,
In fair round belly with good capon lined,
With eyes severe and beard of formal cut,
Full of wise saws and modern instances;
And so he plays his part. The sixth age shifts
Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloon,
With spectacles on nose and pouch on side,
His youthful hose, well saved, a world too wide
For his shrunk shank; and his big manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
And whistles in his sound. Last scene of all,
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childishness and mere oblivion,
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans every thing.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l.
139.
The child, who by now can utter words and set firm step upon the ground, delights to play with his mates, flies into a passion and as lightly puts it aside, and changes every hour. The heedless

- youth, freed at last from his tutor, finds joy in horses and hounds and the grass of the sunny Campus, soft as wax for moulding to evil, peevish with his counsellors, slow to make needful provision, lavish of money, spirited, of strong desires, but swift to change his fancies. With altered aims, the age and spirit of the man seeks wealth and friends, becomes a slave to ambition.
... Many ills encompass an old man; ... he lacks fire and courage, is dilatory and slow to form hopes.
HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 158.

- V—World: Its Beauty and Happiness
- ⁹ O world, as God has made it! All is beauty:
And knowing this, is love, and love is duty.
What further may be sought for or declared?
ROBERT BROWNING, The Guardian-Angel.
However, you're a man, you've seen the world—
The beauty and the wonder and the power,
The shapes of things, their colours, lights and shades,
Changes, surprises—and God made it all!
ROBERT BROWNING, Fra Lippo Lippi, l. 276.
This world's no blot for us,
Nor blank; it means intensely, and means good:
To find its meaning is my meat and drink.
ROBERT BROWNING, Fra Lippo Lippi, l. 313.
- ¹⁰ I say the world is lovely
And that loveliness is enough.
ROBERT BUCHANAN, Artist and Model.
- ¹¹ The world is good in the lump.
GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Torrent.
Act i, sc. 2.
- ¹² Of this fair volume which we World do name,
If we the sheets and leaves could turn with care,
Of him who it corrects, and did it frame,
We clear might read the art and wisdom rare.
WILLIAM DAUMONDE, The Book of the World.
Let the great book of the world be your serious study; read it over and over, get it by heart, adopt its style, and make it your own.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 July, 1750.

¹ For the world is not painted or adorned, but is from the beginning beautiful; and God has not made some beautiful things, but Beauty is the creator of the universe.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

² I found many who were continually wishing for beauty. I went to them with a sunset and a spray of mist, but they had already contented themselves in a shop with little painted candlesticks.

CHARLOTTE HARDIN, Coins and Medals.

It is not accident that wherever we point the telescope we see beauty, that wherever we look with the microscope there we find beauty. It beats in through every nook and cranny of the mighty world.

R. M. JONES, (Newton, My Idea of God, p. 61.)

The world is not respectable; it is mortal, tormented, confused, deluded for ever; but is shot through with beauty, with love, with glints of courage and laughter; and in these the spirit blooms timidly, and struggles to the light among the thorns.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Platonism and the Spiritual Life.

³ There's too much beauty upon this earth
For lonely men to bear.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, Ballad of Too Much Beauty.

⁴ Oh, what a glory doth this world put on
For him who, with a fervent heart, goes forth
Under the bright and glorious sky, and looks
On duties well performed, and days well spent!

LONGFELLOW, Autumn, l. 30.

Glorious indeed is the world of God around us,
but more glorious the world of God within us.
There lies the Land of Song; there lies the poet's native land.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. I, ch. 8.

⁵ This world is full of beauty, as other worlds above;

And, if we did our duty, it might be full of love.

GERALD MASSRY, This World Is Full of Beauty.

⁶ O world, I cannot hold thee close enough!

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, God's World.

The world stands out on either side

No wider than the heart is wide;

Above the world is stretched the sky,—

No higher than the soul is high.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Renascence.

⁷ An idle poet, here and there

Looks round him, but for all the rest,

The world, unfathomably fair,

Is duller than a witling's jest.

COVENTRY PATMORE, The Revelation.

⁸ The world is full of poetry—the air
Is living with its spirit; and the waves

Dance to the music of its melodies.

⁹ J. G. PERCIVAL, The Prevalence of Poetry.

Great, wide, beautiful, wonderful World,
With the wonderful water round you curled,
And the wonderful grass upon your breast,
World, you are beautifully dressed.

W. B. RANDS, The Wonderful World.

¹⁰ The whole world is the temple of the immortal gods. (Totum mundum Deorum esse immortalium templum.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. vii, sec. 7.

¹¹ The world is such a happy place,
That children, whether big or small,
Should always have a smiling face,
And never, never sulk at all.

GABRIEL SETOUN, The World's Music.

The world is so full of a number of things,
I'm sure we should all be as happy as kings.

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, Happy Thought.

¹² The world was never less beautiful though viewed through a chink or knothole.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 16 Jan., 1838.

¹³ I swear the earth shall surely be complete to him or her who shall be complete,
The earth remains jagged and broken only to him or her who remains jagged and broken.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of the Rolling Earth.
Pt. iii.

¹⁴ Not in Utopia, subterranean fields,
Or some secreted island, Heaven knows where!
But in the very world, which is the world
Of all of us,—the place where in the end
We find our happiness, or not at all!

WORDSWORTH, French Revolution, l. 36.

VI—World: Its Ugliness and Misery

^{14a} Oh, Lucius, I am sick of this bad world!
The day-light and the sun grow painful to me.
ADDISON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 4.

¹⁵ This restless world
Is full of chances, which by habit's power
To learn to bear is easier than to shun.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, Art of Preserving Health.
Bk. ii, l. 453.

¹⁶ It's a weary world, and nobody bides in 't.

J. M. BARRIE, The Little Minister. Ch. 4.

A brave world, sir, full of religion, knavery, and change! We shall shortly see better days.

APHRA BEHN, The Roundheads. Act I, sc. 1.

¹⁷ This bad, twisted, topsy-turvy world,
Where all the heaviest wrongs get uppermost.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. v, l. 981.

¹⁸ This world has been harsh and strange;
Something is wrong; there needeth a change.

ROBERT BROWNING, Holy-Cross Day.

- ¹ The world is naturally averse
To all the truth it sees or hears,
But swallows nonsense, and a lie,
With greediness and gluttony.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto 2, l. 805.
- ² 'Tis but a worthless world to win or lose.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 40.
The world is full of strange vicissitudes.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 51.
Well, my deliberate opinion is—it's a jolly strange world.
ARNOLD BENNETT, The Title. Act i.
- ³ Ah, World of ours, are you so grey
And weary, World, of spinning,
That you repeat the tales today
You told at the beginning?
For lo! the same old myths that made
The early "stage-successes,"
Still "hold the boards," and still are played,
"With new effects and dresses."
AUSTIN DOBSON, The Drama of the Doctor's Window.
- ⁴ Good-bye, proud world! I'm going home.
I am going to my own hearth-stone,
Bosomed in yon green hills alone,—
A spot that is sacred to thought and God.
EMERSON, Good-Bye.
- ⁵ For every worldes thing is vain,
And ever go'th the wheel about. . . .
Now here, now there, now to, now fro,
Now up, now down, the world go'th so,
And ever bath done and ever shall.
JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis: Prologue, l. 560.
So go'th the world; now woe, now weal.
JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. viii.
Well—well, the world must turn upon its axis,
And all mankind turn with it, heads or tails,
And live and die, make love and pay our taxes,
And as the veering wind shifts, shift our sails.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 4.
- ⁶ The world is with me, and its many cares,
Its woes—its wants—the anxious hopes and fears
That wait on all terrestrial affairs—
Heavens! what a wilderness the earth appears,
Where Youth, and Mirth, and Health are out of date!
THOMAS HOOD, Sonnet.
- ⁷ We live together in a world that is bursting with sin and sorrow.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellaneous. Vol. i, p. 301.
The world's as ugly, ay, as Sin,—
And almost as delightful.
F. LOCKER-LAMPTON, The Jester's Plea.
- ⁸ Yes, Heaven is thine; but this

- Is a world of sweets and sour;
Our flowers are merely—flowers,
And the shadow of thy perfect bliss
Is the sunshine of ours.
EDGAR ALLAN POE, Israel.
- ⁹ O what a crocodilian world is this!
FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. i, No. 4.
O who would trust this world, or prize what's in it,
That gives and takes, and chops and changes every minute.
FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. i, No. 9.
- ¹⁰ O how full of briars is this working-day world!
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act i, sc. 3, l. 12.
How weary, stale, flat and unprofitable,
Seem to me all the uses of this world!
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 133.
Would I were dead! if God's good will were so:
For what is in this world but grief and woe?
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 19.
Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 365.
The world is grown so bad,
That wrens make prey where eagles dare not perch.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 3, l. 70.
- ¹¹ The world is not thy friend, nor the world's law;
The world affords no law to make thee rich;
Then be not poor, but break it.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 72.
Ah, how the poor world is pestered with such waterflies, diminutives of nature.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act v, sc. 1, l. 37.
- ¹² A maniac world,
Homeless and sobbing through the deep she goes.
ALEXANDER SMITH, Unrest and Childhood.
- ¹³ Meseems the world is run quite out of square
From the first point of his appointed source;
And being once amiss grows daily worse and worse.
SPENSER, The Faerie Queene: Bk. v, Introduction. St. 1.
- ¹⁴ Strange the world about me lies
Never yet familiar grown—
Still disturbs me with surprise,
Haunts me like a face half known.
In this house with starry dome,
Floored with gem-like plains and seas,
Shall I never feel at home,
Never wholly be at ease?
WILLIAM WATSON, World-Strangeness.

VII—World: Knowledge Of, Worldliness
2 The more a man drinketh of the world, the more it intoxicateth.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Youth and Age.
3 He sees that this great roundabout,
The world, with all its motley rout,
Church, army, physic, law,
Its customs and its businesses,
Is no concern at all of his,
And says—what says he?—Caw.

ROBERT BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology.

Of the world most worldly, who never compromised himself by an ungentlemanly action, and was never guilty of a manly one.
DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 25.

5 Such is the world. Understand it, despise it, love it; cheerfully hold on thy way through it, with thy eye on highest loadstars!
CARLYLE, Essays: Count Cagliostro.

The true Sovereign of the world, who moulds the world like soft wax, according to his pleasure, is he who lovingly sees into the world.
CARLYLE, Essays: Death of Goethe.

6 Knowledge of the world is to be acquired only in the world, not in the closet.
LORO CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 4 Oct., 1746.

The world is a country which no one yet ever knew by description; one must travel through it oneself to be acquainted with it. . . Courts and camps are the only places to learn the world in.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 2 Oct., 1747.
The preposterous notions of a systematical man who does not know the world, tire the patience of a man who does.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 27 May, 1753.

7 The world is a lively place enough, in which we must accommodate ourselves to circumstances, sail with the stream as glibly as we can, be content to take froth for substance, the surface for the depth, the counterfeit for the real coin.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 12.
8 Map me no maps, sir; my head is a map, a map of the whole world.

FIELING, Rape upon Rape. Act I, sc. 5.
Geographers crowd into the outer edges of their maps the parts of the world which they know nothing about, adding a note, "What lies beyond is sandy desert full of wild beasts," or "blind marsh," or "Scythian cold," or "frozen sea."

I—Writing: Definitions

4 Writing is not literature unless it gives to the reader a pleasure which arises not only from the things said, but from the way in which they are said.

STOFFORD A. BROOKE, Primer of English Literature.

That writer does the most, who gives his reader the most knowledge, and takes from him the least time.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon: Preface.

5 Certainly the Age of Writing is the most miraculous of all things man has devised.

CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters.

With the art of Writing, of which Printing is a simple, an inevitable and comparatively insignificant corollary, the true reign of miracles for mankind commenced.

CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters.

6 Miscellanists are the most popular writers among every people; for it is they who form a communication between the learned and the unlearned, and, as it were, throw a bridge between those two great divisions of the public.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character of Men of Genius: Miscellanists.

There are two things which I am confident I can do very well, one is an introduction to any literary work, stating what it is to contain, and how it should be executed in the most perfect manner.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (BOSWELL, Life, 1775.)

7 All writing comes by the grace of God.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

No man can write anything who does not think that what he writes is, for the time, the history of the world.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

The nobler the truth or sentiment, the less imports the question of authorship.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality.

8 All great men have written proudly, nor cared to explain. They knew that the intelligent reader would come at last, and would thank them.

EMERSON, Natural History of Intellect: Thoughts on Modern Literature.

9 Composition is, for the most part, an effort of slow diligence and steady perseverance, to which the mind is dragged by necessity or resolution.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Adventurer, No. 138.

To write and to live are very different. Many who praise virtue do no more than praise it.

JOHNSON, Works, Vol. iii, p. 83. (Hawkins, ed.)

10 If the works of the great poets teach anything, it is to hold mere invention somewhat cheap. It is not the finding of a thing, but the making something out of it after it is found, that is of consequence.

J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows: Chaucer.

11 The art of the pen is to rouse the inward vision. . . . That is why the poets, who spring imagination with a word or a phrase, paint lasting pictures.

⁸ A man may write at any time if he set himself doggedly to it.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1773.)

⁹ No man but a blockhead ever wrote except for money.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1776.)

¹⁰ As soon as any art is pursued with a view to money, then farewell, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, all hope of genuine good work.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-Books, p. 171.

¹¹ A man starts upon a sudden, takes Pen, Ink, and Paper, and without ever having had a thought of it before, resolves within himself he will write a Book; he has no Talent at Writing, but he wants fifty Guineas.

The wrong side of a Turkey tapestry.

JAMIES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. I, sec. 6, let. 27.

²³ The greatest part of a writer's time is spent in reading, in order to write; a man will turn over half a library to make one book.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1775.)

What boots all your grist? it can never be ground
Till a breeze makes the arms of the windmill go round.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 83.

Let these describe the undecipherable.

BYRON, Child Harold. Canto iv, st. 53.

You praise the firm restraint with which they write—

I'm with you there, of course:

They use the snaffle and the curb all right,

But where's the bloody horse?

ROY CAMPBELL, Adamastor: On Some South African Novellists.

Choose a subject, ye who write, suited to your strength. (Sumite materiam vestris, qui scribitis, æquum Viribus.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 38.

Dear authors! suit your topics to your strength,
And ponder well your subject and its length;
Nor lift your load, before you're quite aware
What weight your shoulders will, or will not, bear.

BYRON, Hints from Horace, l. 59.

Notes are often necessary, but they are necessary evils.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Shakespeare: Preface.

O thou sculptor, painter, poet!

Take this lesson to thy heart:

That is best which lieth nearest;

Shape from that thy work of art.

LONGFELLOW, Gaïdo Becerra. St. 7.

It may be glorious to write

Thoughts that will glad the two or three High souls, like those far stars that come in sight

Once in a century;—

But better far it is to speak

One simple word, which now and then

Shall waken their free natures in the weak

And friendless sons of men.

J. R. LOWELL, An Incident in a Railroad Car.

St. 19.

Thou art the cause, O reader, that I write on lighter topics, when I would prefer serious ones. (Seria cum possim, quod delectantia

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 16, l. 1.

Authors hear at length one general cry,

Tickle and entertain us, or we die!

COWPER, Retirement, l. 707.

To write upon all is an author's sole chance
For attaining, at last, the least knowledge of any.

THOMAS MOORE, Literary Advertisement, l. 35.

There is no such thing as a dirty theme. There are only dirty writers.

G. J. NATTAN, Testament of a Critic, p. 179.

I'll call for pen and ink, and write my mind.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VI. Act v, sc. 3, l. 66.

Thus, great with child to speak, and helpless
in my throes,

Biting my truant pen, beating myself for spite:

Fool! said my Muse to me, look in thy heart,

IV.—Writing: The Manner

See also Style; Words: Their Use

Thus I set pen to paper with delight,
And quickly had my thoughts in black and white.

For having now my method by the end,
Still as I pull'd it came; and so I penn'd
It down, until at last it came to be
For length and breadth the bigness which you see.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress: The Author's Apology for His Book.

Honest John [Bunyan] was the first that I know of who mixed narration and dialogue; a method of writing very engaging to the reader.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1.

How doth it make judicious readers smile,
When authors are detected by their style!

Though every one, who knows this author,
knows

He shifts his style much oftener than his clothes.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Apology, l. 140.

So that the jest is clearly to be seen,
Not in the words—but in the gap between;
Manner is all in all, whate'er is writ,
The substitute for genius, sense, and wit.

COWPER, Table Talk, l. 540.

Though such continual signs in a book,
Such drunken reelings, have an awkward look.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 861. Condemning digessions.

By my rambling digressions I perceive myself to be grown old. I used to write more method-ically. But one does not dress for private company as for a public hall.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1.

¹ The ablest writer is a gardener first, and then a cook. His tasks are, carefully to select and cultivate his strongest and most nutritive thoughts, and, when they are ripe, to dress them wholesomely, and so that they may have a relish.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

² And since, I never dare to write
As funny as I can.

O. W. HOLMES, The Height of the Ridiculous.

I can't write what I feel: I'm coarse, when terse.

⁷ Make 'em laugh; make 'em cry; make 'em wait.

CHARLES READE, Recipe for a Successful Novel.

⁸ It is ignoble to say one thing and mean another; how much more so to write one thing and mean another! (Turpe est aliud loqui, aliud sentire; quanto turpius aliud scribere, aliud sentire!)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. xxiv, 19.

V—Writing: Good and Bad

⁹ This writing seemeth to me . . . not much better than that noise or sound which musicians make while they are in tuning their instruments; which is nothing pleasant to hear, but yet is a cause why the music is sweeter afterwards.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. II.

¹⁰ It is scarcely possible for authors to be admired and at the same time to excel.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Praefatio.

He who pleases many must have some species of merit.

JOHNSON, Works, ii, 279. (Hawkins, ed.)

It is very hard to go beyond your public. If they are satisfied with your poor performance, you will not easily make it better.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. ix, p. 304.

¹⁴ Good writing is a kind of skating which carries off the performer where he would not go.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. vii, p. 334.

¹⁵ If you wish to be a good writer, write. ("Ἄνθρωπος γραφικός εἶναι, γράφει.")

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 18, sec. 1.

Scribendo discas scribere. [By writing you learn to write.] It is only by writing ill that you can attain to write well.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (BOSWELL, Life, 16 Apr, 1763.)

Write something great. (Scribe aliquid magnum.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. I, ep. 107, l. 2.

¹⁶ Let us beware of writing too well; it is the worst possible manner of writing.

ANATOLE FRANCE, (COURNOS, Modern Plutarch, p. 29.)

¹⁷ Knowledge is the foundation and source of good writing. (Scribendi recte sapere est et principium et fons.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 309.

Sound judgment is the ground of writing well: And when philosophy directs your choice, To proper subjects rightly understood, Words from your pen will naturally flow.

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 342. (Dillon, tr.)

¹⁸ The Dean could write finely upon a broomstick.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Life of Swift. When someone remarked that Vanessa must be an extraordinary woman to inspire Dean Swift to write so finely upon her.

¹⁹ It is the glory and merit of some men to write well, and of others not to write at all.

Nor be erased nor written o'er again;
The unwritten only still belongs to thee:
Take heed, and ponder well what that shall be.
LONGFELLOW, Mortality Saluamus, l. 168. See

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 16.

³ The p'nt of good writing is knowing when to stop.
L. M. MONTGOMERY, Anne's House of Dreams.
Ch. 24.

⁴ Good sense must be the certain standard still
To all that will pretend to writing well.
JOHN OLDHAM, An Ode on St. Cecilia's Day.
Of all those arts in which the wise excel,
Nature's chief masterpiece is writing well.
JOHN SHEPHERD, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, Essay on Poetry, l. 1.

Such was the Muse whose rules and practice tell
"Nature's chief masterpiece is writing well."
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 164. Referring to Buckingham.

⁵ While writing the very toil gives pleasure, and the growing work glows with the writer's heart. (Scribentem iuvat ipse labor minutque laborem, Cumque suo crescent pectore fervet

OVID, Epistula ex Ponto. Bk. iii, epis. 9, l. 21.

A fever in these pages burns
Beneath the calm they feign;
A wounded human spirit turns
Hurt, on its bed of pain.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, Stanzas in Memory of the Author of Obermann. St. 6.

The mind conceives with pain, but brings forth with delight. (L'esprit conçoit avec douleur; mais il enfante avec délices.)
JOURNET, Pensées. No. 343.

⁶ Whoever thinks a faultless piece to see,
Thinks what ne'er was, nor is, o'er e'er shall be.
In every work regard the writer's end,
Since none can compass more than they intend;
And if the means be just, the conduct true,
Applause, in spite of trivial faults, is due.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 53.

The faults of great authors are generally excellencies carried to excess.

Those write because all write, and so have still Excuse for writing, and for writing ill.
POPE, Satires of Dr. Donne, Versified, ii, 27.

⁸ 'Tis not how well an author says,
But 'tis how much, that gathers praise.
MATTHEW PRIOR, Epistle to Fleetwood Shepherd. No. i, l. 100.

⁹ Let him be kept from paper, pen, and ink;
So may he cease to write, and learn to think.
MATTHEW PRIOR, To a Person Who Wrote Ill.
You, for example, clever to a fault,
The rough and ready man, who write apace,
Read somewhat seldom, think perhaps even less.

ROBERT BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology.
Two sorts of writers possess genius: those who think, and those who cause others to think.
ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: Literature: Paris. No. 16.

So in the way of writing without thinking,
Thou hast a strange alacrity in sinking.
CHARLES SACKVILLE, EARL OF DORSET, *To Mr.
Edward Howard*.

You may know by my size that I have a kind of alacrity in sinking.

¹⁰ This dull product of a scoffer's pen.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. ii, l. 484.

VI—Writing: Easy Writing

¹¹ Whate'er is well-conceived is clearly said,
And the words to say it flow with ease.
(Ce que l'on conçoit bien s'énonce clairement, Et les mots pour le dire arrivent aisément.)
BOILEAU, L'Art Poétique. Pt. i, l. 153.

¹² True ease in writing comes from art, not chance,
As those move easiest who have learn'd to dance.
'T is not enough no harshness gives offence;
The sound must seem an echo to the sense,
Soft is the strain when zephyr gently blows,
And the smooth stream in smoother numbers flows;
But when loud surges lash the sounding shore,
The hoarse rough verse should like the torrent roar.

When Ajax strives some rock's vast weight to throw,
The line, too, labours, and the words move slow:
Not so when swift Camilla scours the plain,
Flies o'er th' unbending corn, and skims along the main.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles, ii, l. 108.

1 I argue thus: the world agrees,
That he writes well, who writes with ease:
Then he, by sequel logical,
Writes best, who never thinks at all.
MATTHEW PRYOR, Epistle to Fleetwood Shepherd. No. 1, l. 38.

Oh that I had the art of easy writing
Which should be easy reading!
BYRON, Beppo. St. 51.

What is written without effort is in general read without pleasure.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol. II, p. 309.
What is easy is seldom excellent.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. IV, p. 134.

Ready writing makes not good writing; but good writing brings on ready writing.

BEN JOHNSON, Explorata: De Stylo.

2 You write with ease to show your breeding,
But easy writing's curst hard reading.

R. B. SHERRIDAN, Chloë's Protest. (MOORE, Life of Sheridan. Vol. I, p. 55.)

VII—Writing: Careful Writing

3 Hasten slowly; without losing heart,
Twenty times upon the anvil place your work.
(Hâtez-vous lentement; et, sans perdre courage, Vingt fois sur le métier remettez votre ouvrage.)

BOLEAU, L'Art Poétique. Pt. I, l. 171.

4 I had not time to lick it into form, as a bear doth her young ones.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

Arts and sciences are not cast in a mould, but are found and perfected by degrees, by often handling and polishing, as bears leisurely lick their cubs into shape.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. II, ch. 12.

He fashioned his poem after the manner of a she-bear, and gradually licked it into shape. (Carmen se more urse patere et lambendo demum effingere.)

5 Little do such men know the toil, the pains,
The daily, nightly racking of the brains,
To range the thoughts, the matter to digest,
To cull fit phrases, and reject the rest.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Goûtem. Bk. II, l. 11.

None but an author knows an author's cares,
Or fancy's fondness for the child she bears.

COWLEY, The Progress of Error, l. 516.

6 The men, who labour and digest things most,
Will be much apter to despond than boast;
For if your author be profoundly good,
Twill cost you dear before he's understood.

OVIN, Tristia. Bk. IV, eleg. 10, l. 61.

11 Too much polishing weakens rather than improves a work. (Nimia cura deterit magis quam emendat.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. IX, epl. 35.

12 Let our literary compositions be laid aside for some time, that we may after a reasonable period return to their perusal, and find them, as it were, altogether new to us.

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. X,
ch. 4, sec. 2.

Perhaps the greatest lesson which the lives of literary men teach us is told in a single word:
Wait!

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. I, ch. 8.

13 Write till your ink be dry, and with your

But years hath done this wrong,
To make me write too much, and live too long.
SAMUEL DANIEL, Philotas, l. 106.

5 This comes of drinking asses' milk and writing.
DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. ii, l. 395.

6 Th' unhappy man who once has trail'd a pen,
Lives not to please himself, but other men;
Is always drudging, wastes his life and blood,
Yet only eats and drinks what you think good.
DRYDEN, Prologue to Lee's Caesar Borgia, l. 1.
For thee we dim the eyes, and stuff the head
With all such reading as was never read;
For thee explain a thing (ill) all men doubt it,
And write about it, Goddess, and about it:
So spins the silk-worm small its slender store,
And labours till it clouds itself all o'er.
POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 249.

7 The fickle populace has changed its taste and burns with a craze for scribbling. (Mutavit mentem populus levis, et calet uno Scribendi studio.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 108.

8 The incurable itch of writing possesses many.

thes.*)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vii, l. 52.
The desire for writing grows with writing.
(Crescit scribendo scribendi studium.)
ERASMUS, Adagia.
When once the itch of literature comes over a man, nothing can cure it but the scratching of a pen.
SAMUEL LOVER, Handy Andy. Ch. 36.
If all the trees in all the woods were men,
And each and every blade of grass a pen;
If every leaf on every shrub and tree
Turned to a sheet of foolscap; every sea
Were changed to ink, and all the earth's living tribes
Had nothing else to do but act as scribes,
And for ten thousand ages, day and night,
The human race should write, and write, and
write,
Till all the pens and paper were used up,

And the huge inkstand was an empty cup,
Still would the scribblers clustered round 'tis brink
Call for more pens, more paper, and more ink.
O. W. HOLMES, Cacoëthes Scribendi.

9 It is foolish weakness, when you jostle poets at every corner, to spare paper already doomed to perish. (Stulta est clementia, cum tot ubique Vatribus occurras, peritura parcere chartæ.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. i, l. 17.

10 There is no measure or limit to this fever for writing; every one must be an author;
some out of vanity to acquire celebrity and raise up a name, others for the sake of lucre and gain.
MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk. No. 911.
Who shames a scribbler? break one cobweb thro'.
He spins the slight, self-pleasing thread anew:
Destroy his fib, or sophistry,—in vain!
The creature 's at his dirty work again,
Throned in the centre of his thin designs,
Proud of a vast extent of flimsy lines.
POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 89.

11 Why did I write? what sin to me unknown
Dipt me in ink, my parents', or my own?
As yet a child, nor yet a fool to fame,
I lisped in numbers, for the numbers came.
POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 125.
Whether the darken'd room to muse invite,
Or whiten'd wall provoke the skewer to write;
In durance, exile, Bedlam, or the Mint,—
Like Lee or Budgell I will rhyme and print.
POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat.
i, l. 97.

12 Some write, confin'd by phyalic; some, by debt;
Some, for 'tis Sunday; some, because 'tis wet; . . .
Another writes because his father writ,
And proves himself a bastard by his wit.
YOUNG, Epistles to Mr. Pope. Epia. i, l. 75.
For who can write so fast as men run mad.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 286.

IX—Writing and Fame

13 I account the use that a man should seek of the publishing of his own writings before his death, to be but an untimely anticipation of that which is proper to follow a man, and not to go along with him.
FRANCIS BACON, An Advertisement Touching a Holy War: Epistle Dedicatory.

14 He who writes prose builds his temple to Fame in rubble; he who writes verse builds it in granite.
BUTLER, Lessons, Cautions: The Spirit of Conservatism.

¹ The book that he has made renders its author this service in return, that so long as the book survives, its author remains immortal and cannot die.

RICHARD DE BURY, Philobiblon. Ch. i, sec. 21.

² Thou too hast built what will outlast all marble and metal, and be a wonder-bringing City of the mind, a Temple and Seminary, and Prophetic Mount, whereto all kindreds of the earth will pilgrim.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. II, ch. 8.

³ If you would not be forgotten, as soon as you are dead and rotten, either write things worth reading, or do things worth the writing.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1738.

⁴ Wide as the light extends shall be the fame Of this great work.

(Τὸς δ' ἔροι κλέος ἔσται δόρυ γ' ἐπιδράμας ἡός.)

⁹ Literary fame is the only fame of which a wise man ought to be ambitious, because it is the only lasting and living fame.

ROBERT SOUTHWELL, (FOSTER, Life of Landor. Bk. vii, ch. 13.)

I would rather be Charles Lamb than Charles XII. I would rather be remembered by a song than by a victory. I would rather build a fine sonnet than have built St. Paul's. . . . Fine phrases I value more than bank-notes. I have ear for no other harmony than the harmony of words.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: Men of Letters.

¹⁰ I grant the man is vain who writes for praise. Praise no man e'er deserved, who sought no more.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 3.

X—Writing: The Writer

¹¹ The circumstance which gives authors an advantage above all these great masters, is this, that they can multiply their originals; or rather, can make copies of their works, to what number they please, which shall be as valuable as the originals themselves.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 166.

¹² Writers, like teeth, are divided into incisors and grinders.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Literary Studies: The First Edinburgh Reviewers.

¹³ There is probably no hell for authors in the next world—they suffer so much from critics and publishers in this.

C. N. BOVEE, Summaries of Thought: Authors.

^{13a} One hates an author that's all author, fellows In foolscap uniforms turn'd up with ink, So very anxious, clever, fine, and jealous,

One don't know what to say to them, or think, Unless to puff them with a pair of bellows.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 75.

¹⁴ That unspeakable shoeblack-seraph Army of Authors.

CARLYLE, Essays: Boswell's Johnson.

He, with his copy-rights and copy-wrongs, in his squalid garret, in his rusty coat; ruling (for this is what he does), from his grave, after death, whole nations and generations who would, or would not, give him bread while living,—is a rather curious spectacle!

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. v.

¹⁵ There are genuine Men of Letters, and not genuine; as in every kind there is a genuine and spurious. . . . The Hero as Man of Letters will be found discharging a function for us which is ever honourable, ever the highest; and was once well known to be the highest. He is uttering forth, in such way as he has, the inspired soul of him; all that a man, in any case, can do.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. v.

Men of Letters are a perpetual Priesthood, from age to age, teaching all men that a God is still present in their life. . . . In the true Literary Man there is thus ever, acknowledged or not by the world, a sacredness: he is the light of the world; the world's Priest;—guiding it, like a sacred Pillar of Fire, in its dark pilgrimage through the waste of Time.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. v. Literary men are . . . a perpetual priesthood.
CARLYLE, Essays: Richter.

Until you understand a writer's ignorance, presume yourself ignorant of his understanding.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 12. If you once understand an author's character, the comprehension of his writings becomes easy.
LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. i, ch. 5.

It is a hard and nice thing for a man to write of himself. It grates his own heart to say anything of disparagement, and the reader's ears to hear anything of praise from him.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Of Myself.
The author who speaks about his own books is almost as bad as the mother who talks about her own children.

DISRAELI, Speech, 39 Nov., 1870.
But every little busy scribbler now Swells with the praises which he gives himself; And, taking sanctuary in the crowd, Brags of his impudence, and scorns to mend.

HORACE, Art Poetica, l. 475. (Dillon, tr.)
A man of letters, and of manners too!
COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 782.

How strange that men,
Who guide the plough, should fail to guide the pen.
GEORGE CRABBE, The Parish Register. Pt. ii.

Choose an author as you choose a friend.
WENTWORTH DILLON, Essay on Translated Verse, l. 96.

'Tis a vanity common to all writers, to over-value their own productions.
DRYDEN, Examen Poeticum: Dedication.

The writer, like the priest, must be exempted from secular labor. His work needs a frolic health; he must be at the top of his condition.

EMERSON, Poetry and Imagination: Creation. Talent alone cannot make a writer. There must be a man behind the book.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Goethe.

An affected modesty is very often the greatest vanity, and authors are sometimes prouder of their blushes than of the praises that occasioned them.

FARQUHAR, The Constant Couple: Preface. Nothing gives an author so much pleasure as to find his works respectfully quoted by other learned authors.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.
I never saw an author in my life, saving perhaps one, that did not purr as audibly as a full-grown domestic cat on having his fur smoothed the right way by a skilful hand.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table, Ch. 3.

There is nothing more dreadful to an author than neglect, compared with which reproach, hatred and opposition are names of happiness.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 2.

No author ever spar'd a brother.
JOHN GAY, Fables: The Elephant and the Bookseller.

Whatever an author puts between the two covers of his book is public property; whatever of himself he does not put there is his private property, as much as if he had never written a word.

GAIL HAMILTON, Country Living and Country Thinking: Preface.

I don't want to be a doctor, and live by men's diseases; nor a minister to live by their sins; nor a lawyer to live by their quarrels. So I don't see there's anything left for me but to be an author.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, Remark to His Mother.

The only happy author in this world is he who is below the care of reputation.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Tales of a Traveller: Poor-Devil Author.

The chief glory of every people arises from its authors.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary of the English Language: Preface.

To commence author is to claim praise.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 93.

Modern writers are the moons of literature; they shine with reflected light, with light borrowed from the ancients.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, iii, 333.)

I never desire to converse with a man who has written more than he has read.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol. ii, p. 6.

He is the richest author that ever grazed the common of literature.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, of Dr. Thomas Campbell. (WEARTON, Life.)

There are two literary maladies—writer's cramp and swelled head. The worst of writer's cramp is that it is never cured; the worst of swelled head is that it never kills.

COULSON KERNAMAN, Lecture, Birmingham.

A writer owned an asterisk,
And kept it in his Den,
Where he wrote tales (which had large sales)
Of frail and erring men;

And always, when he reached the point

Where carping Censors lurk,

He called upon the Asterisk

To do his dirty work.

STODOLAND KING, The Writer and the Asterisk.

1 Skilled equally with voice and pen
To stir the hearts or mould the minds of men.

J. R. LOWELL, Epistle to G. W. Curtis, l. 11.

2 But I became a writer all the same, and shall remain one until the end of the chapter, just as a cow goes on giving milk all her life, even though what appears to be her self-interest urges her to give gin.

H. L. MENCKEN, (DURANT, On the Meaning of Life, p. 32.)

3 Whate'er my fate is, 'tis my fate to write.

JOHN OLDHAM, A Letter from the Country.

4 His powers betray the author. (Prodent auctorem vires.)

OVID, Epistula ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 13, l. 11.

5 A man of letters, of the kind that rich men hate. (Litteratum esse, quos odiasse divites solent.)

PETRONIUS ARBITER, Satyricon. Sec. 83.

6 Authors, like coins, grow dear as they grow old;
It is the rust we value, not the gold.

Chaucer's worst ribaldry is learn'd by rote,
And beastly Skelton heads of houses quote;
One likes no language but the Faery Queen;
A Scot will fight for Christ's Kirk o' the Green;
And each true Briton is to Ben so civil,
He swears the Muses met him at the Devil.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii,
epis. 1, l. 35. Referring to the Devil Tavern.

7 As though I lived to write, and wrote to live.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Italy: A Character, l. 16.

You must not suppose, because I am a man of letters, that I never tried to earn an honest living.

BERNARD SHAW, The Irrational Knot: Preface.

8 Admitted into the company of paper-blurters.

SAM PHILIP SIMON, *Apology for Poetry:
Causes of Defect*.

9 The punishment of writers of genius exalts
the credit of their writings. (Punitis ingenitis, gliscit auctoritas.)

TACITUS, Annales. Bk. iv, sec. 35.

10 In every author let us distinguish the man from his works.

VOLTARE, A Philosophical Dictionary: Poets.

11 An author! 'tis a venerable name!
How few deserve it, and what numbers claim!

YOUNG, Epistles to Mr. Pope. Epis. ii, l. 15.

Thus nature's refuse, and the dregs of men,
Compose the black milk of the pen.

YOUNG, Epistles to Mr. Pope, Epis. i, last lines.

Is now a scribbler, who was once a man.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 84.

12 The author of "Amelia," the most singular genius which their island ever produced, whose works it has long been the fashion to abuse in public and to read in secret.

GEORGE BORROW, The Bible in Spain. Ch. 1.

13 To him no author was unknown,
Yet what he wrote was all his own. . . .
Horace's wit and Virgil's state
He did not steal, but emulate;
And when he would like them appear,
Their garb, but not their clothes, did wear.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, On the Death of Mr. Abraham Cowley.

14 Thou last great prophet of tautology.

JOHN DRYDEN, Mac Flecknoe. Referring to Thomas Shadwell.

15 His writing has no enthusiasms, no aspiration; contented, self-respecting and keeping the middle of the road.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne.

16 While he walks like Jack the Giant Killer in a coat of darkness, he may do much mischief with little strength.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Falkland's Islands. Referring to "Junius."

17 Such stains there are—as when a Grace
Sprinkles another's laughing face

With nectar, and runs on.

W. S. LANDOR, Catulus.

18 His Nature's a glass of Champagne with the N. P. Willis.

19 Cinna writes verses 'gainst me, it is said:
But he writes nothing who is never read.
(Versiculos in me narratur scribere Cinna;
Non scribit, cujus carmina nemo legit.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iii, epig. 9.

Do you wonder, Theodorus, why it is that, despite your entreaties, I have never given you my books? I have an excellent reason: lest you should give me yours.

(Non donem tibi cur meos libellos

Oranti totiens et exigenti

Miraris, Theodore? Magna causa est:

Dones tu mihi ne tuos libellos.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 73.

20 Poor Henry [James], he's spending eternity wandering round and round a stately park and the fence is just too high for him to pass over and they're having tea just too far for him to hear what the countess is saying.

SOMMERSET MAUGHAM, Cakes and Ale, p. 152.

Only a little more
I have to write,

Then I'll give o'er

And bid the world Good-night.

ROBERT HEARICK, His Poetrie His Pillar.

XI—Writing: Handwriting

Every man, who has the use of his eyes and of his right hand, can write whatever hand he pleases.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 July, 1750.

He can't write, nor rade writing from his cradle, please your honour; but he can make his mark equal to another, sir.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Love and Law Act iii, sc. 1.

Phoenicia first, if fame be truly heard,
Fixed in rude characters the fleeting word.

(Phoenices primi, famae si creditur, ausi Mansuram rudibus vocem signare figuris.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. iii, l. 220. (King, tr.)

Cadmus brought the twenty-two or twenty-four Phœnician letters to Greece. They are called "the black daughters of Cadmus."

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Public and Private Education. The ancient tradition was that Cadmus brought sixteen letters from Phœnicia to Greece, to which Palamedes subsequently added four more, and Simonides, still later, four others.

Thence comes to us that ingenious art
Of painting words and speaking to the eyes;
And by the differing form of figures traced,
To give color and form to thought.

(C'est de lui que nous vient cet art ingénieux
De peindre la parole et de parler aux yeux;
Et par les traits divers de figures tracées,
Donner de la couleur et du corps aux pensées.)

BALZAC, Paraphrase of Lucan.

The swifter hand doth the swift words outrun:
Before the tongue hath spoke, the hand hath done.

(Currant verba licet, manus est velocior illis: Nondum lingua suum, dextra peregit opus.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams: On a Shorthand Writer. Bk. xiv, epig. 208. (Wright, tr.)

I wish that I had never learned to write!
(Quam vellem me nescire literas!)

EMPEROR NERO, on being asked to sign his first writ for the execution of a malefactor.
(SUETONIUS, Twelve Cæars: Nero. Sec. 10.)

Write it down in a good firm hand. (Scribas vide plane et probe.)

PLAUTUS, Arsinaria, l. 755. (Act iv, sc. 1.)

Men of quality are in the wrong to under-value, as they often do, the practise of a fair and quick hand in writing; for it is no immaterial accomplishment. (Non sest aliena res, quæ fere ab honestis negligi solet, cura bene ac velociter scribendi.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. i, ch. 5.

I once did hold it, as our statists do,
A baseness to write fair, and labour'd much
How to forget that learning, but, sir, now
It did me yeoman's service.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 33.

If you give me six lines written by the hand of the most honest of men, I will find something in them which will hang him. (Qu'on me donne six lignes écrites de la main du plus honnête homme, j'y trouverai de quoi le faire pendre.)

CARDINAL RICHELIEU, Mirame. (1641) See also EDOUARD FOURNIER, L'Esprit dans l'Histoire, p. 159.

Clerk: Sir, I thank God that I have been so well brought up that I can write my name.

Cade: Away with him, I say! hang him with his pen and ink-horn about his neck.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 112.

To be a well-favoured man is a gift of fortune: but to write and read comes by nature.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 15.

I think we do know the sweet Roman hand.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 30.

Who'er writ it, writes a hand like a foot.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

WRONGS

I—Wrong, in the Sense of Injury

Some kind of wrongs there are, which flesh and blood

Cannot endure.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Little French Lawyer. Act i, sc. 1.

The wrong was his who wrongfully complain'd.

COWPER, Hope, l. 321.

My ear is pain'd,
My soul is sick with every day's report

Of wrong and outrage with which earth is fill'd.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 5.

Wrongs do not leave off there where they begin;

But still beget new mischiefs in their course.

SAMUEL DANIEL, The History of the Civil War. Bk. iv, st. 10.

¹ You cannot do wrong without suffering wrong.
Emerson, Essays, First Series: Compensation.
 Not the wrongs done to us harm us, only those we do to others.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, (Bradford, Biography and the Human Heart, p. 42.)

² For every social wrong there must be a remedy. But the remedy can be nothing less than the abolition of the wrong.

Won't you come home, Bill Bailey,

Won't you come home? . . .

I'll do de cooking, darling,

I'll pay de rent;

I knows I've done you wrong.

HUGHES CANNON, Bill Bailey. (1902)

¹¹ Wrongs, unspeakable, past patience,
 Or more than any living man could bear.
 SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act v, sc. 3, l. 126.

Wrongs unredressed, or insults unavenged.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iii, l. 374.

¹² Higher than the perfect song
 For which love longeth,

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 44.

RUST

¹ It is better to wear out than to rust out.

RICHARD CUMBERLAND, BISHOP OF PETERBOROUGH, when a friend told him that he would wear himself out by his incessant labors. (BOSWELL, Tour to the Hebrides, p. 18, note; HORNE, Sermon on the Duty of Contending for the Truth.) The saying was attributed to George Whitefield, the famous

Methodist preacher, by Southey. (Life of Wesley. Vol. ii, l. 170.)

If I rest, I rust. (Rast' ich, so rost' ich.)

MARTIN LUTHER, Maxims.

² There is rust upon locks and hinges,
And mould and blight on the walls,
And silence faints in the chambers,
And darkness waits in the halls.

LOUISE C. MOULTON, The House of Death.

³ I were better to be eaten to death with a rust than to be scoured to nothing with perpetual motion.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 245.

⁴ How dull it is to pause, to make an end,
To rust unburnish'd, not to shine in use.

SABBATH

I—Sabbath: Its Observance

⁵ Sunday clears away the rust of the whole week.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 112.

⁶ I sing the sabbath of eternal rest.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Doomsday: The First Hour. St. 1.

⁷ There are many people who think that Sunday is a sponge to wipe out all the sins of the week.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

⁸ Of all the days that 's in the week
I dearly love but one day—

And that 's the day that comes betwixt
A Saturday and Monday;

For then I'm drest all in my best
To walk abroad with Sally;

She is the darling of my heart,
And she lives in our alley.

HENRY CAREY, Sally in Our Alley.

⁹ 'Tis sweet to him, who all the week
Through city-crowds must push his way,

To stroll alone through fields and woods,
And hallow thus the Sabbath-day.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Home-Sick. St. 1.

¹⁰ How still the morning of the hallow'd day!
Mute is the voice of rural labour, hush'd
The ploughboy's whistle, and the milkmaid's song.

JAMES GRAHAME, The Sabbath.

Hail Sabbath! thee I hail, the poor man's day.

JAMES GRAHAME, The Sabbath.

Yes, child of suffering, thou may'st well be sure

He who ordained the Sabbath loves the poor!

O. W. HOLMES, Urania, l. 325.

¹¹ Gently on tiptoe Sunday creeps,
Cheerfully from the stars he peeps,
Mortals all are asleep below.

None in the village hears him go;
Even chanticleer keeps very still,
For Sunday whispered, 'twas his will.

JOHN PETER HEBEL, Sunday Morning.

¹² Sundays observe: think when the bells do chime
'Tis angels' music.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 65.

A Sabbath well spent brings a week of content,
And health for the toils of the morrow;

But a Sabbath profan'd,

Whatso'er may be gain'd,

Is a certain forerunner of sorrow.

SIR MATTHEW HALE, Golden Maxim. Said to be "a poetical rendering of a passage in a letter to his children."

¹³ O day most calm, most bright,
The fruit of this, the next world's bud, . . .
The week were dark, but for thy light:
Thy torch doth show the way.

GEORGE HERBERT, Sunday, l. 1.

The other days and thou
Make up one man; whose face thou art,
Knocking at heaven with thy brow:
The worky-days are the back-part;
The burden of the week lies there.

GEORGE HERBERT, Sunday, l. 8.

On Sunday heaven's gate stands ope;

Blessings are plentiful and rife,

More plentiful than hope.

GEORGE HERBERT, Sunday, l. 29.

Thou art a day of mirth,

And, where the week-days trail upon the ground,
Thy flight is higher.

GEORGE HERBERT, Sunday, l. 57.

Day of all the week the best,

Emblem of eternal rest.

JOHN NEWTON, Saturday Evening. (1774)

1 Day of the Lord, as all our days should be!

LONGFELLOW, John Endicott. Act ii, sc. 2.

Take the Sunday with you through the week,
And sweeten with it all the other days

LONGFELLOW, Michael Angelo. Pt. i, st. 5.

2 So sang they, and the empyrean rung

With Hallelujahs: Thus was Sabbath kept.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk vii, l. 633.

3 See Christians, Jews, one heavy sabbath keep,
And all the western world believe and sleep!

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk iii, l. 99

No place is sacred, not the church is free,
Ev'n Sunday shines no Sabbath-day to me.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 11.

4 Now once a week, upon the Sabbath day,
It is enough to do our small devotion,
And then to follow any merrie motion.

7 To Banbury came I, O profane one!

Where I saw a Puritane one

Hanging of his cat on Monday.

For killing of a mouse on Sunday.

RICHARD BRATHWAITE, Barnaber's Journal.
(1638) "Banbury Saint" was slang for an over-strained Puritan.

8 Reforming saints! too delicately nice!
By whose decrees, our sinful souls to save,
No Sunday tankards foam, no barbers shave;

And beer undrawn, and beards unmown, display

Your holy reverence for the sabbath-day.

SAFETY

13 He who goes the lowest builds the safest.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Home.

Often, to our comfort, shall we find

The sharded beetle in a safer hold

Than is the full-wing'd eagle.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 19.

14 Safe shall be my going,

Secretly armed against all death's endeavour;

Safe though all safety's lost; safe where men fall;

And if these poor limbs die, safest of all.
RUFERT BROOKS, 1914: Safety.

¹ Oh! are they safe? we ask not of success.
BYRON, The Corsair. Canto i, st. 5.

² Who can hope to be safe? who sufficiently cautious?

Guard himself as he may, every moment's an ambush.

(Quid quisque vitet, nunquam homini satis Cautum est in horas.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. II, ode 13, l. 13. (Lytton, tr.)

³ The strongest tower has not the highest wall.
Think well of this, when you sit safe at home.

WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: The Story of Cupid and Psyche, l. 896.

⁴ Let others seek what is safe. Utter misery is safe; for the fear of any worse event is taken away. (Tuta petant alii: fortuna miserima tuta est, Nam timor eventus deterioris abest.)

OVID, Epistula ex Ponto. Bk. II, eleg. 2, l. 31.

⁵ Safety lies in the middle course. (Medio tutissimus ibis.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. II, l. 137. See also under MODERATION.

⁶ If still you be disposed to rhyme,
Go try your hand a second time.
Again you fail: yet Safe's the word;
Take courage, and attempt a third.
JONATHAN SWIFT, On Poetry. (1733)

Safe is the word.
JOHN KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, 291. (1721)

⁷ He is safe from danger who is on guard even when safe. (Caret periculo qui etiam tutus cavet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 127.

He that's secure is not safe.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1748.

The way to be safe is never to be secure.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4820.

Be wary, then; best safety lies in fear.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act I, sc. 3, l. 43.

Security is mortals' chiefest enemy.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act III, sc. 5, l. 32.

⁸ Better ride safe in the dark, says the proverb, than in daylight with a cut-throat at your elbow.

SCOTT, Kennilworth. Ch. VII.

⁹ Out of this nettle, danger, we pluck this flower, safety.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act II, sc. 3, l. 11.

¹⁰ I would give all my fame for a pot of ale and safety.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act III, sc. 2, l. 13.

¹¹ What is safe is distasteful; in rashness there is hope. (Ingrata quæ tuta; ex temeritate spes.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. III, sec. 26.

There is always safety in valor.

EMERSON, English Traits: The Times.

In ourselves,

In our own honest hearts and chainless hands, Will be our safeguard.

THOMAS NOON TALFOURD, Ion.

¹² The only safety for the conquered is to expect no safety. (Una salus victis nullam sperare salutem.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. II, l. 354.

¹³ It is man's perdition to be safe when he ought to die for the truth.

RICHARD VINCE, Sermon, preached at St. Margaret's, Westminster, before the House of Commons, 30 Nov., 1642.

Though love repine, and reason chafe,
There came a voice without reply,—
" 'Tis man's perdition to be safe,
When for the truth he ought to die."

EMERSON, Quatrains: Sacrifice.

A ship in harbor is safe, but that is not what ships are built for.

SAINT

¹⁴ Saint: a dead sinner revised and edited.
AMERSON BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary.

¹⁵ There are many (questionless) canonised on earth, that shall never be Saints in Heaven.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. I, sec. 34.

All are not saints that go to church.

UNKNOWN, Poor Robin Almanac, 1687.

¹⁶ The soberest saints are more stiff-necked Than th' hottest-headed of the wicked.

BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l. 306.

The rigid saint, by whom no mercy's shown To saints whose lives are better than his own.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Epistle to Hogarth, l. 25.

¹⁷ Sacred on earth; designed a saint above!

SAMUEL DANIEL, Sonnets to Delia. No. VI.

Saints, to do us good, Must be in heaven.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book. Pt. VI, l. 176.

¹⁸ Every saint, as every man, comes one day to be superfluous.

EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

A saint is a sceptic once in every twenty-four hours.

EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

I don't like your way of conditioning and contracting with the saints. Do this and I'll do that! Here's one for t'other. Save me and I'll give you a taper or go on a pilgrimage.

ERASMUS, The Shipwreck.

The saint who works no miracles has few pilgrims,

W. G. EENHAM, Proverbs, p. 850.

To every saint his own candle.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

Like saint, like offering.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

The tears of Saints more sweet by far
Than all the songs of sinners are.

ROBERT HERRICK, Tears.

Those Saints, which God loves best,
The Devil tempts not least.

ROBERT HERRICK, Temptation.

The greatest saint may be a sinner that never got down to "hard pan."

O. W. HOLMES, The Guardian Angel. Ch. 30.

A black-leg saint, a spiritual hedger.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 180.

The way of this world is to praise dead saints and persecute living ones.

NATHANIEL HOWE, Sermon.

Look in, and see Christ's chosen saint
In triumph wear his Christ-like chain;
No fear lest he should swerve or faint;
"His life is Christ, his death is gain."

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Saint Luke.

Would you enjoy soft nights and solid dinners?

Faith, gallants, board with saints and bed with sinners.

POPE, Epilogue to Mr. Route's Jane Shore, l.23.

A saint in crape is twice a saint in lawn.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l.136.

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.

Old Testament: Psalms, cxvi, IS.

A young Saint an old Devil, (mark this, an old saying, and as true a one, as a young Whore an old Saint.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 64. See also AGE
AND YOUTH.

It is easier to make a saint out of a libertine than out of a prig.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Unit Essays, p. 253.

A saint may be defined as a person of heroic virtue whose private judgment is privileged.

BERNARD SHAW, Saint Joan: Preface.

Thou hast damnable iteration and art indeed able to corrupt a saint.

SHAKESPEARE, / Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l.101.

Such an injury would vex a very saint.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
iii, sc. 2, l. 28.

'Twould a saint provoke.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 246.

I hold you as a thing ensky'd and sainted.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act i, sc.
4, l. 34.

0 cunning enemy, that, to catch a saint,
With saints dost bait thy hook!

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii,
sc. 2, l.180.

The only difference between the saint and the sinner is that every saint has a past and every sinner has a future.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance.
Act iii.

The saint's day over, good bye to the saint.
(La fete passed, adieu le saint.)

SALT

h

Salt of truth.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 708.

I could sit at rich men's tables,—though the courtesies that raised me,
Still suggested clear between us the pale spectrum of the salt.

E. B. BROWNING, Lady Geraldine's Courtship.
St. 9.

Men must eat many a peck of salt together
before the claims of friendship are fulfilled.
(Multos modios salis simul edendos esse, ut amicitia munus expletum sit.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. xix, sec. 67. Referred to as a well-known adage.

It is a true saying that a man must eat a peck of salt with his friend before he knows him.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 1.

Trust no one until you have eaten much salt with him. (Nemini fidas, nisi cum quo prius multos mechos salis absumperis.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Pt. xix, sec. 67.

Before you make a friend, eat a bushel of Salt with him.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 620.

Salt seasons all things,

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, S3.

Of all smells, bread; of all tastes, salt.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 166.

¹ His [Lot's] wife looked back from behind him, and she became a pillar of salt.

Old Testament: Genesis, xix, 26.

This would make a man a man of salt.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 6, l. 190.

² Help me to salt, help me to sorrow.

JOHN GLYDE, JR., Norfolk Garland, 44.

³ It is a foolish bird that stayeth the laying of salt on her tail

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 327. (1580)

As boys catch sparrows by flinging salt upon their tails.

SWIFT, Tale of a Tub. Sec. 8.

⁴ Salt is good: but if the salt have lost his saltness, wherewith will ye season it? Have salt in yourselves

New Testament: Mark, ix, 50.

Ye are the salt of the earth: but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted?

New Testament: Matthew, v, 13.

⁵ It is a covenant of salt for ever before the Lord unto thee and to thy seed with thee.

Old Testament: Numbers, xviii, 19.

I have eaten your bread and salt,

I have drunk your water and wine

RUDYARD KIPLING, Departmental Ditties: Dedication.

⁶ Not worth his salt. (Non valet lotium suum.)

PEIRRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 57.

⁷ Attic salt. (Sal Atticum.)

PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xxxi, ch. 7, sec. 41. A term for refined wit.

A turn for punning, call it Attic salt.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 68.

⁸ A grain of salt being added. (Addito salis grano.)

PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xxiii, sec. 8 He is telling the story of Pompey, who, when he took the palace of Mithridates, discovered the antidote against poison, "to be taken fasting, a grain of salt being added." Hence "cum grano salis," with a grain of salt.

⁹ Spilt salt is never all gathered.

W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 837.

¹² We have some salt of our youth in us.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 50.

As salt as wolves in pride.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 404.

SALVATION

¹³ What must I do to be saved?

New Testament: Acts, xvi, 30.

Despair of being saved, "except thou be born again."

This kind of despair is one of the first steps to heaven.

RICHARD BAXTER, Saint's Rest. Ch. 6.

For my salvation must its doom receive,

Not from what others, but what I believe.

DRYDEN, Religio Laici, l. 303.

No one can be redeemed by another. No God and no saint is able to shield a man from the consequences of his evil doings. Every one of us must become his own redeemer.

SUBHADRA BHAKSHU, A Buddhist Catechism.

Salvation is from God only. (Solo Deus salus)

UNKNOWN. A Latin motto.

¹⁴ The elect are those who will; the non-elect are those who won't.

EPICURUS, Fragmentis. Frag. 522. (SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliam. Epis. xxviii, sec. 9.)

¹⁹ I know that my redeemer liveth.

Old Testament: Job, xix, 25.

1 I am the door [bâb]: by me if any man enter n, he shall be saved.

New Testament: John, x, 9. Bâbism was founded by Mirza Ali Mohammed, who told the people that he was the bâb or door through which all must pass to enter Paradise.

2 Say, Heav'nly Powers, where shall we find such love,

Which of ye will be mortal to redeem
Man's mortal crime, and just th' unjust to save?

MILTON, Paradise Lost Bk. iii, l. 213.

And now without redemption all mankind
Must have been lost, adjudg'd to Death and Hell
By doom severe.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 222.

3 The will to be saved means a great deal.
(Hoc multum est, velle servari.)

SENeca, Epistulae ad Luciliam. Epis. iii, sec. 3.

A man may be damned for despairing to be saved.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living, p. 259.

4 It were pity but they should suffer salvation, body and soul

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
iii, sc. 3, l. 3.

5 And for a helmet, the hope of salvation.

New Testament: 1 Thessalonians, v, 8. (Galea spes salutis.—Vulgate.)

Fools are my theme, let Satire be my song.
BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers,
l. 5.

Strangel that a Man who has wit enough to write a Satire should have folly enough to publish it.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1742.

11 And that sarcastic levity of tongue,
The stinging of a heart the world hath stung.
BYRON, Lara. Canto i, st. 5.

12 Sarcasm I now see to be, in general, the language of the devil

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus Bk. ii, ch. 4.

13 When satire flies abroad on falsehood's wing,
Short is her life, and impotent her sting;
But when to truth allied, the wound she gives

Sinks deep, and to remotest ages lives.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Author, l. 217.

Why should we fear; and what? the laws?
They all are arm'd in virtue's cause;
And aiming at the self-same end,
Satire is always virtue's friend.

CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. iii, l. 943.

14 Satire is a lonely and introspective occupation, for nobody can describe a fool to the life without much patient self-inspection.

FRANK MOORE COLBY, Simple Simon.

15 Crack the satiric thong

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 26.

And I must twist my little gift of words
Into a scourge of rough and knotted cords
Unmusical, that whistle as they swing
To leave on shameless backs their purple sting.
J. R. LOWELL, Epistle to George William Curtis.

16 Unless a love of virtue light the flame, Satire is, more than those he brands, to blame;

He hides behind a magisterial air
His own offences, and strips others bare.
COWPER, Charity, l. 491.

When scandal has new minted an old lie,
Or tax'd invention for a fresh supply,
'Tis call'd a satire.

COWPER, Charity, l. 513.

17 Satire has always shone among the rest,
And is the boldest way, if not the best,
To tell men freely of their foulest faults;
To laugh at their vain deeds and vainer
thoughts.

DRYDEN, Essay Upon Satire, l. 11.

¹ The arrows of sarcasm are barbed with contempt. . . . It is the sneer of the satire, the ridicule, that galls and wounds.

⁷ Satire or sense, alas! can Sporus feel? Who breaks a butterfly upon a wheel?

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 307. ["Sporus," Lord John Hervey.]

For who would be satirical Upon a thing so very small?

SWIFT, Dr. Delany's Villa.

⁸ There are to whom my satire seems too bold;

Scarce to wise Peter complaisant enough, And something said of Chartres much too rough.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. II, sat. I, l. 2.

Satire's my weapon, but I'm too discreet To run amuck, and tilt at all I meet.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. II, sat. I, l. 69.

⁹ The flash of that satiric rage, Which, bursting on the early stage,

Branded the vices of the age, And broke the keys of Rome.

We in the world's wide mouth live scandalized and foully spoken of.

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 153.

⁴ Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon.

Old Testament: 11 Samuel, i, 20.

⁵ For greatest scandal waits on greatest state.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1006.

Never yet

Was noble man but made ignoble talk.

TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 1080.

No scandal about Queen Elizabeth, I hope?

SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act ii, sc. 1.

⁶ Well, for my part, I believe there never was a scandalous tale without some foundation.

SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act ii, sc. 2.

The basis of every scandal is an absolutely immoral certainty.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act i.

How awful to reflect that what people say of us is true.

LOGAN PEARSON SMITH, Afterthoughts.

⁷ Swift flies each tale of laughter, shame or folly,
Caught by Paul Pry, and carried home to Polly.

CHARLES SPRACUE, Curiosity, l. 329.

⁸ There is nothing that can't be made worse by telling. (Nil est Quin male narrando posuit depravari.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 696. (Act iv, sc. 4.)

⁹ There is only one thing in the world worse than being talked about, and that is not being talked about.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 1.

¹⁰ They say. What do they say? Let them say. (Αέριον αὐτὸ λέγουσι. Αέριον αὐτὸ, ὅδ' ἔλεγε μοι.)

UNKNOWN. Greek inscription on rings found at Pompeii. Used by Bernard Shaw as a motto over his fireplace, as taken from "an ancient Frenchman."

They say. Quhat say they? Let thame say.

Charm inscribed over doors of houses in Scotland during the sixteenth century; also the motto of the Scottish Earls Marischal, given by them to Marischal College.

"They say" is half a lie.

PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 261.

Have you heard of the terrible family They, And the dreadful venomous things They say?

Why, half the gossip under the sun,
If you trace it back, you will find begun

In that wretched House of They.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, "They Say."

III—Scandal: Its Baseness

¹¹ To converse with Scandal is to play at Losing Loadum; you must lose a good name to him, before you can win it for yourself.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act i, sc. 2. In "Losing Loadum" the game is to lose tricks.

¹² Whoever keeps an open ear
For tattlers will be sure to hear

The trumpet of contention;
Aspersions is the babblers' trade,

To listen is to lend him aid,
And rush into dissension.

COWPER, Friendship, l. 97.

¹³ In a contempt for the gabble of today's opinions the secret of the world is to be learned.

EMERSON, Nature, Studies and Addresses: Literary Ethics.

¹⁴ And there's a lust in man no charm can tame

Of loudly publishing his neighbor's shame;
On eagles' wings immortal scandals fly,

While virtuous actions are but born and die.
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ix, l. 102. (Stephen Harvey, tr.)

Assail'd by scandal and the tongue of strife,
His only answer was, a blameless life;
And he that forg'd, and he that threw the dart,
Had each a brother's int'rest in his heart!

COWPER, Hope, l. 576.

¹⁵ All the wickedness I know of any in our convent

I cough up in our cloisters and all the world hears it.

LANGLAND, Piers Plowman: Seven Sins.

¹ The rolling fictions grow in strength and size,
Each author adding to the former lies.
OVID, Metamorphoses, xii, 56. (Swift, tr.)

A cruel story runs on wheels, and every hand oils the wheels as they run.

OUIDA, Wisdom, Wit and Pathos: Moths.

² To babble and to talk is most tolerable and not to be endured.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
iii, sc. 3, l. 36.

³ Ye think the rustic cackle of your bourg
The murmur of the world!

TENNYSON, Geraint and Enid, l. 276.

Below me, there, is the village, and looks how quiet and small!

And yet bubbles o'er like a city, with gossip, scandal, and spite.

TENNYSON, Maud, l. 108.

IV—Scandal Mongers

⁴ I doubt if he bathed before he dressed.

A brasier?—the pagan, he burned perfumes!

You see it is proved what the neighbours guessed:

His wife and himself had separate rooms.

ROBERT BROWNING, House.

⁵ The maid they talk I'm kend the better;

E'en let them clash!

BURNS, *The Poet's Welcome to His Love-
Begotten Daughter*. St. 2.

⁶ Now, the best way to do is to do as you please.

For your mind, if you have one, will then be at ease.

Of course you will meet with all sorts of abuse,

But don't try to stop it, it is of no use,
For people will talk.

SAMUEL DODGE, People Will Talk.

⁷ Do not be so impatient to set the town right concerning the unfounded pretensions and the false reputation of certain men of standing. They are laboring harder to set the town right concerning themselves, and will certainly succeed.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

The commanding eye of his neighborhood, which held him to decorum. . . . But . . . the censors of action are as numerous and as near in Paris, as in Littleton or Portland; the gossip is as prompt and vengeful.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

⁸ Pleasant as it is to hear
Scandal tickling in our ear

Ev'n of our own mothers;

In the chit-chat of the day,

To us is pay'd, when we're away,

What we lent to others.

JOHN GAY, The Lady's Lamentation.

⁹ And though you duck them ne'er so long,
Not one salt drop e'er wets their tongue;

'Tis hence they scandal have at will,

And that this member ne'er lies still.

JOHN GAY, The Mad Dog. Last lines.

¹⁰ Fierce to invent some sort of scandal against anyone. (Quælibet in quemvis opprobria fingere sævus.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 15, l. 30.

Talk of unusual swell of waist

In maid of honour loosely laced.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 188.

¹¹ He's gone, and who knows how he may report

Thy words by adding fuel to the flame?

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 1350.

¹² The mind conscious of innocence despises false reports: but we are a set always ready to believe a scandal. (Conscia mens recti famæ mendacia risit, Sed nos in vitium cre-dula turba sumus.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. iv, l. 311.

¹³ To John I owed great obligation;

But John unhappily thought fit

To publish it to all the nation;

Sure John and I are more than quit.

MATTHEW PRIOR, An Epigram.

¹⁴ How hard soe'er it be to bridle wit,
Yet memory oft no less requires the bit.

How many hurried by its force away,
Forever in the land of gossips stray.

BENJAMIN STILLINGFLEET, Essay on Conversation.

¹⁵ Tattlers also, and busybodies, speaking things which they ought not.

New Testament: 1 Timothy, v, 13.

Some mumble-news, some trencher-knight, some Dick.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 464.

¹⁶ The serpent's tongue.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act v, sc. 1, l. 440.

She is not old, she is not young,
The Woman with the Serpent's Tongue,
The haggard cheek, the hungering eye,
The poisoned words that wildly fly,
The famished face, the fevered hand—
Who slights the worthiest in the land,
Sneers at the just, contemns the brave,

And blackens goodness in its grave.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Woman with the Serpent's Tongue.

To think that such as she can mar
Names that among the noblest are!
That hands like hers can touch the springs
That move who knows what men and things!
That on her will their fates have hung!

The Woman with the Serpent's Tongue.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Woman with the Serpent's Tongue. Richard Le Gallienne wrote a réplique to this poem, "The poet with the coward's heart."

Skill'd by a touch to deepen scandal's tints
With all the kind mendacity of hints,
While mingling truth with falsehood—sneers with smiles—

A thread of candour with a web of wiles;
A plain blunt show of briefly-spoken seeming,
To hide her bloodless heart's soul-harden'd scheming;

A lip of lies; a face form'd to conceal;
And, without feeling, mock at all who feel;
With a vile mask the Gorgon would disown,—
A cheek of parchment, and an eye of stone.

BYRON, A Sketch from Private Life, l. 55.

Her mouth is a honey-blossom;

No doubt, as the poet sings;

But within her lips, the petals,

Lurk a cruel bee that stings.

WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS, The Sarcastic Fair.

He rams his quill with scandal, and with scoff,

But 'tis so very foul, it won't go off.

YOUNG, Epistles to Pope. Ep. i, l. 199.

V—Scandal and Women

Nut while the two-legged gab-machine's so plenty.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers, Ser. II, No. 11.

From loveless youth to unrespected age,
No passion gratified except her rage:
So much the Fury still outran the Wit,
The pleasure miss'd her, and the scandal hit.
Who breaks with her provokes revenge from Hell,

But he's a bolder man who dares be well.

POPE, Moral Essays. Ep. II, l. 125.

Her tea she sweetens, as she sips, with scandal.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Written to be Spoken by Mrs. Siddons.

Love and scandal are the best sweeteners of tea.
FIMELING, Love in Several Masques. Act IV, sc. 2.

Scandal's the sweetener of a female feast.

YOUNG, Love of Feme. Sat. vi, l. 353.

Nor do they trust their tongues alone,

But speak a language of their own;

Can read a nod, a shrug, a look,

Far better than a printed book;

Convey a libel in a frown,
And wink a reputation down;
Or, by the tossing of a fan,
Describe the lady and the man.

SWIFT, Journal of a Modern Lady, l. 188.

Ladies, your most obedient.—Mercy on me! here is the whole set! a character dead at every word, I suppose.

SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act II, sc. 2.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: The Man of Letters.

Every man is a scholar potentially, and does not need any one good so much as this of right thought.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: The Man of Letters.

Shall I tell you the secret of the true scholar? It is this: Every man I meet is my master in some point, and in that I learn of him.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Greatness.

The office of the scholar is to cheer, to raise, and to guide men by showing them facts amidst appearances.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: The American Scholar.

The scholar is the student of the world; and of what worth the world is, and with what emphasis it accosts the soul of man, such is the worth, such the call of the scholar.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Literary Ethics.

¹ He [the scholar] must be a solitary, laborious, modest, and charitable soul. He must embrace solitude as a bride. . . . That he may become acquainted with his thoughts.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Literary Ethics.

To talk in public, to think in solitude, to read and to hear, to inquire and to answer inquiries, is the business of a scholar.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 8.

Where should the scholar live? In solitude, or in society? In the green stillness of the country, where he can hear the heart of Nature beat, or in the dark, gray town, where he can hear and feel the throbbing heart of man?

14 Go, wondrous creature! mount where Science guides;

Go, measure earth, weigh air, and state the tides;

Instruct the planets in what orbs to run,

Correct old Time, and regulate the sun. . . .

Go, teach Eternal Wisdom how to rule—

Then drop into thyself, and be a fool!

POPE, Essay on Man, Epist. ii, l. 19.

Of science and logic he chatters,

As fine and as fast as he can;

Though I am no judge of such matters,

I'm sure he's a talented man.

W. M. FRAED, The Talented Man.

15 Small have continual plodders ever won

Save base authority from others' books.

These earthly godfathers of heaven's lights

That give a name to every fixed star

Have no more profit of their shining nights

Than those that walk and wot not what they are.

Too much to know is to know nought but fame;

And every godfather can give a name.

SCOTLAND AND THE SCOTS

I—Scotland: Apothegms

God's will be done. It came with a lass and will go with a lass.

JAMES V OF SCOTLAND, on his death-bed, when informed of the birth of a daughter. The Scottish crown was brought into the Stuart family through Margery Bruce, daughter of Robert Bruce, who married Walter Stuart. The daughter born to James V was Mary Queen of Scots, whose son James removed to England and called himself James I of England and VI of Scotland.

UNKNOWN. Line from a Scottish Jacobite song used by Ian Maclaren as a motto for his story, Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush, 1894.

Hence, "kailyard school." A kailyard is a cabbage garden or kitchen garden attached to a small cottage.

II—Scotland: Praise

6 Give me but one hour of Scotland,—

Let me see it ere I die!

W. E. AYTON, Charles Edward at Versailles, l. 211.

It was a' for our rightfu' king

We left fair Scotland's strand.

BURNS, It Was A' for Our Rightfu' King.

It's guid to be merry and wise,

It's guid to be honest and true,

It's guid to support Caledonia's cause

And bide by the buff and the blue.

BURNS, Here's a Health to Them that's Awe.

7 O Scotia! my dear, my native soil!
For whom my warmest wish to Heaven is sent!

Long may thy hardy sons of rustic toil
Be blest with health, and peace, and sweet content!

BURNS, The Cotter's Saturday Night, l. 173.

8 Scotland, thy mountains, thy valleys and fountains
Are famous in story—the birth-place of song.

ALEXANDER CRAWFORD, Scotland.

9 From the lone shieling of the misty island
Mountains divide us, and the waste of seas,
Yet still the blood is strong, the heart is Highland,

And we in dreams behold the Hebrides.

JOHN GALT, Canadian Boat Song. (Blackwood's Magazine, Sept., 1829; Noctes Ambrosianae, No. 46.) The poem is introduced into the Noctes Ambrosianae by Christopher North (John Wilson), as "from a friend of mine now in upper Canada," where Galt had been serving as secretary to a land-purchase company. It has been attributed both to Wilson and to John G. Lockhart, and also to Hugh Montgomerie, twelfth Earl of Eglinton. "Shieling" is Scotch for a small hut or dwelling.

Then Scotland's right and Scotland's might,
And Scotland's hills for me;

We'll drink a cup to Scotland yet,
Wi' a' the honours three.

HENRY SCOTT RUSSELL, Scotland Yet.

10 O Caledonia, stern and wild,
Meet nurse for a poetic child!

Land of brown heath and shaggy wood,
Land of the mountain and the flood;

Land of my sires! what mortal hand
Can e'er untie the filial band,

That knits me to thy rugged strand!

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto vi, st. 2.

Where's the coward that would not dare
To fight for such a land!

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto iv, st. 30.

Still from the sire the son shall hear
Of the stern strife and carnage drear

Of Flodden's fatal field,
When shivered was fair Scotland's spear

And broken was her shield!

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto vi, st. 34.

Stand to your arms, then, and march in good order;

England shall many a day
Tell of the bloody fray,

When the Blue Bonnets came over the Border.

III—Scotland: Some Gibes

And well I know within that bastard land
Hath Wisdom's goddess never held command;
A barren soil, where Nature's germs, confined
To stern sterility, can stint the mind;
Whose thistle well betrays the niggard earth,
Emblem of all to whom the land gives birth;
Each genial influence nurtured to resist;
A land of meanness, sophistry, and mist.

⁵ In my youth, a Highland gentleman measured his importance by the number of men his domain could support. After some time the question was, to know how many great cattle it would feed. Today we are come to count the number of sheep. I suppose posterity will ask how many rats and mice it can feed.

As Dr. Johnson never said, is there any Scotsman without charm?

J. M. BARRIE, Address, Edinburgh University.

¹¹ There are few more impressive sights in the world than a Scotsman on the make.

J. M. BARRIE, What Every Woman Knows.
Act II.

A young Scotsman of your ability, let loose upon the world with three hundred pounds, what could he not do? It's almost appalling to think of; especially if he went among the English.

J. M. BARRIE, What Every Woman Knows.
Act I.

¹² I've sometimes thought that the difference between the Scotch and the English is that the Scotch are hard in all other respects but soft with women, and the English are hard with women and soft in all other respects.

J. M. BARRIE, What Every Woman Knows.
Act II.

The ardent disposition of the Scotch. (Perfidium ingenium Scotorum.)

A proverb of unknown origin.

The Scot will not fight till he see his own blood.
SCOTT, Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 1.

⁴ The Scots are steadfast—not their clime.
CAMPBELL, The Pilgrim of Glencoe, l. 14.

⁵ Only a few industrious Scots perhaps, who indeed are dispersed over the face of the whole earth. But as for them, there are no greater friends to Englishmen and England, when they are out on't, in the world, than they are. And for my own part, I would a hundred thousand of them were there [Virginia] for we are all one countrymen now, ye know, and we should find ten times more comfort of them there than we do here.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe. Act iii, sc. 2.
James I was offended at this reflection on his countrymen and compelled its deletion, threatening the authors, Chapman, Jonson, and Marston, with imprisonment.

⁶ The Scots are poor, cries surly English pride;
True is the charge, nor by themselves denied.
Are they not then in strictest reason clear,
Who wisely come to mend their fortunes here?

CHURCHILL, The Prophecy of Famine, l. 195.

⁷ Your proper child of Caledonia believes in his rickety bones that he is the salt of the earth. . . . He is the one species of human animal that is taken by all the world to be fifty per cent cleverer and pluckier and honester than the facts warrant. II—Sea: Description

2 The multitudinous laughter of the sea.
(Πορτὶς τε κυμάτων ἀνθρώπων γέλασμα.)
ÆSCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 89. (De Quincey, tr.)

Ye waves
That o'er the interminable ocean wreath
Your crisped smiles.
ÆSCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 89.

The many-twinkling smile of ocean.
JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Second Sunday after Trinity.

3 Old ocean's gray and melancholy waste.
BRYANT, Thanatopsis, l. 44.

The wavy waste.
THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 7.

4 Roll on, thou deep and dark-blue Ocean, roll!
Ten thousand fleets sweep over thee in vain;
Man marks the earth with ruin, his control
Stops with the shore; upon the watery plain
The wrecks are all thy deed, nor doth remain
A shadow of man's ravage.

BYRON, Childe Harold, Canto iv, st. 179.

Dark-heaving;—boundless, endless, and sublime—
The image of Eternity—the throne
Of the Invisible; even from out thy slime
The monsters of the deep are made; each zone
Obeys thee; thou goest forth, dread, fathomless, alone.

BYRON, Childe Harold, Canto iv, st. 183.

5 Unchangeable save to thy wild waves' play;
Time writes no wrinkle on thine azure brow;
Such as creation's dawn beheld, thou rollest
now.

BYRON, Childe Harold, Canto iv, st. 182.

And Thou, vast Ocean! on whose awful face
Time's iron feet can print no ruin trace.
ROBERT MONTGOMERY, The Omnipresence of the Deity, Pt. I, st. 20.

The sea appears today just as it did on the first day of creation. (La mer reparait telle qu'elle fut au premier jour de la création.)

MADAME DE STAËL, Corinne, Bk. I, ch. 4.

6 And I have loved thee, Ocean! and my joy
Of youthful sports was on thy breast to be Borne, like thy bubbles, onward. From a boy
I wanton'd with thy breakers, . . .
And trusted to thy billows far and near,

And laid my hand upon thy mane—as I do here.

BYRON, Childe Harold, Canto iv, st. 184.

I'll bid him welcome, clap his made,
And hug his breakers to my breast.
GEORGE GRAY, The Storm.

He laid his hand upon "the Ocean's mane,"
And played familiar with his hoary locks.

POLLOX, The Course of Time, Bk. iv, l. 689.

7

Behold the Sea,

The opaline, the plentiful and strong,
Yet beautiful as is the rose in June,
Fresh as the trickling rainbow of July;
Sea full of food, the nourisher of kinds,
Purger of earth, and medicine of men;
Creating a sweet climate by my breath,
Washing out harms and griefs from memory,
And, in my mathematic ebb and flow,
Giving a hint of that which changes not.

EMERSON, Sea-Shore.

8 The sea, unmated creature, tired and lone,
Makes on its desolate sands eternal moan.
F. W. FAUER, The Sorrowful World.

It keeps eternal whisperings around
Desolate shores.

KEATS, Sonnet: On the Sea.

The hollow murmur of the ocean-tide.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel, Bk. I, l. 340.

9 Sweet is the bitter sea, and the clear green in which the gaze seeks the soul, looking through the glass into itself. The sea thinks for me as I listen and ponder; the sea thinks, and every boom of the wave repeats my prayer.

RICHARD JEFFERIES, The Story of My Heart.

10 Who hath desired the Sea? Her excellent loneliness rather

Than forecourts of kings, and her outermost pits than the streets where men gather?
RUDYARD KIPPLING, The Sea and the Hills.

11 My soul is full of longing
For the secret of the sea,
And the heart of the great ocean
Sends a thrilling pulse through me.
LONGFELLOW, The Secret of the Sea.

"Wouldst thou,"—so the helmsman answered,
"Learn the secret of the sea?
Only those who brave its dangers Comprehend its mystery!"
LONGFELLOW, The Secret of the Sea.

What are the wild waves saying,
Sister, the whole day long,
That ever amid our playing,
I hear but their low, lone song?
JOSEPH EDWARDS CARPENTER, What Are the Wild Waves Saying?

The sea, Floy, what is it that it keeps on saying?
DICKENS, Dombey and Son, Ch. 8.

¹ And like the wings of sea-birds
Flash the white caps of the sea.
LONGFELLOW, Twilight.

² She knows all sighs and she knows all sinning,
And they whisper out in her breaking wave:

She has known it all since the far beginning,
Since the grief of that first grave.

She shakes the heart with her stars and thunder

And her soft low word when the winds are late:

For the Sea is Woman, the Sea is Wonder—
Her other name is Fate!

EDWIN MARKHAM, Virginia.

³ But, visiting sea, your love doth press
And reach in further than you know,
And fills all these; and when you go
There's loneliness in loneliness.

ALICE MEYNELL, Song.

⁴ Before their eyes in sudden view appear
The secrets of the hoary deep, a dark
Illimitable Ocean, without bound,
Without dimension, where length, breadth,
and height,

And time and place are lost; where eldest
Night

And Chaos, ancestors of Nature, hold
Eternal anarchy, amidst the noise
Of endless wars, and by confusion stand.

For hot, cold, moist, and dry, four champions fierce,

Strive here for mastery.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. II, l. 890.

⁵ The sea! the sea! the open sea!
The blue, the fresh, the ever free!
Without a mark, without a bound,
It runneth the earth's wide regions round;
It plays with the clouds; it mocks the skies;
Or like a cradled creature lies.

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, The Sea.

⁶ The old, old sea, as one in tears,
Comes murmuring with foamy lips,
And knocking at the vacant piers,
Calls for its long lost multitude of ships.

THOMAS BUCHANAN READ, Come, Gentle Trembler, Wrongly quoted in Mark Twain's Life on the Mississippi. Ch. 22.

⁷ The whole ocean flamed as one wound.

KING ROYCE LOOMIS, Poetry and Imagination.

⁸ By winds the sea is lashed to storm, but if it be

Unvexed, it is of all things most amenable.
SOLON, Fragments. Frag. 9.

⁹ For every wave with dimpled face
That leap'd upon the air,
Had caught a star in its embrace
And held it trembling there.

AMELIA C. WELBY, Twilight at Sea. St. 4.

¹⁰ To me the sea is a continual miracle,
The fishes that swim—the rocks—the motion of the waves—the ships with men in them,

What stranger miracles are there?

WALT WHITMAN, Miracles.

Thou sea that pickest and cullest the race in time,
and untest nations,
Suckled by thee, old husky nurse, embodying thee,
Indomitable, untamed as thee.

WALT WHITMAN, Song for All Seas, All Ships.

The glad indomitable sea.

BLESS CARMAN, A Sea Child.

Majestic main,
A secret world of wonders in thyself.

THOMSON, A Hymn on the Seasons, l. 52.

III—Sea: In Calm

¹¹ The tender azure of the unruffled deep.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto I, st. 19.

¹² It is easy to spread the sails to propitious winds. (Facile est ventis dare vela secundis.)

MANILIUS, Astronomica. Sec. 3.

When the sea is calm the careless sailor takes his ease. (Cum mare compositum est, securi navita cessat.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 259.

Any one can hold the helm when the sea is calm.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 358.

In a calm sea every man is a pilot.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

When winds are steady and skies are clear,
Every hand the ship would steer;
But soon as ever the wild winds blow,
Every hand would go below.

D'ARCY WENTWORTH THOMPSON, Sales Attici.

¹³ The sea being smooth,
How many shallow bauble boats dare sail
Upon her patient breast.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act i, sc.
3, l. 34.

¹⁴ There is no dashing of billows when the sea is calm. (In tranquillo non tumultuatur.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epist. 98, sec. 7.

¹⁵ There the sea I found Calmed as a cradled child in dreamless slumber bound.

SHELLEY, The Revolt of Islam. Canto I, st. 15.

IV—Sea: In Storm

¹⁶ O pilot! 'tis a fearful night,
There's danger on the deep.
THOMAS HAYNES BATLY, The Pilot.

A daring pilot in extremity;
Pleas'd with the danger, when the waves went
high

He sought the storms.

DAYDEN, Abraham and Achitophel, Pt. i, l. 159.

How Bishop Aidan foretold to certain seamen a storm that would happen, and gave them some holy oil to lay it.

VENERABLE BROS., Ecclesiastical History. Vol.
iii, ch. 15, Heading.

Remember to throw into the sea the oil which I give to you, when straightway the winds will abate, and a calm and smiling sea will accompany you throughout your voyage.

VENERABLE BROS., Ecclesiastical History. Bk.
iii, ch. 15. Hence the expression, "To throw oil on troubled waters."

All seas are made calm and still with oil; and therefore the divers under the water do spirt and sprinkle it abroad with their mouths because it dulceth and allayeth the unpleasant nature thereof, and carrieth a light with it.

PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. ii, ch. 103.

Why does pouring oil on the sea make it clear and calm? Is it because the winds, slipping the smooth oil, have no force, nor cause any waves?

PLUTARCH, Morals: Natural Questions, Sec. 12.

The sea heaves up, hangs loaded o'er the land,
Breaks there and buries its tumultuous strength.

ROBERT BROWNING, Luria, Act i.

Come hither, hither, my little page!

Why dost thou weep and wail?

Or dost thou dread the billows' rage,

Or tremble at the gale?

But dash the tear-drop from thine eye;

Our ship is swift and strong,

Our fleetest falcon scarce can fly

More merrily along.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto I, st. 13. Song.

Come hither! come hither! my little daughter,

And do not tremble so;

For I can weather the roughest gale

That ever wind did blow.

LONGFELLOW, The Wreck of the Hesperus.

The hell of waters! where they howl and hiss,
And boil in endless torture.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 69.

In Biscay's sleepless bay.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 14.

Thou glorious mirror, where the Almighty's form

Glasses itself in tempests.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 183.

'T was when the seas were roaring

With hollow blasts of wind;

A damsel lay deploring,

All on a rock reclin'd.

JOHN GAY, The What d'ye Call It. Act ii, sc. 8.

The breaking waves dash'd high

On a stern and rock-bound coast,

And the woods, against a stormy sky,

Their giant branches toss'd.

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEWANS, The Landing of the Pilgrim Fathers in New England.

He goes a great voyage that goes to the bottom of the sea.

H. G. BORN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, p. 371.

See also SHIPWRECK.

Bursts as a wave that from the clouds impend,

And swell'd with tempests on the ship descends;

White are the decks with foam; the winds aloud

Howl o'er the masts, and sing thro' ev'ry
shroud:

Pale, trembling, tired, the sailors freeze with fears;

And instant death on ev'ry wave appears.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xv, l. 752. (Pope, tr.)

The wild sea roars and lashes the granite cliffs below,

And round the misty islets the loud tempests blow.

MARY HOWITT, The Sea-Fowl.

He maketh the deep to boil like a pot.

Old Testament: Job, xli, 31.

Let him who knows not how to pray go to sea.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

He that will learn to pray, let him go to Sea.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jocula Prudentum. No. 84.

And all day long the stone

Felt how the wind was blown;

And all night long the rock

Stood the sea's shock;

While, from the window, I

Looked out, and wondered why,

Why at such length

Such force should fight such strength.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Watching by a Sick-bed.

Look when the clouds are blowing

And all the winds are free:

In fury of their going

They fall upon the sea.

But though the blast is frantic,

And though the tempest raves,

The deep immense Atlantic

Is still beneath the waves.

F. W. H. MYERS, Wind, Moon and Tides.

When winds are raging o'er the upper ocean

And billows wild contend with angry roar,

'Tis said, far down beneath the wild commo-

tion

That peaceful stillness reigneth evermore.

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE, Hyman.

¹ Wherever I look, there is naught but sea and air—sea swollen with billows, air athreat with clouds; and between them are the hum and roar of the cruel winds. (Quocumque aspicio, nihil est, nisi pontus et ær, Fluctibus hic tumidus, nubinus ille minax. Inter utrumque fremunt inmani murmure venti.)
OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 2, l. 23.

The storm is master; man, like a ball,
Is toss'd 'twixt wind and billow.
(Der Sturm ist Meister; Wind und Welle spielen Ball mit dem Menschen.)
SCHILLER, Wilhelm Tell. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 59.

We are carried up to the heaven by the circling wave, and immediately the wave subsiding, we descend to the lowest depths. (Tollimur in cælum curvato gurgite, et idem Subducta ad Manis imos descendimus unda.)
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. lii, l. 564.

Ocean into tempest wrought
To waft a feather or to drown a fly.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 153.

² As far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs,
When from thy shore the tempest beat us back,
I stood upon the hatches in the storm

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 101.

³ Blow wind, swell billow, and swim bark!
The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act v, sc. 1, l. 67.

⁴ Cease, rude Boreas, blustering railer!
List, ye landsmen all, to me:
Messmates, hear a brother sailor
Sing the dangers of the sea.
GEORGE A. STEVENS, The Storm.

⁵ Yet winds to seas
Are reconcil'd at length, and sea to shore.
MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 961.

V—Sea: Sailing

⁶ Once more upon the waters! yet once more!
And the waves bound beneath me as a steed
That knows his rider.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 2.

This quiet sail is as a noiseless wing
To waft me from distraction.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 85.

⁷ O'er the glad waters of the dark-blue sea,
Our thoughts as boundless, and our souls as free,
Far as the breeze can bear, the billows foam,
Survey our empire, and behold our home!
BYRON, The Corsair. Canto i, st. 1.

⁸ Give me a spirit that on this life's rough sea
Loves t' have his sails fill'd with a lusty wind,

Even till his sail-yards tremble, his masts crack,
And his rapt ship run on her side so low
That she drinks water, and her keel plows air.
GEORGE CHAPMAN, Byron's Conspiracy. Act iii, sc. 1.

⁹ The ship was cheered, the harbour cleared,
Merrily did we drop
Below the kirk, below the hill,
Below the lighthouse top.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Ancient Mariner. Pt. i, st. 6.
We were the first that ever burst
Into that silent sea.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Ancient Mariner. Pt. ii, st. 5.

¹⁰ But oars alone can ne'er prevail
To reach the distant coast;
The breath of heav'n must swell the sail,
Or all the toil is lost.
COWPER, Human Frailty. St. 6.

And all the way, to guide their chime,
With falling oars they kept the time.
ANDREW MARVELL, Bermudas.
Faintly as tolls the evening chime,
Our voices keep tune and our oars keep time.
THOMAS MOORE, A Canadian Boat-Song.

¹¹ A wet sheet and a flowing sea,—
A wind that follows fast,
And fills the white and rustling sail,
And bends the gallant mast,—
And bends the gallant mast, my boys,
While, like the eagle free,
Away the good ship flies, and leaves
Old England on the lee.
ALLAN CUNNINGHAM, A Wet Sheet and a Flowing Sea.

¹² Well, then—our course is chosen, spread the sail,
Heave oft the lead, and mark the soundings well;
Look to the helm, good master; many a shoal
Marks this stern coast, and rocks, where sits the Siren,
Who, like ambition, lures men to their ruin.
WILLIAM FALCONER, The Shipwreck. Quoted by Scott, Kennilworth. Ch. 17.

¹³ Thus, thus I steer my bark, and sail
On even keel with gentle gale.
MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 814.
Though pleased to see the dolphins play,
I mind my compass and my way.
MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 826.

For me, my craft is sailing on,
Through mists to-day, clear seas anon.
Whate'er the final harbor be,
'Tis good to sail upon the sea!
JOHN KENBRICK BANGS, The Voyage.

¹⁴ Come o'er the moonlit sea,

The waves are brightly glowing.

CHARLES JEFFERYS, The Moonlit Sea.

¹ Some love to roam o'er the dark sea's foam,
Where the shrill winds whistle free

CHARLES MACKAY, Some Love to Roam.

² "Ahoy! and O-ho! and it's who's for the ferry?"

(The briar's in bud and the sun going down)

"And I'll row ye so quick and I'll row ye so steady,

And 't is but a penny to Twickenham Town."

THÉOPHILE MARZIATS, Twickenham Ferry.

³ Well pleas'd they slack their course, and many a league

Cheer'd with the grateful smell old Ocean smiles.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 164.

⁴ Thus far we run before the wind.

ARTHUR MURPHY, The Apprentice. Act i, sc. 1,
l. 344.

But the principal failing occurred in the sailing,
And the Beliman, perplexed and distressed,
Said he had hoped, at least, when the wind blew
due East,

That the ship would not travel due West!

LEWIS CARROLL, The Hunting of the Snark.

⁵ Simple and strong and desolate and daring,
Leaps to the great embraces of the sea.

FREDERIC W. H. MYERS, St. Paul.

⁶ We have ploughed the vast ocean in a fragile bark. (Nos fragili ligno vastum sulcavimus aquor.)

OWEN, Epistula ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 4, l. 35.

⁷ I'm on the sea! I'm on the sea!

I am where I would ever be,
With the blue above and the blue below,
And silence wheresoe'er I go.

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, The Sea.

⁸ A life on the ocean wave,
A home on the rolling deep,

Where the scattered waters rave,
And the winds their revels keep!

EPYS SARGENT, A Life on the Ocean Wave.

⁹ Upon the gale she stooped her side,
And bounded o'er the swelling tide,
As she were dancing home;

The merry seamen laughed to see
Their gallant ship so lustily

Furrow the green sea-foam.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto ii, st. 1.

¹⁰ Behold the threaten sails,
Borne with the invisible and creeping wind,

Draw the huge bottoms through the furrow'd
sea,

Breasting the lofty surge.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, Prologue, l. 10.

Sail like my pinnacle to these golden shores.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act i, sc. 3, l. 89.

¹¹

Gentle airs

Curl'd the blue deep, and bright the summer
sun

Play'd o'er the summer ocean, when our barks
Began their way. And they were gallant barks
As ever through the raging billows rode;
And many a tempest's buffeting they bore.
Their sails all swelling with the eastern breeze,
Their tighten'd cordage clattering to the mast,
Steady they rode the main

SOUTHEY, Madoc in Wales. Pt. iv, l. 5.

Day after day, with one auspicious wind,
Right to the setting sun we held our course. . . .

Day after day, day after day the same,—
A weary waste of waters!

SOUTHEY, Madoc in Wales. Pt. iv, l. 16.

And still at morning where we were at night,
And where we were at morn, at nightfall still,
The centre of that drear circumference,
Progressive, yet no change!

SOUTHEY, Madoc in Wales. Pt. iv, l. 83.

¹²

I will go back to the great sweet mother,
Mother and lover of men, the sea.

I will go down to her, I and none other,
Close with her, kiss her and mix her with
me.

SWINBURNE, The Triumph of Time. St. 33. See also WANDERLUST.

¹³

Rocked in the cradle of the deep

I lay me down in peace to sleep;

Secure I rest upon the wave,

For Thou, O Lord! hast power to save.

EMMA HART WILLARD, Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep. Written at sea, 14 July, 1831.

VI—Sea: Sailors

¹⁴

Great seamen . . . in tall ships ribbed with brass,

To put a girdle round about the world.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Bussy d'Ambois. Act i, sc.

1. A proverbial expression for a voyage around the world

I'll put a girdle round about the earth in forty minutes.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act ii, sc. 1, l. 175.

He hath put a girdle 'bout the world,
And sounded all her quicksands.

JOHN WEBSTER, Duchess of Malfi. Act iii, sc. 2.

Round the world and home again,
That's the sailor's way.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Homeward Bound.

Wherever waves can roll, and winds can blow.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Farewell.

While the hollow oak our palace is,
Our heritage the sea.

ALLAN CUNNINGHAM, A Wet Sheet and a Flowing Sea.

For they say there's a Providence sits up aloft,

To keep watch for the life of poor Jack!

CHARLES DIBDIN, Poor Jack.

There's a sweet little cherub that sits up aloft,
To keep watch for the life of poor Jack.

CHARLES DIBDIN, Poor Jack.

For if bold tars are Fortune's sport,
Still are they Fortune's care.

CHARLES DIBDIN, The Blind Sailor.

Mayhap you have heard that as dear as their lives

All true-hearted tars love their ships and their wives.

CHARLES DIBDIN, The Nancy.

In every mess I find a friend,
In every port a wife.

CHARLES DIBDIN, Jack in His Element.

They'll tell thee sailors, when away,
In every port a mistress find.

JOHN GAY, Sweet William's Farewell.

A seafaring man may have a sweetheart in every port;
but he should steer clear of a wife as he would avoid a quicksand.

SMOLLETT, The Adventures of Sir Launcelot Greaves. Ch. 21.

Here, a sheer hulk, lies poor Tom Bowling,
The darling of our crew;

No more he'll hear the tempest howling,
For death has broached him to.

His form was of the manliest beauty,
His heart was kind and soft;

Faithful, below, he did his duty;
But now he's gone aloft.

CHARLES DIBDIN, Tom Bowling.

Skill'd in the globe and sphere, he gravely stands,

And, with his compass, measures seas and lands.

DANIEL, Sixth Satire of Juvenal, l. 760.

The wonder is always new that any sane man can be a sailor,

EMERSON, English Traits, p. 36.

Your seamen are like your element, always tempestuous.

FARQUHAR, Sir Harry Wildair. Act I, sc. 1.

Rude and bolterous captain of the sea.

JOHN HOLT, Douglas. Act IV, sc. 1.

The skipper stormed and tore his hair,
Hauled on his boots and roared at Marden—

"Nantucket 's sunk and here we are Right over old Marm Hackett's garden!"
JAMES T. FIELDS, The Nantucket Skipper.

Now landmen all, whoever you may be,
If you want to rise to the top of the tree,
If your soul isn't fettered to an office stool,
Be careful to be guided by this golden rule—
Stick close to your desks and never go to sea,
And you all may be Rulers of the Queen's Navee!

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act I.

Sailors should never be shy.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act I.

Sailors are but worldly men, and little prone to lead serious and thoughtful lives.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act I.

Oak and brass of triple fold
Encompassed sure that heart, which first made bold

To the raging sea to trust a fragile bark.

(Illi robur et æs triplex)

Circa pectus erat, qui fragilem truci

Commissit pelago ratem Primus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. I, ode 3, l. 9. (Conington, tr.)

The hungry sea is fatal to sailors. (Exitio est avidum mare nautis.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. I, ode 28, l. 18.

Trust to a plank, draw precarious breath,
At most seven inches from the jaws of death.

(Confusus ligno, digitis a morte remotus)

Quattuor aut septem, si sit latissima, tædæ.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xii, l. 58.

Avoid business with the sea, and put thy mind to the ox-drawn plough, if it is any joy to thee to see the end of a long life. On land there is length of days, but on the sea it is difficult to find a man with gray hair.

PHALACRUS, Epigram. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, No. 650.)

Ships are but boards, sailors but men: there be land-rats and water-rats, land-thieves and water-thieves, I mean pirates, and then there is the peril of waters, winds and rocks.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, I, 3, 22.

Of all the husbands on the earth,

The sailor has the finest berth,

For in 'is cabin he can sit

And sail and sail—and let 'er knit.

WALLACE IRWIN, A Grain of Salt.

A baby was sleeping, its mother was weeping,
For her husband was far on the wild-raging sea.

SAMUEL LOVER, The Angel's Whisper.

No man will be a sailor who has contrivance enough to get himself into a jail; for being in a ship is being in jail with the chance of being drowned. . . . A man in a jail has more room, better food, and commonly better company.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (Boswell, Life, 1794.)

What is a ship but a prison?

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. II, sec. III, para. 4.

1 Roll down—roll down to Rio—

Roll really down to Rio!

Oh, I'd love to roll to Rio

Some day before I'm old!

KIPLING, Just-So Stories: Armadillos.

2 There were gentlemen and there were seamen in the navy of Charles the Second. But the seamen were not gentlemen; and the gentlemen were not seamen.

MACAULAY, History of England. Vol. I, ch. 3.

3 A white color is a disgrace in a sailor: he should be swarthy from the sea-water and the rays of the sun. (Candidus in nauta turpis color: æquoris unda Debet et a radiis sideris esse niger.)

OWEN, Ars Amatoria. Bk. I, l. 723.

4 Seek, sailor, the safe harbors. (Tutos, pete, navita, portus.)

OWEN, Fasti. Bk. IV, l. 625.

A Passage perillus makyth a Port pleasant.

UNKNOWN, Motto, inscribed on a harbor wall on the Lake of Como.

Did you voyage all unspoken, small and lonely?

Or with fame, the happy fortune of the few?

So you win the Golden Harbour, in the old way;

There's the old sea welcome waiting there for you.

RONALD A. HOORWOOD, The Old Way. (London Times, 16 Sept., 1916.)

They saw the cables loosened, they saw the gangways cleared,

They heard the women weeping, they heard the men that cheered;

Far off, far off, the tumult faded and died away,

And all alone the sea-wind came singing up the Bay.

HENRY NEWBOLT, The Sailing of the Long Ships.

5 The seaman sets his sails to suit the wind. (Utrumque in alto ventust, exim velum vortitur.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 49. (Act I, sc. 1.)

6 There is no pleasure sailors have greater than sighting from the deep the distant land.

(Voluptas nullast navitia . . . quam quom ex alto procul terram conspiciunt.)

PLAUTUS, Menachmi, l. 226. (Act II, sc. 1.)

Pass we the joys and sorrows sailors find,
Coop'd in their winged sea-girl citadel,
The foul, the fair, the contrary, the kind,
As breezes rise and fall and billows swell,
Till on some fountain morn—lo, land! and all is well.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto II, st. 28.

7 They that go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters; these see the works

Of the Lord, and his wonders in the deep.
Old Testament: Psalms, cvii, 23, 24.

8 Like a drunken sailor on a mast;
Ready, with every nod, to tumble down

Into the fatal bowels of the deep.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act III, sc. 4, l. 101.

9 I make good the old saying, we sailors get money like horses, and spend it like asses.

SMOLLETT, Peregrine Pickle. Ch. 2.

Strike up the band, here comes a sailor,

Cash in his hand, just off a whaler;

Stand in a row, don't let him go;

Jack's a cinch, but every inch a sailor.

ANDREW B. STERLING, Strike Up the Band. (1900)

10 There were three sailors of Bristol city
Who took a boat and went to sea.

But first with beef and captain's biscuits

And pickled pork they loaded she.

There was gorging Jack and guzzling Jimmy,
And the youngest he was little Billee.

Now when they got as far as the Equator

They'd nothing left but one split pea.

THACKERAY, Little Billee.

Oh, I am a cook and a captain bold

And the mate of the Nancy brig,

And a bo'sun tight and a midshipmite

And the crew of the captain's gig.

W. S. GILBERT, The Yarn of the Nancy Bell.

VII—Sea and Land

13 Whenever you can make your journey by land, do not make it by sea. (Quando terra iter facere possis, ne mari facias.)

APOSTOLUS, Adagia. Cent. II, sec. 54. One of the three things in his life which Cato

Major repeated was having made a journey

by sea when he could have gone by land.

(PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. 9, §.)

There are many advantages in sea-voyaging, but security is not one of them.

SALT (EMERSON, English Traits: The Voyage.)

14 They are ill discoverers that think there is no land, when they can see nothing but sea.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. II.

15 An everywhere of silver,

To keep it from effacing

The track called land.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. ii, No. 22.

Hark! don't ye hear it roar, now?

Lord help 'em, how I pities them

Unhappy folks on shore now!

CHARLES DIEDIN, The Sailor's Consolation.

This poem is sometimes attributed to William Pitt, the song-writer.

My eyes! what tiles and chimney-pots

About their heads are flying!

CHARLES DIEDIN, The Sailor's Consolation.

The shore has perils unknown to the deep.

Ships have been drown'd, where late they danc'd before.

HERRICK, Safety on the Shore.

⁶ Love the sea? I dote upon it—from the beach.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Specimens of Jerrold's Wit: Love of the Sea.

⁷ When men come to like a sea life they are not fit to live on land.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1776.)

They scorn the strand who sail upon the sea.

H. D. THOREAU, The Fisher's Boy.

⁸ The land is dearer for the sea,

The ocean for the shore.

LUCY LARCOM, On the Beach. St. 11.

⁹ He who loves the ocean

And the ways of ships

May taste beside a mountain pool

Brine on his lips.

MARY SINTON LEITCH, He Who Loves the Ocean.

The dangers of the seas.

MARTIN PARKER, Ye Gentlemen of England.

Ye who dwell at home,

Ye do not know the terrors of the main!

SOUTHEY, Mudoc in Wales. Pt. iv, l. 178.

¹⁵ I am the tomb of a shipwrecked man, and that opposite is the tomb of a husbandman. So death lies in wait alike on sea and land.

PLATO. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 265.)

And Christians love in the turf to lie,

Not in watery graves to be;

Nay, the very fishes will sooner die

On the land than in the sea.

THOMAS HOOD, The Mermaid of Margate, l. 65.

¹⁶ I never was on the dull, tame shore.

But I loved the great sea more and more.

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, The Sea.

¹⁷ Now would I give a thousand furlongs of sea for an acre of barren ground.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 1, l. 70.

¹⁸ Hug the shore, let others keep to the deep.

(Litus ama, . . . altum alii teneant.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. v, l. 163.

¹⁹ Of Christian souls more have been wrecked on shore

Than ever were lost at sea.

CHARLES H. WEBB, With a Nantucket Shell.

VIII—Sea: Seasickness

²⁰ He felt that chilling heaviness of heart,

Or rather stomach, which, alas! attends,

Beyond the best apothecary's art.

The loss of love, the treachery of friends. . . .

No doubt he would have been much more pathetic,

But the sea acted as a strong emetic.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 21.

The best of remedies is a beef-steak

Against sea-sickness: try it, sir, before

You sneer, and I assure you this is true,
For I have found it answer—so may you.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 13.

There's not a sea the passenger e'er pukes in Turns up more dangerous breakers than the Euxine.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 5.

The bounding pinnace play'd a game
Of dreary pitch and toss;
A game that, on the good dry land,
Is apt to bring a loss!

THOMAS HOOD, The Sea-Spell, l. 21.

What of the poor man? . . . He hires a boat and gets just as sick as the rich man who sails in his yacht. (Quid pauper? . . . Conducto navigio aequè Nauseat ac Iocuples quem ducit priva triremis.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 91.

You may be sure that the reason Ulysses was shipwrecked on every possible occasion was not because of the anger of the sea-god; he was simply subject to sea-sickness. (Nausiator erat.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. liii, sec. 4.

We all like to see people sea-sick when we are not ourselves

MARK TWAIN, The Innocents Abroad. Ch. 3.

IX—Sea: Sea-Shells

I wiped away the weeds and foam,
I fetched my sea-born treasures home;
But the poor, unsightly, noisome things
Had left their beauty on the shore,
With the sun and the sand and the wild up-
roar.

EMERSON, Each and All.

But I have sinuous shells of pearly hue; . . .
Shake one, and it awakens; then apply
Its polished lips to your attentive ear,
And it remembers its august abodes,
And murmurs as the ocean murmurs there.

W. S. LANDOR, Gebir. Bk. i, l. 159.

In the upper room I lay, and heard far off
The unsleeping murmur like a shell.

R. L. STEVENSON, To S. C.

The hollow sea-shell, which for years hath stood

On dusty shelves, when held against the ear
Proclaims its stormy parent, and we hear
The faint, far murmur of the breaking flood.
We hear the sea. The Sea? It is the blood
In our own veins, impetuous and near.

EUGENE LEE-HAMILTON, Sea-shell Murmurs.

The soul of music slumbers in the shell,
Till waked and kindled by the master's spell;

And feeling hearts—touch them but rightly —pour

A thousand melodies unheard before!

SAMUEL ROGERS, Human Life, l. 361.

Gather a shell from the strewn beach
And listen at its lips: they sigh

The same desire and mystery,
The echo of the whole sea's speech.

D. G. ROSSETTI, The Sea-Limits.

From within were heard
Murmurings, whereby the monitor expressed
Mysterious union with its native sea.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 1138.

I send thee a shell from the ocean-beach;
But listen thou well, for my shell hath speech.
Hold to thine ear And plain thou'lt hear

Tales of ships.

CHARLES H. WEBB, With a Nantucket Shell.

It is perhaps a more fortunate destiny to have a taste for collecting shells than to be born a millionaire.

R. L. STEVENSON, Lay Morals.

X—Sea: Freedom of the Sea

Thus much is certain: that he that commands the sea is at great liberty, and may take as much and as little of the war as he will.

BACON, Essays of Kingdoms and Estates.

To all nations their empire will be dreadful, because their ships will sail wherever billows roll or winds can waft them.

SIR JOHN DALRYMPLE, Memoirs of Great Britain and Ireland. Vol. iii, p. 152.

The most advanced nations are always those who navigate the most.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Civilization.

That the persons of our citizens shall be safe in freely traversing the ocean, that the transportation of our own produce, in our own vessels, to the markets of our own choice, and the return to us of the articles we want for our own use, shall be unmolested, I hold to be fundamental, and the gauntlet that must be forever hurled at him who questions it.

SEASONS, THE

See also Spring, Summer, Autumn, Winter

⁴ The tendinous part of the mind, so to speak, is more developed in winter; the fleshy, in summer. I should say winter had given the bone and sinew to literature, summer the tissues and the blood.

JOHN BURROUGHS, The Snow-Walkers.

⁵ Therefore all seasons shall be sweet to thee,
Whether the summer clothe the general earth
With greenness, or the redbreast sit and sing
Betwixt the tufts of snow on the bare branch
Of mossy apple-tree.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Frost at Midnight, l. 65.

⁶ Four seasons fill the measure of the year.

KEATS, The Human Seasons.

Perceiv'st thou not the process of the year,
How the four seasons in four forms appear,
Resembling human life in ev'ry shape they wear?
Spring first, like infancy, shoots out her head,
With milky juice requiring to be fed: . . .
Proceeding onward whence the year began,
The Summer grows adult, and ripens into
man. . . .

Autumn succeeds, a sober, tepid age,
Not froze with fear, nor boiling into rage; . . .
Last, Winter creeps along with tardy pace.
Sour is his front, and furrow'd is his face.

OVM, Metamorphoses, xv, 296. (Dryden, tr.)

Sing a song of Spring-time, the world is going
round,

Blown by the south wind, listen to its sound. . . .
Sing a song of Summer, the world is nearly still,
The mill-pond has gone to sleep, and so has the mill. . . .

Sing a song of Autumn, the world is going back;
They glean in the corn-field, and stamp on the stack. . . .

Sing a song of Winter, the world stops dead;
Under snowy cover'd flowers lie abed.

COSMO MONKHOUSE, A Song of the Seasons.

Then, how merry are the times!

The Spring times! the Summer times! . . .

Now, how solemn are the times!
The Winter times! the Night times! . . .
Sing then, hopeful are all times!
Winter, Spring, Summer times!

BRYAN W. PROCTER, A Song for the Seasons.

These, as they change, Almighty Father, these Are but the varied God. The rolling year
Is full of Thee. Forth in the pleasing Spring
Thy beauty walks, thy tenderness and love. . . .
Then comes thy glory in the Summer-months,
With light and heat refulgent. Then thy sun Shoots full perfection through the swelling year. . . .

Thy bounty shines in Autumn unconfined,
And spreads a common feast for all that lives.
In Winter awful thou! with clouds and storms
Around thee thrown, tempest o'er tempest rolled,
Majestic darkness! On the whirlwind's wing
Riding sublime.

JAMES THOMSON, A Hymn on the Seasons, l. 1.

Spring, the low prelude of a lordlier song;

Summer, a music without hint of death:

Autumn, a cadence, lingeringly long:

Winter, a pause;—the Minstrel-Year takes breath.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Year's Minstrelsy.

⁷ Our seasons have no fixed returns,

Without our will they come and go;

At noon our sudden summer burns,

Ere sunset all is snow.

J. R. LOWELL, To —. St. 2.

⁸ Autumn to winter, winter into spring,
Spring into summer, summer into fall,—
So rolls the changing year, and so we change;
Motion so swift, we know not that we move.

DINAH MARIA MULLOCK CRAIK, Immutable.

A man can keep another person's secret better than his own: a woman, on the contrary, keeps her secret though she blabs all others.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. v.

Nothing is so oppressive as a secret: women find it difficult to keep one long; and I know a goodly number of men who are women in this regard.

(Rien ne pèse tant qu'un secret:

Le porter join est difficile aux dames;

Et je sais même sur ce fait

Bon nombre d'hommes que sont femmes.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. viii, fab. 6.

A free-tongued woman,

And very excellent at telling secrets.

MIDDLETON AND MASSINGER, The Old Law. Act
iv, sc. 2.

Thou wilt not utter what thou dost not know,

And so far will I trust thee, gentle Kate.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 114.

Is there whom you detest, and seek his life?
Trust no soul with the secret—but his wife.

SELF-CONFIDENCE

You carry Cæsar and Cæsar's fortune.
(Cæsarem vehis Cæsarisque fortunam. Or, Cæsarem portas et fortunam ejus.)

JULIUS CÆSAR, to the pilot, Amyclas, when their boat was imperilled by a storm. (SUX-TONIUS, Lives of the Cæsars: Julius. Sec. 58.
Also PLUTARCH, Lives: Cæsar. Sec. 38.)

You are uneasy; you never sailed with me before,
I see.

ANDREW JACKSON, to an elderly man who showed signs of fear while sailing with Jackson down Chesapeake Bay in an old steamboat.
(PARTON, Life of Jackson. Vol iii, p. 493.)

Most happy he who is entirely self-reliant, and who centres all his requirements in himself alone. (Beatissimus, qui est totus aptus ex sese, quisque in se uno sua ponit omnia.)
CICERO, Paradoxa, ii.

By his own prowess. (Suo Marte.)

CICERO, Philippicæ. No. ii, ch. 37, sec. 95.

Nor fate, nor chance, nor any star commands
Success and failure—naught but your own hands.

Those who believe that they are exclusively in the right are generally those who achieve something.

ALDOUS HUXLEY, Proper Studies, p. 243.

The confidence which we have in ourselves engenders the greatest part of that we have in others. (La confiance que l'on a en soi fait naître le plus grande partie de celle que l'on
a aux autres.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées, 624.

When the trumpet sounds the signal of danger, man hastens to join his comrades, no matter what the cause that calls them to arms. He rushes into the thickest of the fight, and amid the uproar of battle regains confidence in himself and in his powers.

LAMARTINE, Méditations Poétiques.

¹ The promises of this world are for the most part vain phantoms, and to confide in one's self, and become something of worth and value, is the best and safest course.

MICHELANGELO. (EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Success.)

There is no dependence that can be sure but a dependence upon one's self.

JOHN GAY, Letter to Swift, 9 Nov., 1729.

SELF-CONTROL

⁹ I count him braver who overcomes his desires than him who conquers his enemies; for the hardest victory is the victory over self.

ARISTOTLE. (STOEBIUS, Florilegium, p. 223.)

No man is such a conqueror as the man who has defeated himself.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit.

When the fight begins within himself
A man's worth something.

17 Allow not sleep to draw near to your languorous eyelids

Until you have reckoned up each several deed of the daytime:

"Where went I wrong? Did what? And what to be done was left undone?"

Starting from this point, review, then, your acts, and thereafter remember:

Censure yourself for the acts that are base, but rejoice in the goodly.

PYTHAGORAS (?), Golden Verses. (EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. iii, ch. 10, sec. 2.)

Sum up at night what thou hast done by day;
And in the morning what thou hast to do.
Dress and undress thy soul; mark the decay

And growth of it; if, with thy watch, that too
Be down, then wind up both; since we shall be
Most surely judg'd, make thy accounts agree.
GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 76.

Let not soft slumber close your eyes,
Before you've recollected thrice
The train of action through the day!
Where have my feet chose out their way?
What have I learnt, where'er I've been,
From all I've heard, from all I've seen?
What have I more that's worth the knowing?
What have I dooe that's worth the doing?
What have I sought that I should shun?
What duty have I left undone,
Or into what new follies run?
These self-inquiries are the road
That lead to virtue and to God.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 3.

1 Know thyself. (Γνῶθι σεαυτόν.)

THALES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Thales. Sec. 40.) Diogenes Laertius asserts that this belongs to Thales, one of the seven wise men of Greece, although Antisthenes, in his Successions of Philosophers, attributes it to Phemonoe, and others to Chilon and to Solon. It was the first of the three maxims inscribed on the Temple of Apollo at Delphi. The others were "Nothing too much" (Μηδὲν ἄγαν), and "Give surety, and trouble is at hand" (Ἐγγύς, πάρα δ' ἄτη).

I commend my "know thyself," which is still preserved on a column at Delphi. (Commendo nostrum γνῶθι σεαυτόν, nosce te, Quod in columna jam tenetur Delphica.)

CHILON. (AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 138.)

That irksome toil produces most excellent fruit—to distinguish what you can endure and what you cannot; by night and day to examine what you are doing, what you have done, down to the smallest atom. All virtues—self-respect, honor, fortitude—lie in this.

AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 140.

The ancients gave us the injunction, "Know thyself." (Διὰ τοῦτο παρηγγέλλουν οἱ παλαιοὶ τὸ Γνῶθι σεαυτόν.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. i, ch. 18, sec. 18.

2 Know thyself. (Nosce te.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 22, sec. 52. The commonly used form of the proverb. The full quotation is: Cum igitur: Nosce te, dicit, hoc dicit: Nosce animum tuum, "When then Apollo says, 'Know thyself,' he says, 'Know thy soul.'" (BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, ii, 3, 8.)

From heaven descended the precept, "Know thyself." (E cælo descendit γνῶθι σεαυτόν.)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. xi, l. 1. It should be noted that σεαυτόν is a contraction of σεαυτόν, and that sometimes one is used and sometimes the other. Originally the word was separated, as in Homer, who always writes, σ' αὐτόν.

3 The saying, "Know thyself," is silly. It were more practical to say, "Know other folks." (Γνῶθι τοὺς ἄλλους.)

MEXANDER, Thrasyleon: Fragment.

If the "Know thyself" (Γνῶθι σεαυτόν) of the oracle were an easy thing for every man, it would not be held to be a divine injunction.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Demosthenes. Ch. 3, sec. 7. Γνῶθι σεαυτόν!—and is this the prime And heaven-sprung adage of the olden time! . . . Vain sister of the worm,—life, death, soul, clod—Ignore thyself, and strive to know thy God!

for where thou hast pleased thyself, there thou abidest.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems, Bk. iv, No. 3.

⁵ Self-love is a mote in every man's eye.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 130. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 4093. (1732) A variant is, "Self-love makes the eyes blind."

⁶ Self-love makes more libertines than love.
(L'amour-propre fait plus de libertins que l'amour.)

ROUSSEAU, Emile, Bk. iv.

⁷ Self-love, which is the most inhibited sin in the canon.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, l. 1, 138.

Self-love, my liege, is not so vile a sin
As self-neglecting.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, Act ii, sc. 4, l. 74.

She cannot love,
Nor take no shape nor project of affection,
She is so self-andered.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, II, 1, 54.

⁸ I have looked upon the world for four times seven years; and since I could distinguish betwixt a benefit and an injury, I never found man that knew how to love himself.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, Act i, sc. 3, l. 312.

⁹ Self-love and love of the world constitute hell.
SWEDENBORG, Apocalypse Explained, Par. 1144.

meurt jamais.)

VOLTAIRE, Stances ou Quatrains, After Fibrac.

Self-love is the instrument of our preservation;
it resembles the provision for the perpetuity of mankind—it is necessary, it is dear to us, it gives us pleasure, and we must conceal it.

VOLTAIRE, Philosophical Dictionary: Self-Love.

¹⁴ Would you hurt a man keenest, strike at his self-love.

LEW WALLACE, Ben Hur, Bk. vi, ch. 2.

SELF-PRESERVATION

¹⁷ Self-preservation is the first law of nature.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains, II, 27. (c. 1675);

SMOLLETT, Peregrine Pickle, Ch. 57. (1751)

¹⁸ Nature has endowed every species of living creature with the instinct of self-preservation. (Generi animantium omni est a natura tributum.)

CICERO, De Officiis, Bk. I, ch. 4, sec. 11.

¹⁹ An animal's first impulse is self-preservation, (Τὸ δὲ πρῶτον ἁπλῶς φανερὸν ἐστὶν τῶν ζῴων ἅπλ. τὸ ἐνστικτὸν διατρεφ.)

DIODORUS LACRTIUS, Zoon, Bk. vii, sec. 85, dispensing a Stoic doctrine.

PYTHAGORAS, Golden Maxims. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras. Bk. viii, sec. 23.)
- 8 Self-respect is the noblest garment with which a man may clothe himself, the most elevating feeling with which the mind can be inspired.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Self Help. Ch. 10.
- 9 Revere thyself, and yet thyself despise.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 128.

SELF-SACRIFICE

- 10 Inwardness, mildness, and self-renouncement do make for man's happiness.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, Literature and Dogma. Ch. 3.
- 11 He never errs who sacrifices self.
BULWER-LYTTON, The New Timon. Pt. iv, sec. 3.
- Self sacrifice which denies common sense is not a virtue. It's a spiritual dissipation.
MARGARET DELAND.
- 12 Self-sacrifice is the real miracle out of which all the reported miracles grew.
EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Courage.
- 13 Sacrifice is the first element of religion, and resolves itself in theological language into the love of God.
J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies: Sea Studies.
- In common things, the law of sacrifice takes the form of positive duty.
J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies: Sea Studies.
- As soon as sacrifice becomes a duty and necessity to the man, I see no limit to the horizon which opens before me.
ERNEST RENAN.
- 15 Was anything real ever gained without sacrifice of some kind?
ARTHUR HELPS, Friends in Council. Bk. ii, l. 1.

2 At the king's court, my brother,
Each man for himself, there is none other.

CHAUCER, The Knights Tale, l. 323. (c. 1386)

Where every man is for himself,
And no man for all.

ROBERT CROWLEY, Works, p. 11. (1550)

Every one for his home, every one for himself.
(Chacun chez soi, chacun pour soi.)

ANDRÉ DUPIN, Procès de Tendance.

Every man for himself and God for us all.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

Every man for himself, his own ends, the devil for all.

BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. 1.

3 By whatever name we call
The ruling tyrant, Self is all in all.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Conference, l. 177.

4 The least pain in our little finger gives us more concern and uneasiness, than the destruction of millions of our fellow-beings.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Works. Vol. x, p. 324.

5 In high places regard for others is rarely to be found. (Rarus enim ferme sensus communis in illa Fortuna.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 73.

6 Not a deed would he do, nor a word would he utter,
Till he'd weighed its relations to plain bread and butter.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 186.

But somehow, when the dogs hed gut asleep,
Their love o' mutton beat their love o' sheep.

7 We always took care of number one.

FREDERICK MARRIAT, Frank Midway. Ch. 19.

8 There are two levers for moving men—interest and fear.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Sayings of Napoleon.

John Adams . . . said . . . Reason, Justice and Equity never had weight enough on the face of the earth to govern the councils of men. It is interest alone which does it.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. 4, p. 49.

For the world is ruled by interest alone. (Denn nur vom Nutzen wird die Welt regiert.)

SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Tod. Act i, sc. 6, l. 37.

9 Everyone was eloquent in behalf of his own cause. (Proque sua causa quisque disertus erat.)

OVID, Fasts. Bk. iv, l. 112.

10 As for the largest-hearted of us, what is the word we write most often in our cheque-books?—"Self."

16 Self the spring of all.

SOUTHEY, The Poet's Pilgrimage to Waterloo.
Pt. ii, canto 1, st. 22.

17 Everyone sets his own good before his neighbor's.
(Omnis sibi malle melius esse quam alteri.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 427. (Act ii, sc. 5.) Quoted as a proverb.

II—Selfishness: Its Faults

18 Like a hog, or dog in the manger, he doth only keep it because it shall do nobody else good, hurting himself and others.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
i, sec. 2, mem. 3, suba. 12.

19 You mayn't be changed to a bird though you live

As selfishly as you can;

But you will be changed to a smaller thing—
A mean and selfish man.

FRANCIS CARY, A Legend of the Northland.

20 Selfishness is the greatest curse of the human race.

W. E. GLADSTONE, Speech, Hawarden, 25 May, 1890.

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 171.

² He that lives not somewhat to others, liveth little to himself.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 10.

No man is born unto himself alone;
Who lives unto himself, he lives to none.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Esther. Sec i, med. 1.

³ Self is the medium through which Judgment's ray

Can seldom pass without being turn'd astray.

THOMAS MOORE, The Sceptic, l. 41.

⁴ High though his titles, proud his name,
Boundless his wealth as wish can claim,—
Despite those titles, power, and pelf,
The wretch, concentr'd all in self,
Living, shall forfeit fair renown,
And, doubly dying, shall go down
To the vile dust from whence he sprung,
Unwept, unhonour'd, and unsung.

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto vi, st. 1.

Then dropt into the grave, unpitied and unknown!

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, l. 9.

Without a grave, unknell'd, uncoffin'd, and unknown.

Unwept, unonor'd, uninter'd he lies!

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxii, l. 484. (Pope, tr.)

Unwept, unnoted, and for ever dead!

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. v, l. 402. (Pope, tr.)

Unrespited, unpitied, unrepriev'd,
Ages of hopeless end.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 185.

Thy fate unpitied, and thy rites unpaid.

POPE, Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate Lady, l. 48.

Unwept, unshrouded, and unsepulchred.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, A Tale of Paraguay. Canto i, st. 11.

⁵ That which serves and seeks for gain,
And follows but for form,

Will pack when it begins to rain,
And leave thee in the storm.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 79.

⁶ Suicidal Selfishness, that blights
The fairest feelings of the opening heart.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Pt. v, l. 16.

Undisguising Selfishness, that sets
On each its price, the stamp-mark of her reign.
Even love is sold; the solace of all woe
Is turned to deadliest agony.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Pt. v, l. 187.

⁷ Himself unto himself he sold:

Upon himself himself did feed;

Quiet, dispassionate and cold.

TENNYSON, A Character, l. 26.

⁸ The selfish heart deserves the pains it feels.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 300.

Nothing in nature, much less conscious being,
Was e'er created solely for itself.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 704.

III—Selfishness: Its Virtues

⁹ Keep all you have and try for all you can.

BULWER-LYTTON, King Arthur. Bk. ii, l. 70.

¹⁰ I have heard said, eke times twice twelve,

"He is a fool that will forget himself."

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. v, l. 97.

All sensible people are selfish.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

Where all are selfish, the sage is no better than the fool, and only rather more dangerous.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Party Politics.

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 7, l. 98.

¹² Be, as so many are now, rich for yourself, poor for your friends. (Esto, ut nunc multi, dives tibi, pauper amicis.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. v, l. 113.

The same people who can deny others everything are famous for refusing themselves nothing.

LEIGH HUNT, Table Talk: Catherine II. Note.

Or monarch's hands that let not bounty fall
Where want cries some, but where excess begs all.

SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 41.

¹³ Selfishness, Love's cousin.

KEATS, Isabella. St. 31.

Twin-sister of Religion, Selfishness!

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Pt. v, l. 22.

¹⁴ I have yet to find a man worth his salt in any direction who did not think of himself first and foremost. . . . The man who thinks of others before he thinks of himself may become a Grand Master of the Elks, a Socialist of parts, or the star guest of honor at public banquets, but he will never become a great or successful artist, statesman, or even clergyman.

G. J. NATHAN, Testament of a Critic, p. 6.

¹⁵ This is the plain truth: every one ought to keep a sharp eye for the main chance. (Vera dico: ad suum quemque hominem questum esse equomst callidum.)

³ Common sense (which, in truth, is very uncommon) is the best sense I know of.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 27 Sept., 1748.

⁴ Who would die a martyr to sense in a country where the religion is folly?

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act i, sc. 2.

⁵ Through Sense and Non-sense, never out nor in.

DRYDEN, Abraham and Achitophel. Pt. II, l. 415.

Preferring sense, from chin that's bare,
To nonsense throned in whiskered hair.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 760.

⁶ Common Sense, which, one would say, means the shortest line between two points.

EMERSON, Journals, March, 1866.

⁷ Be sober, and to doubt prepense,
These are the sinews of good sense.

SIR WILLIAM HAMILTON, Notes on Reid. (ERIC ARAMUS, Fragments. No. 255.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 75.

¹² Good Sense, which only is the gift of Heav'n,
And tho' no science, fairly worth the sev'n.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epia. iv, l. 43.

And splendour borrows all her rays from sense.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epia. iv, l. 180.

Fool! 'tis in vain from wit to wit to roam:
Know, Sense, like Charity, "begins at home."

POPE, Umbræ, l. 15.

¹³ God send you mair sense and me mair siller.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

¹⁴ At Christmas I no more desire a rose
Than wish a snow in May's new-fangled mirth;

But like of each thing that in season grows.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 1, l. 105.

¹⁵ Common sense is not so common. (Le sens commun n'est pas si commun.)

VOLTAIRE, Philosophical Dictionary: Self-Love.

¹⁶ Plain sense but rarely leads us far astray.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 278.

Sense is our helmet, wit is but the plume;

The plume exposes, 'tis our helmet saves.

Sense is the diamond, weighty, solid, sound;

When cut by wit, it casts a brighter beam;

Yet, wit apart, it is a diamond still.

SENTIMENTALISM

⁴ The barrenest of all mortals is the sentimentalist.

CARLYLE, Characteristics.

Is not Sentimentalism twin-sister to Cant, if not one and the same with it?

CARLYLE, French Revolution. Pt. I, bk. 2, ch. 7.

⁵ Society is infested by persons who, seeing that the sentiments please, counterfeit the expression of them. These we call sentimentalists,—talkers who mistake the description for the thing, saying for having.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims.

⁶ Sentimentalists are they who seek to enjoy without incurring the Immense Debtorship for a thing done.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Richard Feverel. Ch. 24.

The sentimental people fiddle harmonics on the string of sensualism.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways.

Ch. 1. The word "sentimental" is said to have been used for the first time in a letter written in 1740 by Laurence Sterne.

⁷ Sentimentality is the error of supposing that quarter can be given or taken in moral conflicts.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

⁸ I sit with my toes in a brook,
And if any one axes forwhy?
I hits them a rap with my crook,
For 'tis sentiment does it, says I.

The star of the unconquered will,
He rises in my breast,
Serene, and resolute, and still,
And calm, and self-possessed.
LONGFELLOW, The Light of Stars. St. 7.
- 7
There is in stillness oft a magic power
To calm the breast when struggling passions lower;
Touched by its influence, in the soul arise
Diviner feelings, kindred with the skies.
JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, Solitude.
Serene yet strong, majestic yet sedate,
Swift without violence, without terror great.

SERPENT

- I—Serpent: Definitions and Apothegms
- 12
Think'st thou there are no serpents in the world
But those that slide along the grassy sod,
And sting the luckless foot that presses them?
There are who in the path of social life
Do bask their spotted skins in Fortune's sun,
And sting the soul.
JOANNA BAILLIE, De Montfort. Act i, sc. 2.
Vipers, that creep where man disdains to climb,
And, having wound their loathsome track to the top
Of this huge, mouldering monument of Rome,
Hang hissing at the nobler man below.
GEORGE CROLY, Catiline's Reply to the Charges of Cicero.
- 13
Man spurns the worm, but pauses ere he wake
The slumbering venom of the folded snake:
The first may turn—but not avenge the blow;
The last expires—but leaves no living foe.
BYRON, The Corsair. Canto i, st. 11.
- 14
Now the serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field.
Old Testament: Genesis, iii, 1.
Some flow'rets of Eden ye still inherit,
But the trail of the Serpent is over them all!
THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Paradise and the Peri, l. 206.
- 15
Johnson said that he could repeat a complete chapter of "The Natural History of Iceland" from the Danish of Horrebøw, the whole of which was exactly thus: "There are no snakes to be met with throughout the whole island."
BOSWELL, Life of Samuel Johnson, 1778. This is Chapter 72. But Chapter 42 is still shorter:
"There are no owls of any kind in the whole island."
- 17
Put a snake in your bosom, and it will sting
when it is warm.
JOHN KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, 61. (1721)
Every desire is a viper in the bosom, who, when he was chill, was harmless; but when warmth gave him strength, exerted it in poison.
SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 8 Dec., 1763.)

There was a snake that dwelt in Skye,
Over the misty sea, oh;
He lived upon nothing but gooseberry-ple,
For breakfast, dinner, and tea, oh!
HENRY JOHNSTONE, The Fastidious Serpent.

1 When you see a snake, never mind where he came from.

W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 872.

2 Where's my serpent of old Nile?

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, i, 5, 25.
Your serpent of Egypt is bred now of your mud by the operation of your sun: so is your crocodile.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, ii, 7, 29.
Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there,
That kills and pains not?

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, v, 2, 243.

3 It is the bright day that brings forth the adder;
And that craves wary walking.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 14.

4 We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd it:
She'll close and be herself, whilst our poor malice

Remains in danger of her former tooth.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 13.

What, wouldst thou have a serpent sting thee twice?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iv, 1, 69.

5 There the snake throws her enamell'd skin.

7 Away from here, lads; a chill snake lurks in the grass. (Frigidus, o pueri, fugite hinc, latet anguis in herba.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. ii, l. 93.

Beware from her that in thy bosom sleepeth;
Ware fro the serpent that so slyly creepeth
Under the grass, and stingeth subtilly.

CHAUCER, The Somnours Tale, l. 1993. (c. 1386)

There's a snake in the grass. (Anguis sub viridi herba.)

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of a King.

But the serpent lurked under the grass, and under sugared speech was hid pestiferous poison.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicles, 236. (1548)

Take heed of the snake in the grass, or the padd in the straw.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works. Vol. ii, p. 294. (1593)

There is a snake in the bush.

ANDREW YARROWTON, England's Improvement, p. 101.

Serpents lie where flowers grow.

8 If the snake could hear and the slow-worm could see,

Neither man nor beast should e'er go free.

UNKNOWN, Old Rhyme. (N. and Q., ii, l. 401.)

If I could hear as well as see,
No man in life could master me.

UNKNOWN. (PARSON, Sussex Dictionary, 14.)
It is a country superstition that the marks on the adder's belly form these words.

II—Serpent: The Viper and the Cappadocian

9 An evil viper once bit a Cappadocian, but it died itself, having tasted the venomous blood. (Κακράδωνος ὄφις ἔχιδνα κακὴ δάειν· ἀλλὰ καὶ αὐτὴ κάθαιρε, γενομένη αἵματος ἐσθίου.)

DEMODOCUS OF LEROE. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, epig. 237.) The Latin form is: "Viperam Cappadocem nocitura momordit; et illa gustato peritit sanguine Cappadocis."

Yesterday near Charenton, a snake bit Jean Fréron. What do you think happened? It was the serpent that died.

(Hier auprès de Charenton,
Un serpent mordit Jean Fréron.

Que croyez-vous qu'il arriva?

Ce fut le serpent qui creva.)

VOLTAIRE, Imitation of Demodocus. (Œuvres Complètes, iii, 1002.) Attributed also to Piron. There are various other French versions of this epigram. (See Notes and Queries, 30 March, 1907.)

10 While Fell was reposing himself in the hay,
A reptile concealed bit his leg as he lay;
But, all venom himself, of the wound he made light,

And got well, while the scorpion died of the bite.

LESSING, Paraphrase of Demodocus.

The dog, to gain his private ends,

Went mad, and bit the man. . . .

The man recovered of the bite,

The dog it was that died.

GOLDSMITH, Elegy on the Death of a Mad Dog.

11 A serpent, which is touched with human saliva, perishes, and even commits suicide by biting itself.

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, l. 640.

All men carry about them that which is poison to serpents: for if it be true that is reported, they will no better abide the touching with man's spittle than scalding water cast upon them: but if it happen to light within their chawes or mouth, especially if it come from a man that is fasting, it is present death.

PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. vii, ch. 2. (Holland, tr.)

SERVANT

I—Serrant: Apothegms

12 His lordship may compel us to be equal upstairs but there will never be equality in the servants' hall.

J. M. BAKER, The Admirable Crichton. Act i.

¹ Maidservants, I hear people complaining, are getting instructed in the "ologies."

CARLYLE, Inaugural Address at Edinburgh.

² Do not rashly give credence to a wife complaining of servants. (Nil temere uxori de servis crede-querenti.)

DIONYSIUS CATO (?), Disticha de Moribus. Bk. i, No. 8.

³ In all the necessities of life there is not a greater plague than servants.

COLLEY CIBBER, She Would and She Would Not. Act i, sc. 1.

⁴ He should be faithful, ugly, and fierce. (Ut sit fidelis, ut sit deformis, ut sit ferox.)

ERASMUS, Convivium Poeticum. Giving the three qualifications of a good servant.

The face of a pig, the ears of an ass, the feet of a stag, a padlock on his mouth, and a sword at his side.

CHRISTOPHER JOHNSON, The Trusty Servant. (c. 1560)

Never in the way and never out of the way.

CHARLES II, referring to Sidney Godolphin; a phrase afterwards used to describe a good valet. (MACAULAY, History of England. Vol. 1, p. 265.)

Servants should put on patience when they put on a livery.

He can give little to his servant that licks his knife.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

⁷ No surly porter stands in guilty state
To spurn imploring famine from the gate.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 105.

A pampered menial drove me from the door,
To seek a shelter in an humbler shed.

THOMAS MOSS, The Beggar's Petition. "Pampered menial" is Oliver Goldsmith's. Moss submitted his poem to Goldsmith before it was published, and the latter substituted "pampered menial" for the original's more commonplace "livered servant."

A great man's overied great man, what the Scotch call Flunkiey.

CARLYLE, Essays: Samuel Johnson.

⁸ A servant that is diligent, honest and good
Must sing at his work like a bird in the wood.

ROBERT GRAYNE, Works. Vol. vii, p. 311. (1590)

⁹ Empty chambers make foolish maids.

¹³ Is thy servant a dog, that he should do this great thing?

Old Testament: II Kings, viii, 13. Quoted by Sydney Smith when advised to have his portrait painted by Landseer.

¹⁴ We are unprofitable servants: we have done that which was our duty to do.

New Testament: Luke, xvii, 10.

¹⁵ A faithful and good servant is a real godsend, but truly 'tis a rare bird in the land.

LUTHER, Table Talk. Sec. clvi. Paraphrasing Juvenal, vi, 165. See under SWAN.

¹⁶ He that is greatest among you shall be your servant.

New Testament: Matthew, xxiii, 11.

¹⁷ Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things.

New Testament: Matthew, xxv, 21.

O good old man, how well in thee appears
The constant service of the antique world,
When service sweat for duty, not for mead!
Thou art not for the fashion of these times,
Where none will sweat but for promotion,
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 56.

¹⁸ Nor let too pretty a maid-servant wait upon

you. (Nec minium vobis formosa ancilla ministrat.)

OWEN, Art Amatoris. Bk. III, l. 665.

Let thy maldservant be faithful, strong and homely.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1736.

1 So many servants, so many enemies. (Totidem hostes esse quot servos.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliū. Epis. xvii, sec. 5. Quoted as a proverb.

2 Every good servant does not all commands: No bond but to do just ones.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 1, l. 6.

3 You gentlemen's gentlemen are so hasty.

SHREWMAN, The Rivals. Act II, sc. 2. Referring to a valet.

4 When you have done a fault be always pert and insolent, and behave yourself as if you were the injured person.

TENNYSON, Gareth and Lynette, l. 469.

6 A baker's wife may bite of a bun,
A brewer's wife may drink of a tun,
A fish-monger's wife may feed of a cunger,
But a servingman's wife may starve for hunger.

UNKNOWN, Servingman's Comfort. (Inedited Tracts, 166. 1598)

II—Servant and Master

7 If you would have good servants, see that you be good masters.

RICHARD BAXTER, Works. Vol. iv, p. 290.

8 The truest report comes from a man's servants. (Verior fama e domesticis emanat.)

CICERO, De Petitione Consulatus. Sec. 6. Adapted. Quoted in this form by Francis Bacon.

The highest panegyric . . . that private virtue can receive is the praise of servants.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 68.

Few men have been admired by their servants. (Peu d'hommes ont été admiré par leurs domestiques.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. III, ch. 2.

SERVICE

I—Service: Definitions

19 We are his,
To serve him nobly in the common cause,
True to the death, but not to be his slaves.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 343. Referring to the King.

20 Command was service; humblest service done
By willing and discerning souls was glory.

GEORGE ELIOT, Agatha.

21 When I have attempted to join myself to others by services, it proved an intellectual trick,—no more. They eat your service like apples, and leave you out. But love them, and they feel you, and delight in you all the time.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Of Gifts.

Serve and thou shalt be served. If you love and serve men, you cannot, by any hiding or stratagem, escape the remuneration.

6 It did me yeoman's service.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 36.

7 Alas and alas! you may take it how you will,
but the services of no single individual are indispensable. Atlas was just a gentleman with a protracted nightmare!
R. L. STEVENSON, An Apology for Idlers.

8 Enough, if something from our hands have power
To live, and act, and serve the future hour.
WORDSWORTH, After-Thought.

9 Small service is true service while it lasts:
Of humblest Friends, bright Creature! scorn not one:
The Daisy, by the shadow that it casts,
Protects the lingering dew-drop from the Sun.
WORDSWORTH, To a Child.

II—Service to God

10 All service is the same with God,
With God, whose puppets, best and worst,
Are we: there is no last nor first.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes. Pt. iv.

Our voluntary service He requires,
Not our necessitated.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 529.

They serve God well, Who serve his creatures.
CAROLINE NORTON, The Lady of La Garaye: Conclusion. l. 9.

11 God curse Moswiyah. If I had served God as well as I have served him, He would never have damned me to all eternity.

SWAMINRA, to the Governor of BARR, when deposed by the Caliph in 675. (See OCKLEY, History of Saracens. Hegira 54, A. D. 673.)

Had I but written as many odes in praise of Muhammad and Ali as I have composed for King Mahmud, they would have showered a hundred blessings on me.

ABUL KASIM FIRDIUSI, The Shahnamah. (c. 1000)

12 Had I but served God as diligently as I have served my king, he would not have given me over in my grey hairs. But this is the just reward that I must receive for my indulgent pains and study, not regarding my service to God, but only to my prince.

CARDINAL WOLSEY, to Sir William Kingston, Constable of the Tower, at Leicester Abbey, 5 Nov., 1530. Wolsey, accused of high treason, was being conducted to London, but was overtaken by illness on the road, stopped at Leicester, and died there. (HUME, History of England. Ch. 30.)

Had I but served my God with half the zeal I served my king, he would not in mine age have left me naked to mine enemies.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 455. (1612)

13 Had I served God as well in every part
As I did serve my king and master still,
My scope had not this season been so short,
Nor would have had the power to do me ill.
THOMAS CECURCHYARD, Death of Morton. (1593)

² Full little knowest thou that hast not tried,
What hell it is, in suing long to bide:
To lose good days, that might be better spent;
To waste long nights in pensive discontent;
To speed today, to be put back tomorrow;
To feed on hope, to pine with fear and sorrow; . . .

To fret thy soul with crosses and with cares;
To eat thy heart through comfortless despair;

To fawn, to crouch, to wait, to ride, to run,
To spend, to give, to want, to be undone.

CHAUCER, The Shipman's Tale, l. 9.

Come like shadows, so depart!

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 111.

8 Oh for a lodge in some vast wilderness, Some boundless contiguity of shade.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 1.

The unpierc'd shade.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 245.

Or ruminate in the contiguous shade.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 86.

Chequer'd shadow,

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 15.

9 Shadows are not enough.

ELLEN GLASGOW, The Sheltered Life, p. 36.

10 A hunter of shadows, himself a shade. (Τὸν αὐτὸς κατέπεφεν ἐν σκωτάτοις ὄρεσσιν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 574. Referring to Orion.

We all laugh at pursuing a shadow, though the lives of the multitude are devoted to the chase.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, See also under GHOST.

11 On yon bare knoll the pointed cedar shadows Drowse on the crisp, gray moss.

J. R. LOWELL, An Indian Summer Reverie.

12 Follow a shadow, it still flies you; Seem to fly it, it will pursue.

BEN JONSON, Song: That Women Are But Men's Shadows. See also under WOOING.

13 Shall the shadow go forward ten degrees, or go back ten degrees? And Hezekiah answered, It is a light thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees: nay, but let the shadow return backward ten degrees.

Old Testament: II Kings, xx, 9, 10.

Like Hezekiah's, backward runs

The shadow of my days.

TENNYSON, Will Waterproof's Lyrical Monologue. St. 5. The original version, altered in 1853 ed. to: "Against its fountain upward runs The current of my days."

14 To fight with a shadow (whether one's own or another's) passeth for the proverbial expression of a vain and useless act.

THOMAS FULLER, History of Cambridge University, 592. (1659)

Alas! must it ever be so?

Do we stand in our own light, wherever we go, And fight our own shadows forever?

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. ii, canto 2, st. 5.

15 Syene, and where the shadow both way falls, Meroë, Nilotic isle.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iv, l. 70.

16 Every light has its shadow.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 349

Thus shadow owes its birth to light.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Persian, the Sun, and the Cloud, l. 10.

17 Some there be that shadows kiss;

Such have but a shadow's bliss.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, ii, 9, 66.

The best in this kind are but shadows.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.

Act v, sc. 1, l. 213.

18 Shadows to-night

Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard

Than can the substance of ten thousand soldiers.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 3, l. 216.

SHELLEY, Hymn to Intellectual Beauty, l. 1.

² For this I see, that we, all we that live, Are but vain shadows, unsubstantial dreams. (Εἰδὼλ' ὁρώμεθα [ἄνευ ἡ κοῦφον οὐσίαν.]

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 126. (Plumptre, tr.)

Behold! human beings living in a sort of underground den . . . they see only their own shadows, or the shadows of one another, which the fire throws on the opposite wall of the cave.

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. vii, sec. 514.

We are but dust and shadow. (Pulvis et umbra sumus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 7, l. 16.

³ The Shadow cloak'd from head to foot, Who keeps the keys of all the creeds.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xxiii, sts. 1, 2.

⁴ The longer shadows fall from the lofty mountains. (Majoresque cadunt altis de montibus umbræ.)

VERGIL, Eclagues. No. i, l. 84.

⁵ The setting sun doubles the lengthening shadows. (Sol crescentis decedens duplicat umbræ.)

VERGIL, Eclagues. No. lii, l. 67.

When the sun sets, shadows, that showed at noon

But small, appear most long and terrible.

NATHANIEL LEE, Edipus.

And now his shadow reach'd her as she run, His shadow lengthen'd by the setting sun.

POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 193.

But why lament the common lot

That all must share so soon;

Since shadows lengthen with the day,

That scarce exist at noon?

MRS. ALARIC A. WAITS, Requiem of Youth.

⁶ That shadow my likeness that goes to and fro seeking a livelihood, chattering, chaffering,

How often I find myself standing and looking at it where it sits,

How often I question and doubt whether that is really me.

WALT WHITMAN, That Shadow My Likeness.

⁷ Again the shadow moveth o'er

The dial-plate of time!

J. G. WHITTIER, The New Year, l. 3.

SHAKESPEARE

This was Shakespeare's form;
Who walked in every path of human life,

SHAKESPEARE

Felt every passion, and to all mankind Doth now, will ever, that experience yield Which his own genius only could acquire.

MARK AKENSIDE, For a Statue of Shakespeare.

⁸ Bonnet in hand, obsequious and discreet, The butcher that served Shakespeare with his meat

Doubtless esteemed him little, as a man Who knew not how the market prices ran.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Points of View.

¹⁰ Others abide our question. Thou art free. We ask and ask; Thou smilest and art still, Out-topping knowledge.

E. B. BROWNING, A Vision of Poets, l. 298.

¹⁴ As I declare our Poet, him Whose insight makes all others dim. A thousand poets pried at life And only one amid the strife Rose to be Shakespeare.

ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas-Eve. Sec. 16.

Shakespeare!—to such names sounding, what succeeds

Fifty as silence?

ROBERT BROWNING, The Names.

¹⁵ Shake was a dramatist of note; He lived by writing things to quote.

H. C. BUNNIE, Shake, Mullaery and Go-e-the.

¹⁶ How often in the summer-tide, His graver business set aside, Has stripling Will, the thoughtful-eyed, As to the pipe of Pan, Stepped blithesomely with lover's pride Across the fields to Anne.

RICHARD BURTON, Across the Fields to Anne.

But were it to my fancy given To rate her charms, I'd call them heaven; For though a mortal made of clay, Angels must love Anne Hathaway; She hath a way so to control, To rapture the imprisoned soul, And sweetest heaven on earth display,

That to be heaven Anne hath a way;
She hath a way,
Anne Hathaway.—

To be heaven's self Anne hath a way.

CHARLES DIBDIN, A Love Dittie. In his novel Hannah Hewitt. (1795) Anne Hathaway was the maiden name of Shakespeare's wife. These verses have often been attributed to Shakespeare, and a biting irony read into them.

CAMPBELL, Pleasures of Hope. Pt. 1, l. 472.

² If I say that Shakespeare is the greatest of intellects, I have said all concerning him. But there is more in Shakespeare's intellect than we have yet seen. It is what I call an unconscious intellect; there is more virtue in it than he himself is aware of.

CARLYLE, Essays: Characteristics of Shakespeare.

³ Happy in tragic and in comic powers,
Have we not Shakspeare?—is not Jonson ours?
For them, your natural judges, Britons, vote;
They'll judge like Britons, who like Britons wrote.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 223.

Things of the noblest kind his genius drew,
And look'd through Nature at a single view:
A loose he gave to his unbounded soul,
And taught new lands to rise, new seas to roll;
Call'd into being scenes unknown before,
And passing Nature's bounds, was something more.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 264.

⁴ Our myriad-minded Shakespeare—ἄνθρωπος μυρία νοῦς, a phrase which I have borrowed from a Greek monk, who applies it to a Patriarch of Constantinople. It seems to belong to Shakespeare, de jure singulari, et ex privilegio nature.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 15.

Shakespeare is of no age.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk.

⁵ His want of erudition was a most happy and productive ignorance; it forced him back upon his own resources, which were exhaustless.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. 1, No. 198.

⁶ The making of Shakespeare's mind was like the making of the world.

WILLIAM JOHNSON CONY. (M. E. COLERIDGE, Gathered Leaves, p. 323.)

⁷ Shakespeare, thou hadst as smooth a comic vein,

Fitting the sock, and in thy natural brain,
As strong conception, and as clear a rage,
As any one that traffick'd with the stage.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Elegy to Henry Reynolds. (1627)

⁸ Shakspear, who (taught by none) did first impart

To Fletcher wit, to labouring Jonson art;
He, Monarch-like, gave those his subjects law,

And is that Nature which they paint and draw.
DRYDEN, Prologue to His Version of The Tempest, l. 5.

But Shakspear's magic could not copied be;
Within that circle none durst walk but he.

DRYDEN, Prologue to His Version of The Tempest, l. 19.

Heav'n, that but once was prodigal before,
To Shakspear gave as much; she could not give him more.

DRYDEN, To Mr. Congreve, l. 62.

⁹ When Shakspeare is charged with debts to his authors, Landor replies: "Yet he was more original than his originals. He breathed upon dead bodies and brought them into life."

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality.

The passages of Shakspeare that we most prize were never quoted until within this century.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality.

¹⁰ It is difficult not to be intemperate in speaking of Shakspeare. . . . If the world were on trial, it is the perfect success of this one man that might justify such expenditure of geology, chemistry, fauna, and flora, as the world was. And, I suppose, if Intellect perceives and converses "in climes beyond the solar road," they probably call this planet, not Earth, but Shakspeare.

EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

Shakspeare's fault that the world appears so empty. He has educated you with his painted world, and this real one seems a buckster's shop.

EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

¹¹ Nor sequent centuries could hit
Orbit and sum of Shakspeare's wit.

EMERSON, Solution, l. 39.

I see all human wits
Are measured by a few;
Unmeasured still my Shakspeare sits,
Lone as the blessed Jew.

EMERSON, Quatrains: Shakspeare.

What point of morals, of manners, of economy, of philosophy, of religion, of taste, of the conduct of life, has he not settled? What mystery has he not signified his knowledge of? What office, or function, or district of man's work, had he not remembered? What king has he not taught state, as Talma taught Napoleon? What maiden has not found him finer than her delicacy? What lover has he not outloved? What sage has he not outseen? What gentleman has he not instructed in the rudeness of his behavior?

EMERSON, Representative Men: Shakspeare.

Shakespeare's principal merit may be conveyed in saying that he of all men best understands the English language, and can say what he will.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL, Shakespeare.

⁶ The stream of Time, which is continually washing the dissoluble fabrics of other poets, passes without injury by the adamant of Shakespeare.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Preface to the Works of Shakespeare.

When Learning's triumph o'er her barbarous foes
First rear'd the stage, immortal Shakespeare rose;
Each change of many-colour'd life he drew,
Exhausted worlds, and then imagin'd new;
Existence saw him spurn her bounded reign,
And panting Time toll'd after him in vain.
His powerful strokes presiding Truth impress'd,
And unresist'd Passion storm'd the breast.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Prologue at the Opening of Drury Lane Theatre, l. 1.

Cornell is to Shakespeare as a clipped hedge to a forest.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 160.

⁷ This Figure, that thou here seest put,
It was for gentle Shakespeare cut;

Wherein the Graver had a strife

With Nature, to out-doo the life:

O, could he but have drawn his wit

As well in brasse, as he hath hit

His face; the Print would then surpass

All, that was ever writ in brasse.

But, since he cannot, Reader, looke

Not on his Picture, but his Booke.

BEN JONSON, To the Reader. These verses were printed facing the portrait of Shakespeare prefixed as a frontispiece to the first folio edition of his works, 1623.

⁸ Soul of the Age!

The applause! delight! the wonder of our stage!

My Shakespeare, rise; I will not lodge thee by Chaucer, or Spenser, or bid Beaumont lie

A little further, to make thee a room:

Thou art a monument, without a tomb,

And art alive still, while thy book doth live

And we have wits to read, and praise to give.

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of My Beloved Master, William Shakespeare, and What He Hath Left Us, l. 17. Printed on the fifth preliminary leaf to the first folio, 1623.

And though thou hadst small Latin, and less Greek,

From thence to honour thee, I would not seek

For names.

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakespeare, l. 31.

Triumph, my Britain, thou hast one to show,

To whom all scenes of Europe homage owe.

He was not of an age, but for all time!

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakespeare, l. 41.

Nature herself was proud of his designs,
And joy'd to wear the dressing of his lines!

Which were so richly spun, and woven so fit,

As, since, she will vouchsafe no other wit.

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakespeare, l. 47.

Yet must I not give Nature all: thy Art,
My gentle Shakespeare, must enjoy a part.

For though the poet's matter Nature be,

His art doth give the fashion.

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakespeare, l. 55.

For a good poet's made, as well as born,
And such wert thou. Look how the father's face

Lives in his issue; even so, the race

Of Shakespeare's mind and manners brightly shines

In his well-turned and true fil'd lines:

In each of which he seems to shake a lance,

As brandish'd at the eyes of ignorance.

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakespeare, l. 64.

Sweet Swan of Avon! what a sight it were

To see thee in our waters yet appear.

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakespeare,
l. 71.

Shakespeare, at length thy pious fellows give
The world thy works: thy works, by which out-
live

Thy tomb, thy name must: when that stone is rent,
And Time dissolves thy Stratford monument,
Here we alive shall view thee still. This book,
When brass and marble fade, shall make thee look

Fresh to all ages.

LEONARD DIGGES, To the Memory of the Deceased Author Maister, W. Shakespeare.
Eighth preliminary leaf to first folio, 1623.

His days are done, that made the dainty plays,
Which made the Globe of heav'n and earth to ring.

HUGH HOLLAND, Upon the Lines and Life of the Famous Sceniche Poet, Master William Shakespeare. Sixth preliminary leaf to the first folio, 1623.

We wonder'd (Shakespeare) that thou went'st so soon

From the World's-Stage, to the Grave's-Tyringroom.

We thought thee dead, but this thy printed worth,
Tells thy spectators, that thou went'st but forth
To enter with applause. An actor's art,
Can die, and live, to act a second part.

JAMES MAWZ [?], *To the Memory of W.
Shakespeare*. Eighth preliminary leaf to the first folio, 1623.

I remember, the players have often mentioned it as an honour to Shakespeare, that in his writing (whatsoever he penn'd) he never blotted out a line. My answer hath been, would he had blotted a thousand.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: De Shakespeare Nostrat.

Shakespeare is not our poet, but the world's,— Therefore on him no speech!

W. S. LANDOR, To Robert Browning.

The great poet who foreruns the ages,
Anticipating all that shall be said!

LONGFELLOW, Sonnet on Mrs. Kemble's Readings from Shakespeare.

Now you who rhyme, and I who rhyme,
Have not we sworn it, many a time,
That we no more our verse would scrawl,
For Shakespeare he had said it all!

R. W. GLDER, The Modern Rhymer.

Then to the well-trod stage anon,
If Jonson's learned sock be on,
Or sweetest Shakespear, fancy's child,
Warble his native wood-notes wild.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 131.

What needs my Shakespear for his honour'd bones,
The labour of an age in piled stones,
Or that his hallow'd reliques should be hid

Under a star-pointing pyramid?

Dear son of memory, great heir of Fame,
What need'st thou such weak witnesses of thy name?

Thou in our wonder and astonishment
Hast built thyself a live-long monument, . . .
And so sepulch'r'd in such pomp dost lie,
That kings for such a tomb would wish to die.

MILTON, On Shakespeare. (1630)

And one wild Shakespeare, following Nature's lights,

Is worth whole planets, fill'd with Stagyrates.
THOMAS MOORE, The Sceptic, l. 121.

Hour after hour he loved to pore
On Shakespeare's rich and varied lore.

Scott, Rokeby. Canto 1, st. 24.

With the single exception of Homer, there is no eminent writer, not even Sir Walter Scott, whom I despise so entirely as I despise Shakespeare when I measure my mind against his.
... It would positively be a relief to me to dig him up and throw stones at him.

BERNARD SEAW, Dramatic Opinions and Essays. Vol. v, p. 2.

And he the man, whom Nature self had made
To mock her self, and Truth to imitate,
With kindly counter under Mimic shade,
Our pleasant Willy, ah! is dead of late;
With whom all joy and jolly merriment
Is also dead, and in colour drent.

Blese be ye man yt spares thes stones.
And curst be he yt moves my bones.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph, on Shakespeare's tombstone in Stratford Church. Said to have been chosen by him, but not from his pen. The lines are rudely engraved in capital letters on the stone slab which covers his body, the last line an evident imitation of the damnation clause so frequent in Roman sepulchral inscriptions.

¹¹ Stay Passenger, why goest thou hy so fast?
Read if thou canst, whom envious Death hath plast,

With in this monument Shakspeare: with

There is hope of salvation where shame reproaches a man. (Spes est salutis ubi hominem objurgat pudor.)

PETRELLIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 633.

Where there is yet shame, there may in time be virtue.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. x, p. 319.

Shame, when once 'tis gone, knows no return. (Et qui redire cum perit nescit pudor.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 113.

Past shame once, and past all amendment.

JOHN REDFORD, Wit and Science, 840. (c. 1530)

Past shame, past grace.

JOHN RAY, Changes of World, 214. (1692)

Shame leaves us by degrees.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Complaint of Rosamond. St. 64.

Shame hath a bastard fame, well managed;

Its deeds are doubled with an evil word.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iii, 2, 19.

O shame! where is thy blush? Rebellious hell,
If thou canst mutine in a matron's bones,

To flaming youth let virtue be as wax,

And melt in her own fire: proclaim no shame

When the compulsive ardour gives the charge,

Since frost itself as actively doth burn,

And reason panders will.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 82.

All is confounded, all!
Reproach and everlasting shame
Sits mocking in our plumes.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 3.

1 Makest thou this shame thy pastime?

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 5.

Must I hold a candle to my shames?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice Act ii,
sc. 6, l. 41.

2 He was not burn to shame:

Upon his brow shame is ashamed to sit.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 2,
l. 91.

Shame and dishonour sit

By his grave ever;

Blessing shall hallow it,—

Never, O never!

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto iii, st. 11.

3 We live in an atmosphere of shame. We are ashamed of everything that is real about us; ashamed of ourselves, of our relatives, of our incomes, of our accents, of our opinions, of our experience, just as we are ashamed of our naked skins.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act i.

4 In shame there is no comfort, but to be beyond all bounds of shame.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. ii.

5 The most curious offspring of shame is shyness.

SYDNEY SMITH, Lecture on the Evil Affections.

As sheepish as a fox captured by a fowl. (Monteux comme un renard qu'une poule aurait pris.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. I, fab. 18.

6 Shame is shame, whether thou think'st or not.

STOBÆUS, Florilegium. Pt. v, l. 82.

7 He is without sense of shame or glory, as some men are without the sense of smelling.

SWIFT, Character of Lord Wharton.

8 I never wonder to see men wicked, but I often wonder not to see them ashamed.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

9 They say sin touches not a man so near
As shame a woman; yet he too should be Part of the penance, being more deep than she Set in the sin.

SWINBURNE, Tristram of Lyonesse: The Sailing of the Swallow. l. 360.

Shame, that stings sharpest of the worms in hell.

SWINBURNE, Marino Faliero. Act ii, sc. 1.

10 Shame is the eldest daughter of uncleanness.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living. Ch. ii, sec. 3.

11 Deep in his heart boils overwhelming shame.
(Æstuat ingens ira in corde pudor.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. x, l. 870.

12 I have known all evils; virtue can surmount them, but what generous heart can endure shame? (J'ai connu tous les maux, la vertu les surmonte; Mais quel cœur généreux peut supporter la honte?)

VOLTAIRE, Zulime. Act i, sc. 5.

13 Shame followed shame—and woe supplanted
woe—

Is this the only change that time can show?

SHEEP AND SHEPHERD

I—Sheep: Apothegms

14 Till now I thought the proverb did but jest
Which said a black sheep is a biting beast.

THOMAS BASTARD, Chrestoleros. Bk. iv, ep. 20.
(1598)

The black sheep is a perilous beast.

UNKNOWN, Six Ballads. No. 4. (c. 1550)

Even now, now, very now, an old black ram

Is tupping your white ewe.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 1, l. 88.

15 Every sheep with its fellow. (Cada oveja con su pareja.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. See also BIRDS OR A FEATHER.

16 As soon goeth the young lambskin to the market as the old ewe's

JOHN HAYWARD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4.

As soon comes the lamb's skin to market as the auld tup's.

SCOTT, Bride of Lammermoor. Ch. 4.

17 The scab of one sheep, or the mange of one pig, destroys an entire herd. (Grex totus in agris Unius scabie cadit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 79.

One scabbed sheep infecteth all the fold.

HILLS, Common-place Book. p. 129. (c. 1530)

One sickly sheep infects the flock,

And poisons all the rest

ISAAC WATTS, Against Evil Company.

I am a tainted wether of the flock,

Meetest for death.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
iv, sc. 1, l. 114.

18 Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold;
them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold and one shepherd.

New Testament: John, x, 16.

There were ninety-and-nine that safely lay

In the shelter of the fold;

But one was out in the hills away,

Far off from the gates of gold,—

Away in the mountains wild and bare,
Away from the tender Shepherd's care.
ELIZABETH CLEPHANE, The Lost Sheep.

De massa ob de sheepfol',
Dat guards de sheepfol' bin,
Look out in de gloomerin' meadows,
Wha'r de long night rain begin—
So he call to de hirelin' shepa'd,
"Is my sheep, is dey all come in?—
My sheep, is dey all come in?"
SARAH P. MCLEAN GREENL, De Sheepfol'.

1
As sheep that have not a shepherd.
Old Testament: 1 Kings, xxii, 17.

2
And before him shall be gathered all nations:
and he shall separate them one from another,
as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats.

New Testament: Matthew, xxv, 32.

3
The mountain sheep are sweeter,
But the valley sheep are fatter;
We therefore deemed it meet
To carry off the latter.

T. L. PENTOCK, War Song of Dinas Vawr.
(Misfortunes of Elphin. Ch. 11.)

4
It is the nature of sheep always to follow the first, wheresoever it goes; which makes Aristotle, lib. 9, de Hist. Animal. mark them for the most silly and foolish animals in the world

RADELAIS, Works, Bk iv, ch. 8.

One sheep follows another.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

One sheep will leap the ditch when another goes first.

SCOTT, Old Mortality. Ch. 36.

Sheep follow sheep.

The Talmud. Sec. 62.

5
As good be hanged for a sheep as a lamb.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. See also under HANGING.

6
Then will he look as fierce as a Cotswold lion.

NICHOLAS UDALL, Ralph Roister Doister. Act
iv, sc. 6 (1566). See also under LION.

7
Little Bo-peep has lost her sheep,
And can't tell where to find them;
Leave them alone, and they'll come home,
Wagging their tails behind them.
UNKNOWN, Bo-peep.

II—Sheep and Wolf

8
It is hard to have wolf full and wether whole.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv, l. 1373.

9
The death of the wolf is the health of the sheep.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruits. Fo. 31.

10
The dust raised by the sheep does not choke
the wolf.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4491.

11
He that will be made a sheep shall find wolves enough.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works. Vol. ii, p. 38. Quoted
as a proverb.

He that makes himself a sheep shall be eat by the wolf!

GEORGE HERBERT, Jocula Prudentum.

Make yourselves sheep and the wolves will eat
you.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard. Quoted as an Italian proverb.

He that makes himself a sheep will find that the wolves are not all dead.

C. H. SEARGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 4.

12
He that will needs be a sheep, cannot greatly grudge to be bitten with a fox.

BRIAN MELBRANCE, Philotinus. Sig. Bb4.
(1583)

He that will make himself a sheep, it is no matter though the wolves do eat him.

BARNABE RICH, Irish Habbub, 4. (1619)

13
It is a foolish sheep that makes the wolf his confessor.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 23.

14
You have entrusted the sheep to the wolf.
(Lupu ovem commissisti.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 832. (Act v, sc. 1.)

III—Shepherd

15
Sooth 't were a pleasant life to lead,
With nothing in the world to do
But just to blow a shepherd's reed,
The silent season thro',
And just to drive a flock to feed,—
Sheep—quiet, fond and few!

LAMAN BLANCHARD, Dolce far Niente. St. 1.

16
In summer's heat, and winter's cold,
He fed his flock, and penn'd the fold.

JOHN GAY, Fables: Introduction.

17
For kings have often fears when they do sup,
Where shepherds dread no poison in their cup.
ROBERT GREENE, The Shepherd's Wife's Song.

The shepherd's homely curds,
His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle,
His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade,
All which secure and sweetly he enjoys,
Is far beyond a prince's delicates,
His viands sparkling in a golden cup,
His body couched in a curious bed,
When care, mistrust, and treason waits on him.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 47.

18
My name is Norval; on the Grampian hills
My father feeds his flocks; a frugal swain,

Whose constant cares were to increase his store,
And keep his only son, myself, at home.

JOHN HOME, Douglas. Act ii, sc. 1.

And every shepherd tells his tale
Under the hawthorn in the dale.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 67. "Tells his tale": i. e., counts his sheep.

Sleepest or wakest thou, jolly shepherd?
Thy sheep be in the corn;

And for one blast of thy minikin mouth,
Thy sheep shall take no harm.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 42.

My flocks feed not,
My ewes breed not,
My rams speed not,
All is amiss.

SHAKESPEARE (?), The Passionate Pilgrim, l. 245.

SHELLEY, PERCY BYSSHE

In his poetry, as well as in his life, Shelley was indeed "a beautiful and ineffectual angel, beating in the void his luminous wings in vain."

ARNOLD, Literature and Dogma: Shelley.

Ah, did you once see Shelley plain,
And did he stop and speak to you,
And did you speak to him again?

How strange it seems and new!
ROBERT BROWNING, Memorabilia.

For they who shrank from his mad human ache
Call him high Shelley now and praise his wake.

ALFRED KREYMBORG, A Man Whom Men Deplore.

Knight-errant of the Never-ending Quest,
And Minstrel of the Unfulfilled Desire;
For ever tuning thy frail earthly lyre
To some unearthly music.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Shelley.

Shelley, lyric lord of England's lordliest singers,
here first heard

Ring from lips of poets crowned and dead the Promethean word

Whence his soul took fire, and power to out-soar the sunward-soaring bird.

A. C. SWINBURNE, Elton: An Ode.

'Tis no mean fortune to have heard
A singer who, if errors blurred
His sight, had yet a spirit stirred
By vast desire,

And ardour fledging the swift word
With plumes of fire.

WILLIAM WATSON, Shelley's Centenary.

All the rapturous heart of things
Thrubs through his own.

WILLIAM WATSON, Shelley's Centenary.

Shelley, the hectic, flamelike rose of verse,
All colour, and all odour, and all bloom,
Steeped in the moonlight, glutted with the sun,
But somewhat lacking root in homely earth.

WILLIAM WATSON, To Edward Dowden, l. 46.

SHERIDAN, RICHARD BRINSLEY

Good at a fight, but better at a play;
Godlike in giving, but the devil to pay.

BYRON, On a Cast of Sheridan's Hand.

The flash of Wit, the bright Intelligence,
The beam of Song, the blaze of Eloquence,
Set with their Sun, but still have left behind
The enduring produce of immortal Mind;
Fruits of a genial morn, and glorious noon,
A deathless part of him who died too soon.

BYRON, On the Death of Sheridan, l. 27.

The matchless dialogue, the deathless wit,
Which knew not what it was to intermit;
The glowing portraits, fresh from life, that bring Home to our hearts the truth from which they spring;

These wondrous beings of his Fancy, wrought
To fulness by the fiat of his thought. . . .
Long shall we seek his likeness—long in vain,
And turn to all of him which may remain,
Sighing that Nature form'd but one such man,
And broke the die—in moulding Sheridan.

BYRON, On the Death of Sheridan, l. 49.

Whose mind was an essence, compounded with art

From the finest and best of all other men's powers:—

Who rul'd, like a wizard, the world of the
heart,

And could call up its sunshine, or bring down its show'rs:—

Whose humour, as gay as the fire-fly's light,
Play'd round every subject, and shone as it play'd:—

Whose wit, in the combat, as gentle as bright, Ne'er carried a heart-stain away on its blade.

22. (1840)

Yet never ship upon the sea
Bears blessed merchandise for me.
JOHN DRINKWATER, Vigil.

If all the ships I have at sea
Should come a-sailing home to me,
Ah, well! the harbor would not hold
So many ships as there would be
If all my ships came home from sea.
ELIA WHIZZLER WILCOX, My Ships.

The true ship is the ship builder.
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Of History.

A great ship asks deep waters.

HERODAS, Sententiae, vi, 12.

Therefore the sinner and the saint
Are often in the selfsame boat.

EDWARD WARD, Nuptial Dialogues, Pt. II, l. 360.

Women are jealous of ships. They always suspect the sea. They know they're three of a kind when it comes to a man.

EDMUND O'NEILL, Mourning Becomes Electra,
Act i.

Ships, young ships,
I do not wonder men see you as women—
You in the white length of your loveliness
Reclining on the sea!

SALLY BRUCE KINSOLVING, Ships.

Who wishes to give himself an abundance of trouble, let him equip these two things, a ship and a woman. No two things involve more bother, for neither is ever sufficiently adorned.

PLAUTUS, Pamulus, l. 210. (Act i, sc. 2.)

A ship is ever in need of repairing.
JOHN TAYLOR, A Navy of Landships.

Let our barks across the pathless flood
Hold different courses.

SCOTT, Kenilworth, Ch. 29.

It would have been as though he were in a boat of stone with masts of steel, sails of lead, ropes of iron, the devil at the helm, the wrath of God for a breeze, and hell for his destination.

EMORY A. STORRS, Speech, Chicago, 1866, referring to President Johnson, who had threatened to use troops to compel Congress to adjourn.

Your ships are the wooden walls.

THUCYDIDES, interpreting an oracle received by the Athenians. (HERODOTUS, History, Bk. vii, sec. 143.)

The wooden wall alone shall remain unconquered. (τῆς ξύλινῃς ἀπείρου.)

The second reply of the Pythian oracle to the Athenians, 480 B.C. (HERODOTUS, History, Bk. vii, sec. 141.)

The credit of the Realm, by defending the same with Wooden Walls, as Themistocles called the Ships of Athens.

LUTHEROTEN, London: Preface.

There's not a ship that sails the ocean,
But every climate, every soil,
Must bring its tribute, great or small,
And help to build the wooden wall!

VERGIL, Aeneid, Bk. vi, l. 901.

One ship drives east and another drives west
With the self-same winds that blow,
'Tis the set of the sails and not the gales
Which tells us the way to go.

ELIA WHIZZLER WILCOX, Winds of Fate.

II—Ship: Description

But the ships, they carries me long, long ways,
An' draws far places near.
J. J. BELL, On the Quay.

She bears her down majestically near,
Speed on her prow, and terror in her tier.
BYRON, The Corsair, Canto iii, st. 15.

And ships were drifting with the dead
To shores where all was dumb!
THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Last Man, l. 19.

Ships that sailed for sunny isles,
But never came to shore.
THOMAS KIBBLE HERVEY, The Devil's Progress.

A capital ship for an ocean trip
Was "The Walloping Window-blind";
No gale that blew dismayed her crew
Or troubled the captain's mind.
CHARLES EDWARD CARRYL, The Walloping Window-blind. (From Davy and the Goblin, p. 89.)

Till next day, There she lay,
In the Bay of Biscay, O!
ANDREW CHERRY, The Bay of Biscay, O!

As ships, becalmed at eve, that lay
With canvas drooping, side by side,
Two towers of sail at dawn of day
Are scarce long leagues apart descried.
ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH, One Curlew From

All in the Downs the fleet was moored.
JOHN GAY, Sweet William's Farewell.

For she is such a smart little craft,
Such a neat little, sweet little craft—
Such a bright little, tight little—

Slight little, Light little,
Trim little, slim little craft!
W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act II.

¹ This is the ship of pearl, which, poets feign,
Sails the unshadowed main,—
The venturous bark that flings
On the sweet summer wind its purpled wings.
O. W. HOLMES, The Chambered Nautilus.

Of cruel war.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida: Prologue.

This new Katterfelto, his show to complete,
Means his boats should all sink as they pass
by our fleet;
Then as under the ocean their course they steer right on,
They can pepper their foes from the bed of old Triton.
HENRY KIRKE WHITE, The Wonderful Juggler.
(1803) An anticipation of the submarine.

³ There be triple ways to take, of the eagle or the snake,
Or the way of a man with a maid;
But the sweetest way to me is a ship's upon
the sea,
In the heel of the North-East Trade.
RUDYARD KIPLING, The Long Trail.

The Liner she's a lady, an' she never looks nor 'eeds—
The Man-o'-War's 'er 'usband, an' 'e gives 'er
all she needs;
But, oh, the little cargo-boats, that sail the wet seas roun',
They're just the same as you an' me a-plyin' up an' down!
RUDYARD KIPLING, The Liner She's a Lady.

Lord, Thou hast made this world below the shadow of a dream,
An', taught by time, I tak' it so—exceptin' always Steam.
From coupler-flange to spindle-guide I see Thy Hand, O God—

harps, the shrouds and masts of ships.
LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. I, ch. 7.

⁶ Long since, when all the docks were filled
With that sea beauty man has ceased to build.
JOHN MASEFIELD, Ships.

⁷ The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd throne, Burn'd on the water: the poop was beaten
gold;
Purple the sails, and so perfumed that
The winds were love-sick with them; the oars were silver,
Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and
made
The water which they beat to follow faster,
As amorous of their strokes.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act II,
sc. 2, l. 196.

⁸ She comes majestic with her swelling sails,
The gallant Ship; along her watery way,
Homeward she drives before the favouring
gales;
Now flirting at their length the streamers
play,
And now they ripple with the ruffling breeze.
SOUTHEY, Sonnets. No. xix.

Thou bring'st the sailor to his wife,
And travell'd men from foreign lands,
And letters unto trembling hands:

¹² Speed on the ship! But let her bear
No merchandise of sin,
No groaning cargo of despair
Her roomy hold within;
No Lethæan drug for Eastern lands,
Nor poison-draught for ours;
But honest fruits of toiling hands
And Nature's sun and showers.
WHITTIER, The Ship-Builders.

SHIPWRECK

¹³ What matter in what wreck we reached the shore,

So we both reached it?

WILFRED SCAWEN BLUNT, To One Who Would Make a Confession.

He perhaps reads of a shipwreck on the coast of Bohemia.

EDMUND BURKE, On the Sublime and Beautiful: Pt. i, Introduction.

Then rose from sea to sky the wild farewell!
Then shriek'd the timid, and stood still the brave;

Then some leap'd overboard with dreadful yell,

As eager to anticipate their grave;
And the sea yaw'd around her like a bell,
And down she suck'd with her the whirling wave.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 52.

He sinks into thy depths with bubbling groan.

BYRON, Child Harold. Canto iv, st. 179.

A solitary shriek—the bubbling cry
Of some strong swimmer in his agony.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 53.

But hark! what shriek of death comes in the gale,
And in the distant ray what glimmering sail
Bends to the storm?—Now sinks the note of fear!
Ah! wretched mariners!—no more shall day
Unclose his cheering eye to light ye on your way!

ANN RADCLIFFE, Mysteries of Udolpho: Shipwreck.

A lady that was drowned at sea and had a wave for her winding sheet.

GEORGE VILLIERS, The Rehearsal. (1671)

The ship hangs hovering on the verge of death,
Hell yawns, rocks rise, and breakers roar beneath!

In vain the cords and axes were prepared,
For every wave now smites the quivering yard;

High o'er the ship they throw a dreadful shade,

Then on her burst in terrible cascade. . . .
Again she plunges! hark! a second shock
Bilges the splintering vessel on the rock—

Down on the vale of death, with dismal cries,
The fated victims shuddering cast their eyes. . . .

Ah Heaven!—behold her crashing ribs divide!
She loosens, parts, and spreads in ruin o'er the tide.

WILLIAM FALCONER, The Shipwreck. Canto iii, l. 610.

"We are lost!" the captain shouted,
As he staggered down the stairs.

JAMES THOMAS FIELDS, Ballad of the Tempest.

He who has suffered shipwreck, fears to sail
Upon the seas, though with a gentle gale.

ROBERT HERRICK, Shipwreck.

When Crew and Captain understand each other to the core,

It takes a gale and more than a gale to put their ship ashore.

RUDYARD KIPLING, "Together."

And fast through the midnight dark and drear,
Through the whistling sleet and snow,
Like a sheeted ghost, the vessel swept
Tow'rd the reef of Norman's Woe.

Sleep on, sleep on, thou mighty dead!
A glorious tomb they've found thee;
The broad blue sky above thee spread,
The boundless ocean round thee.

HENRY FRANCIS LYTE, The Sailor's Grave.

Kings have no such couch as thine,
As the green that folds thy grave.

TENNISON, A Dirge. St. 6.

It was that fatal and perfidious bark,
Built in th' eclipse, and rigg'd with curses
dark,

That sunk so low that sacred head of thine.

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 100.

Like ships that have gone down at sea,
When heaven was all tranquillity!

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Light of the Harem, l. 189.

I have seen a man drowned in the sea who

1 He wrongly accuses Neptune, who makes shipwreck a second time. (Improve Neptu-num accusat, qui iterum naufragium facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententia. No. 164.

2 To make shipwreck in port. (Naufragium in portu facere.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. xii, sec. 23. Quoted as a proverb.

3 No dust have I to cover me,
My grave no man may show;
My tomb is this unending sea,
And I lie far below.

My fate, O stranger, was to drown;
And where it was the ship went down
Is what the sea-birds know.

E. A. ROBINSON, Inscription by the Sea. (From the Greek Anthology.)

A sailor buried on this shore
Bids you set sail,
For many a gallant bark, when I was lost,
Weathered the gale.

EVELYN BARING, LORD CROMER, From the Greek Anthology.

4 Though his bark cannot be lost,
Yet it shall be tempest-tost.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 24.

5 'Tis double death to drown in ken of shore.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1114.

Lord, Lord! methought, what pain it was to drown!

What dreadful noise of waters in mine ears!
What ugly sights of death within mine eyes!
Methought I saw a thousand fearful wrecks;
Ten thousand men that fishes gnaw'd upon;
Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,
Inestimable stones, unvalued jewels,
All scatter'd in the bottom of the sea:
Some lay in dead men's skulls; and, in those holes
Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept,
As 't were in scorn of eyes, reflecting gems.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, Act i, sc. 4, l. 21.

The wills above be done! but I would fain die
a dry death.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 1, l. 67.

6 My son! 't the ooze is bedded; and I'll seek him deeper than e'er plummet sounded

And with him there lie mudded.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 100.

Deeper than did ever plummet sound.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act v, sc. 2, l. 56.

7 Here and there they are seen swimming in the vast flood. (Apparent rari nantes in gurgite vasto.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 118.

8 Or, shipwrecked, kindles on the coast
False fires, that others may be lost.

WORDSWORTH, To the Lady Fleming, l. 69.

9 I made a prosperous voyage when I suffered shipwreck.

ZENO, referring to the fact that he was shipwrecked on a voyage from Phœnicia to Peireus, and so came to Athens, where he studied philosophy under Crates. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Zeno. Bk. vii, sec. 4.)

10 A common shipwreck is a consolation to all.
(Commune naufragium omnibus est consolatio.)

SHOE

11 "Who are you?" said the stocking to the shoe.
Said the shoe to the stocking,
"How terribly shocking,

For such as you to say to a shoe,
Who are you?"

ANGE FAGNANO, Strife.

12 Or, if thee list not wait for dead men's shoon.
BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 5.
(1597)

He that looks after dead-men's shoes, may chance to go barefoot.

JAMES MARBE, Celestina, 24. (1631)

13 Now for good luck, cast an old shoe after me.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)
See also 1225:17, under LUCK.

14 Let not the shoe be too large for the foot.

LUCIAN, Pro Imaginibus. Sec. 10.

Let firm, well hammer'd soles protect thy feet
Thro' freezing snows, and rains, and soaking sleet.
Should the big last extend the shoe too wide,
Each stone will wrench the unwary step aside;
The sudden turn may stretch the swelling vein,
The cracking joint unhinge, or ankle sprain;
And when too short the modish shoes are worn,
You'll judge the seasons by your shooting corn.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. i, l. 33.

I was not made of common calf,
Nor ever meant for country loam;
If with an axe I seem cut out,
The workman was no cobbling clown;
A good jack boot with double sole he made,
To roam the woods, or through the rivers wade.

GIUSEPPE GIUSTI, The Chronicle of the Boot.

15 My galligaskins, that have long withstood
The winter's fury, and encroaching frosts,
By time subdued (what will not time subdue!)

A horrid chasm disclosed.

JOHN PHILLIPS, The Splendid Shilling, l. 121.

16 We ought not to treat living creatures like shoes or pots and pans, which, when worn with use, we throw away.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. 5, sec. 5.

No one of you can tell me where my shoe pinches.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Amilius Paulus. Ch. 5, sec.

2. Relating the story of a Roman, who made this response to friends who demanded why he had divorced his wife without apparent cause.

Each knows where the shoe pinches him. (Cada uno sabe donde la aprieta el Zapato.)

CRUVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 32.

But I wot best where wringeth me my shoe.

CHAUCER, The Merchant's Tale, l. 309.

Those who wear the shoe know best where it pinches.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 16.

Others may guess where the shoe wrings, besides him that wears it.

JOHN LYLE, Euphues, p. 413.

You cannot put the same shoe on every foot.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 596.

All shoes fit not all feet.

THOMAS D'URVEY, Quixote. Act v, sc. 2.

All feet tread not in one shoe.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 493.

For still when all is said the rule stands fast

That each man's shoe be made on his own last.

(Metiri se quemque suo modulo ac pede verum est.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epia. 7, l. 98. (Conington, tr.)

To each foot its own shoe. (A chaque pied son soulier.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13.

'Tis the same to him who wears a shoe, as if the whole earth were covered with leather.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Wealth. Quoted as a Persian proverb.

Hark! the boy calls thee to his destin'd stand,
And the shoe shines beneath his oily hand.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 101.

One said he wondered that leather was not dearer than any other thing. Being demanded a reason: because, saith he, it is more stood upon than any other thing in the world.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Shakespeare's Jest Books: Conceits, Flashes and Whimsies. No. 86.

The shoe will hold with the sole.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1546.)

Who should hold with the shoe but the sole?

UNKNOWN, Peddler's Prophecy, l. 730. (1595)

Oh, where did hunter win

So delicate a skin

For her feet?

You lucky little kid,

You perished, so you did,

For my sweet.

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, To My Mistress's Boots.

And put

My clouted brogues from off my feet.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 213.

Tip at the toe, live to see woe;

Wear at the side, live to be a bride;

Wear at the ball, live to spend all;

Wear at the heel, live to save a deal.

UNKNOWN, The Wear of Shoes. Old rhyme.

10

I do not think that shoemaker a good workman who makes a great shoe for a little foot.

AGESILAUS THE GREAT, to one commending an orator for his skill in amplifying petty matters. (PLUTARCH, Laconic Apothegms.)

11

Let not the cobbler go above his last. (Ne sutor supra crepidam.)

APELLES. He was in the habit of hanging his pictures where they could be seen by the passers-by, and listening to their comments. One day a shoemaker criticised the shoes in a certain picture, and found next day that they had been repainted. Proud of his success as a critic, he began to find fault with the thigh of the figure, when Apelles called out from behind the canvas, "Shoemaker, don't go above your last!" (Sutor, ne supra crepidam judicaret. PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xxxiv, ch. 10, sec. 35.) Lucian tells the same story of Phidias.

Let not the cobbler go beyond his last. (Ne sutor ultra crepidam.)

ERASMUS, quoting the proverb in the form generally used. And the usual rendering is, of course, "Cobbler, stick to your last."

Remember, cobbler, to keep to your leather. (Memento, in pellicula, cerdo, tenere tua.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iii, p. 16, l. 6.

Do you not perceive that you are speaking beyond your hammer? (Non sentis, inquit, te ultra malleum loqui?)

ATHENAEUS, to a blacksmith criticising music.

The title of Ultracrepidarian Critic has been given to those persons who find fault with small and insignificant details.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk. Essay xxi.

12

'Tis a maxim with me, that an hale cobbler is a better man than a sick king.

ISAAC BICKENSTAFF, Love in a Village. Act i, sc. 5.

13

Him that makes shoes goes barefoot himself.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

When we see a man with bad shoes, we say it is no wonder, if he is a shoemaker. (Quand nous voyons un homme mal chaussé, nous disons que ce n'est pas merveille, s'il est chaussé par le diable.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. I, ch. 24.

Who is worse shod than the shoemaker's wife?
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. I, ch. 11.

Ye tuneful cobblers! still your notes prolong,
Compose at once a slipper and a song;
So shall the fair your handiwork peruse,
Your sonnets sure shall please—perhaps your shoes.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 791.

A man cannot make a pair of shoes rightly unless he do it in a devout manner.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Letter to Erskine, 22 Oct., 1842.

A shoemaker's son is a prince born.
THOMAS DELONEY, The Gentle Craft. Ch. 9.

The shoemaker makes a good shoe because he makes nothing else.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Greatness.

Mock not the cobbler for his black thumbs.
THOMAS FULLER, The Holy and the Profane State: Of Jest.

Oh, her heart's adrift with one
On an endless voyage gone!
Night and morning
Hannah's at the window binding shoes.
LUCY LARCOM, Hannah Binding Shoes.

I am but, as you would say, a cobbler. . . .
Truly, sir, all that I live by is with the awl.
. . . I am indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes;
when they are in great danger I recover them.
As proper men as ever trod upon neat's leather have gone upon my handiwork.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act I, sc. 1, l. 9.

Hans Grovendraad, an honest clown,
By cobbling in his native town,
Had earned a living ever.
His work was strong and clean and fine,
And none who served at Crispin's shrine
Was at his trade more clever.
JAN VAN RYSWICK, Hans Grovendraad. (F. W. Ricord, tr.)

When boots and shoes are torn up to the lefts,
Cobblers must thrust their awls up to the hefts.
NATHANIEL WARD, The Simple Cobbler of Aggawam in America. Title page.

Marry, because you have drank with the King,
And the King hath so graciously pledg'd you,
You shall no more be call'd shoemakers,
But you and yours, to the world's end,
Shall be call'd the Trade of the Gentle Craft.
ROBERT GREENE (?), George-a-Greene, sig. F 4b. (a. 1592) The king referred to was Edward IV, who, in one of his disguises, is said to have drunk with a party of shoemakers and pledged them. The term, "gentle craft," probably arose from the legend that St. Crispin, after he left Rome for Solsons to preach Christianity, supported himself by shoe-making.

I'll . . . fall to my old trade of the gentle craft the cobbler.

ROBERT WILSON, Cobbler's Prophecy, l. 1677. (1594)

Brave shoemakers, all gentlemen of the gentle craft.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Shoemaker's Holiday. Act III, sc. 1. (1600)

When young of Crispin's gentle craft by trade.
EDWARD WARD, History of the Grand Rebellion. Pt. III, l. 464.

SIGH

The sighing of a contrite heart.

Book of Common Prayer: Litany.

Had sighed to many, though he loved but one.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto I, st. 5.

And sighed, and wept, and said no more.
CHAUCER, Chaucer's Dream, l. 931. Usually attributed to Chaucer, but probably spurious. The line is borrowed from Alan de Lisle (or de Insulis), De Planctu Naturæ.

Sigh'd and look'd, and sigh'd again.
DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 120.

Sighed and looked unutterable things.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 1188.

Not such sorrowful sighs as men make
For woe, or else when that folk be sick,
But easy sighs, such as men to like.
CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. III, l. 1361.

And easy sighs, such as folk draw in love.
HENRY HOWARD, Prisoner in Windsor.

Drew a long, long sigh, and wept a last adieu!
COWPER, On the Receipt of My Mother's Picture, l. 30.

To sigh, yet not recede; to grieve, yet not repent.

GEORGE CRABBE, Tales of the Hall. Bk. III.

To sigh, yet feel no pain.
THOMAS MOORE, The Blue Stocking. Song II.

When he is here, I sigh with pleasure—
When he is gone, I sigh with grief.
W. S. GILBERT, The Sorcerer. Act I.

The sigh that rends thy constant heart
Shall break thy Edwin's too.
GOLDSMITH, A Ballad: The Hermit. (Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 8.)

Implores the passing tribute of a sigh.
THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 80.

1 My soul has rest, sweet sigh! alone in thee.
 PETRARCH, To Laura in Death. Sonnet liv.

Oh, if you knew the pensive pleasure
 That fills my bosom when I sigh,
 You would not rob me of a treasure
 Monarchs are too poor to buy.
 SAMUEL JOHNSON, To —. St. 2.

Sighs

Which perfect Joy, perplex'd for utterance,
 Stole from her sister Sorrow.
 TENNYSON, The Gardener's Daughter, l. 249.

2 Speed the soft intercourse from soul to soul,
 And waft a sigh from Indus to the Pole.
 POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 57.

3 Words may be false and full of art;
 Sighs are the natural language of the heart.
 THOMAS SHADWELL, Psyche. Act iii.

4 He raised a sigh so piteous and profound,
 That it did seem to shatter all his bulk
 And end his being.
 SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 94.

5 A plague of sighing and grief! it blows a man up like a bladder.
 SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 364.

6 Hushed be that sigh, be dry that tear,
 Nor let us lose our Heaven here.
 SHERMAN, Dry Be That Tear.

7 Never sigh, but send.
 SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. 1.

SILENCE

I—Silence: Definitions

8 Silence is gain to many of mankind. (Πολλοὶ τὸ ἀσιγῆν κέρδιον ἢ αὐτὴν βλάβην.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Prometheus. Frag. 103.

Silence is a healing for all ailments.

Babylonian Talmud: Megillah, p. 18a.

9 Silence is the virtue of fools, so he rightly said to the silent man: "If you are wise, you are a fool; if you are a fool, you are wise."

BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Loquacitas.

Silence is the wit of fools. (Le silence est l'esprit des sots.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Conversation.

10 Silence is the eternal duty of man.

CARLYLE, Inaugural Address at Edinburgh.

Silence, the great Empire of Silence: higher than all stars; deeper than the Kingdom of Death!
It alone is great; all else is small.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. vi.

Silence is the element in which great things fashion themselves together.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. iii, ch. 3.

11 The uttered part of a man's life, let us always repeat, bears to the unuttered, unconscious part a small unknown proportion.

CARLYLE, Essays: Memoirs of the Life of Scott.

Of every noble work the silent part is best
Of all expression that which cannot be expressed.
W. W. STORY, The Unexpressed.

12 Silence is the mother of Truth.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. iv, ch. 4.

13 The ancient sentence said, Let us be silent for so are the gods. Silence is a solvent that destroys personality, and gives us leave to be great and universal.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Intellect.

14 Silence is true wisdom's best reply.

Thoughts on Conversation.

17 Silence is strength. (Qui silet, est firmus.)

OVIO, Remedium Amoris, l. 697.

Love silence, even in the mind; for thoughts are to that as words are to the body, troublesome:
much speaking, as much thinking, spends. True silence is the rest of the mind; and it is to the spirit what sleep is to the body, nourishment and refreshment.

SKILL

¹² 'Tis God gives skill,
But not without men's hands: He could not make

Antonio Stradivari's violins Without Antonio.

GEORGE ELIOT, Stradivarius, l. 151.

¹³ Skill to do comes of doing.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Old Age.

¹⁴ Skill is stronger than strength.

W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 834. The French form is, "L'adresse surmonte la force."

¹⁵ Skill and confidence are an unconquered army.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 622.

¹⁶ This sort of thing takes a deal of training.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore.

¹⁷ All things require skill but an appetite.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

¹⁸ And skill's a joy to any man.

JOHN MASSEFIELD, Everlasting Mercy, l. 600.

¹⁹ To show our simple skill,

That is the true beginning of our end.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream,
Act v, sc. 1, l. 110.

²⁰ Like an arrow shot
From a well-experienced archer hits the mark
His eye doth level at.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act i, sc. 1, l. 165.

²¹ Masterful skill. (Arte magistra.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. viii, l. 442; bk. xii, l. 427.

SKIN

- 1 You are come off now with a whole skin.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 5.
It is good sleeping in a whole skin.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.
Your skins are whole.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act iii, sc. 1, l. 111.
- 2 A fair skin often covers a crooked mind.
W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 720.
- 3 Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots?
Old Testament: Jeremiah, xiii, 23. See also under CHANGE.
- 4 Skin for skin, yea, all that a man hath will he give for his life.
Old Testament: Job, ii, 4.
- 5 My skin hangs about me like an old lady's loose gown.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 3.
- 6 His silver skin laced with his golden blood.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 118.
I'll not shed her blood;
Nor scar that whiter skin of her than snow,
And smooth as monumental alabaster.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 3.

SKULL

See also Head

- 7 Remove yon skull from out the scatter'd heaps:
Is that a temple where a God may dwell?
Why ev'n the worm at last disdains her shatter'd cell!
Look on its broken arch, its ruin'd wall,
Its chambers desolate, and portals foul:
Yes, this was once Ambition's airy hall,
The dome of Thought, the palace of the Soul.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 5, 6.
- 8 That skull had a tongue in it, and could sing once. . . . And now my Lady Worm's; chapless, and knocked about the mazzard with a sexton's spade.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 83.
- 9 Behold this ruin! 'Twas a skull
Once of ethereal spirit full!
This narrow cell was Life's retreat;
This place was Thought's mysterious seat!
What beauteous pictures fill'd that spot,
What dreams of pleasure, long forgot!
Nor Love, nor Joy, nor Hope, nor Fear,
Has left one trace, one record here.

ANNA JANE VARDILL, Lines to a Skull. (Published in European Magazine, Nov., 1816, with signature V.) Claimed by J. D. Gorman, Robert Philp, and others.

SKY

- 10 Oh "darkly, deeply, beautifully blue!"
As some one somewhere sings about the sky.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 110.
Blue, darkly, deeply, beautifully blue,
In all its rich variety of shades,
Suffused with glowing gold.
SOUTHEY, Madoc in Wales. Pt. i, canto v, l. 102. Referring to dolphins, not to the sky, as Byron supposed.
- 11 And they were canopied by the blue sky,
So cloudless, clear, and purely beautiful
That God alone was to be seen in heaven.
BYRON, The Dream. St. 4.
Naught is seen in the vault on high
But the moon, and the stars, and the cloudless sky.
JOSEPH RODMAN DRAKE, Culprit Fay. St. 1.
The very clouds have wept and died
And only God is in the sky.
JOAQUIN MILLER, The Ship in the Desert.
- 12 Just take a trifling handful, O philosopher!
Of magic matter: give it a slight toss over
The ambient ether—and I don't see why
You shouldn't make a sky.
MORTIMER COLLINS, Sky-Making: To Professor Tyndall.
- 13 The mountain at a given distance
In amber lies;
Approached, the amber flits a little,—
And that's the skies!
EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 45.
- 14 Under the cold sky. (Sub Jove frigido.)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 1, l. 25.
- 15 The sky
is that beautiful old parchment in which the sun and the moon
keep their diary.
ALFRED KREYENBERG, Old Manuscript.
- 16 And that inverted Bowl they call the Sky,
Whereunder crawling coop'd we live and die,
Lift not your hands to it for help—for it
As impotently moves as you or I.
OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubáiyát. St. 72. (Fitzgerald, tr.)
- 17 Phaëton, if he were alive, would shun the sky. (Vitaret cælum Phaëton, si viverat.)
OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 1, l. 79.
- 18 The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament sheweth his handywork.
Old Testament: Psalms, xix, 1.
- 19 The wrathful skies

Gallow the very wanderers of the dark,
And make them keep their caves.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 43.

1 What if the sky fell? (Quid si nunc cælum ruat?)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 719. (Act iv, sc. 3.) Quoted as a proverb.

If the sky fall, we shall catch larks. (Si les nues tomboyent asperoyt prendre les alouettes.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 11.

If the sky falls, the pots will be broken. (Si el cielo se cae, quebrarse han las ollas.)

The Spanish form of the proverb.

2 Sometimes gentle, sometimes capricious, sometimes awful, never the same for two moments together; almost human in its passions, almost spiritual in its tenderness, almost Divine in its infinity.

RUSKIN, The True and Beautiful: The Sky.

3 Look you, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire, why, it appears no other thing to me than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 312.

4 Heaven's face doth glow.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 48.

Heaven's ebon vault,
Studded with stars unutterably bright,
Through which the moon's unclouded grandeur rolls,
Seems like a canopy which Love had spread
To curtain her sleeping world.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Pt. iv, l. 4.

5 The Lord descended from above
And bow'd the heavens high;
And underneath his feet he cast
The darkness of the sky.

THOMAS STERNHOLD, A Metrical Version of Psalm civ. St. 1.

6 Never yet
Had heaven appear'd so blue, nor earth so green.

TENNYSON, The Holy Grail, l. 364.

Of evening tinct,
The purple-streaming amethyst is thine.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 150.

Green calm below, blue quietness above.

WHITTIER, The Pennsylvania Pilgrim. St. 113.

7 Before the pageant of the skies
Nightly his spirit bowed.

L. FRANK TOOKER, He Bringeth Them unto Their Desired Haven.

8 It becomes wearisome constantly to watch the arch of heaven. (Tædet cæli convexa tueri.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. iv, l. 451.

9 Over all the sky—the sky! far, far out of reach, studded, breaking out, the eternal stars.

WALT WHITMAN, Bivouac on a Mountain Side.

10 I never saw a man who looked
With such a wistful eye

Upon that little tent of blue

Which prisoners call the sky,

And at every drifting cloud that went

With sails of silver by.

OSCAR WILDE, Ballad of Reading Gaol. Pt. i, st. 3.

11 The soft blue sky did never melt
Into his heart; he never felt

The witchery of the soft blue sky!

WORDSWORTH, Peter Bell. Pt. i, st. 15.

tione Oratoria*. Bk. xii, ch. 9, sec. 9.)

Squint-eyed Slander plies th' unhallow'd tongue.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Judgment of Paris. St. 109.

13 Slander is a shipwreck by a dry tempest.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

14 Slander is a most serious evil; it implies two who do wrong, and one who is doubly wronged.

ARTABANUS. (HERODOTUS, History. Bk. vii, l. 10.)

Slander slays three persons: the speaker, the spoken to, and the spoken of.

Babylonian Talmud: Arachin, p. 15b.

A Slander counts by Threes its victims, who Are Speaker, Spoken Of, and Spoken To.

ARTHUR GUTTERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 39.

An evil-speaker differs from an evil-doer only in opportunity. (Maledicus a malefico non distat nisi occasione.)

Slander, meanest spawn of hell—
And women's slander is the worst.
TENNYSON, The Letters. St. 5.

⁴ What is slander? A verdict of "guilty" pronounced in the absence of the accused, with closed doors, without defence or appeal, by an interested and prejudiced judge.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: Mind. No. 67.

Believe not each accusing tongue,
As most weak mortals do;
But still believe that story wrong
Which ought not to be true.

RICHARD BRINSLEY SEVERIDIAN, Sheridaniana.

There are two sides to a story,
Hear them both before you blame;
For a woman's crowning glory
Is a fair, unblemished name!
Heaven holds no gift that's grander,
So beware of idle slander;
There are two sides to a story—

Right and wrong!

WILL A. HEZELAN AND J. FRED HELS, There Are Two Sides to a Story. (1900) Popularized by Florence Brooks. See 99:3.

⁶ 'Tis slander,
Whose edge is sharper than the sword, whose
tongue
Outvenoms all the worms of Nile, whose breath
Rides on the posting winds and doth belie
All corners of the world: kings, queens, and states,
Maids, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave
This viperous slander enters.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 35.

Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter,
As level as the cannon to his blank,
Transports his poison'd shot.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 41.

Slander's mark was ever yet the fair;
The ornament of beauty is suspect,
A crow that flies in heaven's sweetest air.
So thou be good, slander doth but approve
Thy worth the greater.

⁸ Slander flings stones at itself.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologis. No. 4183.
(1732)

Who by aspersions throw a stone
At th' head of others, hit their own.
GEORGE HERBERT, Charms and Knots.

If I tell a malicious lie, in order to affect any man's fortune or character, I may indeed injure him for some time; but I shall be sure to be the greatest sufferer myself at last.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 21 Sept., 1747.

v, sc. 3, l. 3.

Slander'd to death by villains,

That dare as well answer a man indeed

As I dare take a serpent by the tongue.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
v, sc. 1, l. 88.

I will be hang'd, if some eternal villain,

Some busy and insinuating rogue,

Some cogging, cozening slave, to get some office,

Have not devis'd this slander.

V--Slander: Contempt for Slander

1 One may even scourge me, so it be in my absence.

ARISTOTLE, when told that some one had slandered him. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle, sec. 18.)

Better he speak where we are both known, than where we are both unknown.

PHILIP OF MACEDON, when advised to banish a man who had spoken ill of him. (FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms, No. 103.)

If I am

Traduced by ignorant tongues, which neither know

My faculties nor person, yet will be
The chronicles of my doing, let me say,
'Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake
That virtue must go through.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, Act i, sc. 2, l. 71.

2 The man that despiseth slander deserveth it.
LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 255.

3 That they speak [evil of me] is not the point; that they do not speak it justly, that is the point. (Quin dicant non est: merito ut ne dicant, id est.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, Act i, sc. 2.

4 Spiteful songs, if despised, are soon forgotten;
but if you show displeasure, they seem to be admitted as true. (Carmina . . . spreta ex-lescant; si irascere, agnita videntur.)

TACITUS, Annals, Bk. iv, sec. 34.

Where it concerns himself,

Who's angry at a slander, makes it true.

BEN JONSON, Catiline, Act iii, sc. 1.

VI--Slander: Admonitions

5 Carry no tales, be no common teller of news, but not inquisitive of other men's talk, for those that are desirous to hear what they need not, commonly be ready to babble what they should not.

ROGER ASCHAM, *Advice to Lord Warwick's
Servant*.

6 Though the quickness of thine ear were able to reach the noise of the moon, which some think it maketh in its rapid revolution; though the number of thy ears should equal Argus his eyes; yet stop them all with the wise man's wax, and be deaf unto the suggestions of tale-bearers, calumniators, pickthank or malevo-lent delators, who, while quiet men sleep, sowing the tares of discord and division, distract the tranquillity of charity and all friendly society.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals, Pt.
i, sec. 20.

7 Avoid gossip lest you come to be regarded as its originator; for silence harms no one, but speech is harmful. (Rumorem fuge, ne incipias novus auctor haberi; Nam nulli tacuisse nocet nocet esse locutum.)

DIONYSIUS CATO, Disticha de Moribus, Bk. i,
No. 12.

8 Don't be a Prittle-prattle, nor Prate-apace, nor be a minding anything but what is said
to you.

ERASMUS, The Schoolmaster's Admonitions.

9 Ever have an eye as to what and to whom you speak concerning any man. (Quid de quoque viro, et cui dicas, sæpe videto.)

HORACE, Epistles, Bk. i, epia. 18, l. 68.

10 Speak no ill of a friend, nor even of an enemy.
(Φίλον μὴ λέγειν κακῶς, ἀλλὰ μὴδὲ ἐχθρόν.)

PITTACUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pittacus, Bk.
i, sec. 78.)

Hear no ill of a friend, nor speak any of an enemy.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1739.

11 Slander-mongers and those who listen to slander, if I had my way, would all be strung up, the talkers by the tongue, the listeners by the ears. (Homines qui gestant quique auscultant crimina, Si meo arbitratu liceat, omnes pen-deant, Gestores linguæ, auditores auribus.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 427. (Act i, sc. 5.)

12 I ne'er with Wits or Witlings pass'd my days
To spread about the itch of verse and praise;
Nor like a puppy daggled thro' the town
To fetch and carry sing-song up and down.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 223.

13 Publish not men's secret faults, for by dis-gracing them you make yourself of no repute.

SADI, Gulistan: Rules for Conduct, No. 39.

Thy friend has a friend, and thy friend's friend has a friend, so be discreet.

The Talmud.

14 Refrain your tongue from backbiting, for . . .
the mouth that believeth slayeth the soul.

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, i, 11.

Rebuke backbiters, and encourage them not by hearkening to their tales.

SAMUEL BACSTER, Christian Politics.

15 If for a tranquil mind you seek,
These things observe with care:
Of whom you speak, to whom you speak,
And how, and when, and where.
UNKNOWN, A Rule of Conduct. Quoted by Edwin Booth.

SLAVERY

I--Slavery: Definitions and Apothegms

16 So free we seem, so fettered fast we are!
ROBERT BROWNING, Andres del Sarte.

Born slaves, bred slaves,
 Branded in the blood and bone slaves.
 ROBERT BROWNING, A Soul's Tragedy. Act 1.
 So we are slaves,
 The greatest as the meanest.
 BYRON, The Two Foscari. Act ii, sc. 1.
 Nations of slaves, with tyranny debas'd,
 (Their Maker's image more than half defac'd).
 ADDISON, The Campaign, l. 81.

1
 Slavery they can have anywhere. It is a weed that grows in every soil.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on Conciliation with America.

2
 As the slave departs, the man returns.

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 348.
 Was man ordained the slave of man to toil,
 Yoked with the brutes, and fettered to the soil?
 CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 495.

3
 He that is one man's slave, is free from none.
 CHAPMAN, The Gentleman Usher. Act i, sc. 1.

4
 Excessive liberty leads both nations and individuals into excessive slavery. (Nimiam libertas et populus et privatis in nimiam servitutem cadit.)

CICERO, De Republica. Bk. i, sec. 44.

5
 I own I am shock'd at the purchase of slaves,
 And fear those who buy them and sell them
 are knaves;

What I hear of their hardships, their tortures,
 and groans,

Is almost enough to draw pity from stones.

COWPER, Pity for Poor Africans, l. 1. (1788)

He blam'd and protested, but join'd in the plan;
 He shar'd in the plunder, but pitied the man.

6
 Base in kind, and born to be a slave.

COWPER, Table Talk, l. 28.

 I would not have a slave to till my ground,
 To carry me, to fan me while I sleep,
 And tremble when I wake, for all the wealth
 That sinews bought and sold have ever earn'd.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 29.

8
 Under the whip of the driver, the slave shall feel his equality with saints and heroes.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

Slavery it is that makes slavery; freedom, freedom.
 The slavery of women happened when the men were slaves of kings.

EMERSON, Miscellanies: Women.

9
 Freedom and slavery! the one is the name of virtue, and the other of vice, and both are acts of the will.

 Men! whose boast it is that ye
 Come of fathers brave and free,
 If there breathe on earth a slave,
 Are ye truly free and brave?

J. R. LOWELL, Stanzas on Freedom.

They are slaves who fear to speak
 For the fallen and the weak; . . .
 They are slaves who dare not be
 In the right with two or three.

J. R. LOWELL, Stanzas on Freedom.

16
 It is useless, believe me, to be the slave of a slave, even though he be a friend: let him be free who shall wish to be my master.

 δούλος οὐκ ἔστιν*.)

MEVANDER [?], Fragmenta. Frag. 857.

Man's mind and not his master makes him slave.
 R. U. JOHNSON, To the Spirit of Byron.

They set the slave free, striking off his chains. . .
 Then he was as much of a slave as ever. . . .

His slavery was not in his chains,
 But in himself . . .

They can only set free men free . . .

And there is no need of that:
 Free men set themselves free.

PRUDHOMAS, (STOEBÆUS, Florilegium, Pl. xviii,
l 24)

Show me a man who is not a slave One is a slave to lust, another to greed, another to ambition, and all men are slaves to fear. I will name you an ex-consul who is slave to an old hag, a millionaire who is slave to a serving-maid, I will show you youths of the noblest birth in serfdom to pantomime players! No

WINSTON CHURCHILL, Speech, House of Commons, 22 Feb., 1906 Referring to Chinese labor in South Africa

15 Slaves cannot breathe in England; if their lungs

Receive our air, that moment they are free;

They touch our country, and their shackles fall.

COWPER, The Task Bk ii, l. 40.

I speak in the spirit of the British law, which makes liberty commensurate with and inseparable from British soil; which proclaims even to the stranger and sojourner, the moment he sets his foot upon British earth, that the ground on which he treads is holy and consecrated by the genius of universal emancipation.

JOHN PHILIP CURRAN, British Law.

16 A soil whose air is deemed too pure for slaves to breathe in.

FRANCIS HARGRAVE, *Argument in Somerset
Habeas Corpus Case*, 14 May, 1772. James Somerset was a negro slave from Jamaica who accompanied his master to England, and claimed his freedom. The decision upheld the argument of Hargrave, Somerset's counsel, that slaves could not exist in England.

Every man who comes to England is entitled to the protection of the English law, whatever oppression he may heretofore have suffered, and whatever may be the colour of his skin, whether it is black, or whether it is white. (Quamvis ille niger, quamvis tu candidus)

WILLIAM MURRAY, EARL OF MANSFIELD, Decision, in Somerset Habeas Corpus Case, May, 1772. (State Trials, Vol. xx, p. 1.)

Lord Mansfield first established the grand doctrine that the air of England is too pure to be breathed by a slave.

LORD JOHN CAMPBELL, Lives of the Lord Chancellors, Vol. ii, p. 418.

Foreign slaves as soon as they come within the limits of France are free (Servi peregrini, ut primum Gallia: fines penetraverunt, eodem momento liberi sunt)

O true yoke-fellow of Time,
Duty's intrepid liegeman, see, the palm
Is won, and by all Nations shall be worn!
The blood-stained Writing is for ever torn;
And thou henceforth wilt have a good man's calm.

A great man's happiness; thy zeal shall find Repose at length, firm friend of human kind!

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence, Pt. ii, No. 3 To Thomas Clarkson, on the passing of the bill for abolition of the slave trade, March, 1807.

A Briton, even in love, should be
A subject, not a slave!

III.—Slavery in America

3

If those laws of the southern states by virtue of which slavery exists there and is what it is, are not wrong, nothing is wrong.

LEONARD BACON, Slavery Discussed: Preface, (1846)

If slavery is not wrong, nothing is wrong.

LINCOLN, Letter to A. G. Hodges, 4 April, 1864.

4

God has put into every white man's hand a whip to flog the black.

CARLYLE, Letter to Emerson, 1848.

5

There shall be neither slavery nor involuntary servitude in the said territory.

NATHAN DANE, Article, added to the Ordinance for the Government of the Northwest Territory, 1787. (Indiana Hist. Soc. Pub. No. 1, p. 69.)

No more slave States and no more slave territory.

SALMON P. CHASE, Platform Resolutions, adopted by the Free-Soil National Convention, 9 Aug., 1848.

6

I do not see how a barbarous community and a civilized community can constitute a state. I think we must get rid of slavery or we must get rid of freedom.

EMERSON, The Assault upon Mr Sumner's Speech, 26 May, 1856

"A house divided against itself cannot stand." I believe this government cannot endure permanently half-slave and half-free. I do not expect the Union to be dissolved. I do not expect the house to fall; but I do expect it will cease to be divided. It will become all one thing, or all the other. Either the opponents of slavery will arrest the further spread of it, and place it where the public mind shall rest in the belief that it is in the course of ultimate extinction, or its advocates will push it forward, till it shall become alike lawful in all the States, old as well as new—North as well as South.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, at the Republican state convention, Springfield, Ill., 17 June, 1858.

Where Slavery is, there Liberty cannot be; and where Liberty is, there Slavery cannot be.

CHARLES SUMNER, Slavery and the Rebellion, Speech before the N. Y. Young Men's Republican Union, 5 Nov., 1864.

Either be wholly slaves, or wholly free

DREYDEN, The Hind and the Panther, Pt. ii, l. 285.

7

Resolved: That the compact which exists between the North and the South is a covenant with death and an agreement with hell, involving both parties in atrocious criminality, and should be immediately annulled.

WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON, Resolution, adopted by the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society, 27 Jan., 1843.

8

In all social systems there must be a class to do the mean duties . . . It constitutes the very mudsills of society . . . Fortunately for the South, she found a race adapted to that purpose . . . We use them for that purpose and call them slaves.

JAMES H. HAMMOND, Speech, U. S. Senate, March, 1858.

9

White—as well as black—man-cipation.

THOMAS HOOD, The Monkey Murlyer.

10

I intend no modification of my oft-expressed wish that all men everywhere could be free.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Letter to Horace Greeley, 22 Aug., 1862. (RAYMOND, History of Lincoln's Administration.)

In giving freedom to the slave we assure freedom to the free,—honorable alike in what we give and what we preserve.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Second Annual Message to Congress, 1 Dec., 1862.

It is my last card, and I will play it and may win the trick.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, referring to the Emancipation Proclamation. (ROBERT C. WINTHROP, Diary, Sharon Springs, N. Y., 31 July, 1863.) Judge Edwards Pierrepont described to Winthrop a visit paid by him to the President on the Sunday preceding the issuing of the Proclamation, during the course of which he alleged that Lincoln made the remark as quoted.

Whenever I hear anyone arguing for slavery, I feel a strong impulse to see it tried on him personally.

LINCOLN, Address, 17 March, 1865.

1 Out from the land of bondage 'tis decreed our slaves shall go,

And signs to us are offered as erst to Pharaoh; If we are blind, their exodus, like Israel's of yore,

Through a Red Sea is doomed to be, whose surges are of gore.

4 An irrepressible struggle between opposing and enduring forces.

W. H. SEWARD, Speech, at Rochester, N. Y., 25 Oct., 1858, referring to slavery.

5 This is a world of compensations, and he who would be no slave must consent to have no slave. Those who deny freedom to others deserve it not for themselves, and, under a just God, they cannot long retain it.

CHARLES SUMNER, Letter, 6 April, 1859, declining to attend festival in honor of anniversary of Jefferson's birthday. Has been wrongly attributed to Abraham Lincoln, who probably quoted it.

By the Law of Slavery, man, created in the image of God, is divested of the human character, and declared to be a mere chattel.

CHARLES SUMNER, The Anti-Slavery Enterprise. Address at New York, 9 May, 1859.

6 We preach Democracy in vain while Tory and Conservative can point to the other side of the Atlantic and say: "There are nineteen millions of the human race free absolutely, governing themselves—the government of all, by all, for all; but instead of being a consistent republic, it is one widespread confederacy of free men for the enslavement of a nation of another complexion."

GEORGE THOMPSON, Speech, House of Commons, 1851.

7 Under a government which imprisons any unjustly, the true place for a just man is also a prison, . . . the only house in a slave State in which a free man can abide with honor.

H. D. THOREAU, The Duty of Civil Disobedience.

8 Mister Ward, don't yur blud bile at the thawt that three million and a half of your culled brethren air a clanking their chains in the South?—Sez I, not a bile! Let 'em clank!

ARTEMUS WARD, His Book: Oberlin.

9 I never mean, unless some particular circumstances should compel me to do it, to possess another slave by purchase, it being among my first wishes to see some plan adopted by which slavery in this country may be abolished by law.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Progress. Address delivered at Boston, 17 Feb., 1861.

11 Our fellow-countrymen in chains!

Slaves, in a land of light and law!

Slaves, crouching on the very plains

Where rolled the storm of Freedom's war! . . .

What! mothers from their children riven!

What! God's own image bought and sold!

Americans to market driven,

And bartered as the brute for gold!

SHELLEY, Epipsychidion, l. 558.

¹¹ Come, Sleep! O Sleep, the certain knot of peace,

The hailing-place of wit, the balm of woe,
The poor man's wealth, the prisoner's release,
Th' indifferent judge between the high and low!

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella. Sonnet 39.

¹² Gentle sleep!

Scatter thy drowsiest poppies from above;
And in new dreams not soon to vanish, bless
My senses with the sight of her I love.

HORACE SMITH, Poppies and Sleep.

¹³ Sleep's the only medicine that gives ease.
(ἄλλ' ἔσ' ἡρεῖα ἐκείνη εὐδεν.)

SOPHOCLES, Philoctetes, l. 768.

Sleep is better than medicine.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

¹⁴ Thou hast been call'd, O Sleep! the friend of Woe,
But 'tis the happy who have call'd thee so.

SOUTHEY, The Curse of Kehama. Pt. xv, st. 12.

¹⁵ I am tired of tears and laughter,

And men that laugh and weep

Of what may come hereafter

For men that sow to reap:

I am weary of days and hours,

Blown buds of barren flowers,

Desires and dreams and powers,

And everything but sleep.

SWINBURNE, The Garden of Proserpine. St. 2.

Thou art more than the day or the morrow, the seasons that laugh or that weep;

For these give joy and sorrow; but thou, Proserpine, sleep.

Sweet is the treading of wine, and sweet the feet of the dove;

But a goodlier gift is thine than foam of the grapes or love.

SWINBURNE, Hymn to Proserpine, l. 3.

¹⁶ The end is come of pleasant places,

The end of tender words and faces,

The end of all, the popped sleep.

SWINBURNE, Ricet. St. 1.

All gifts but one the jealous God may keep
From our soul's longing, one he cannot—sleep.

This, though he grudge all other grace to prayer,
This grace his closed hand cannot choose but spare.

This, though his ear be sealed to all that live,
Be it lightly given or lothly, God must give.

SWINBURNE, Tristram of Lyonesse: Prelude, l. 205.

¹ To sleep! to sleep! The long bright day is done,
And darkness rises from the fallen sun.
To sleep! to sleep!
Whate'er thy joys, they vanish with the day;
Whate'er thy griefs, in sleep they fade away.
To sleep! to sleep!
Sleep, mournful heart, and let the past be past!
Sleep, happy soul! all life will sleep at last.
To sleep! to sleep!

TENNISON, The Foresters. Act i, sc. 3, Song.

² To tired limbs and over-busy thoughts,
Inviting sleep and soft forgetfulness.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 1323.

³ Tir'd Nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep!
He, like the world, his ready visit pays
Where fortune smiles; the wretched he forsakes;
Swift on his downy pinion flies from woe,
And lights on lids unsullied with a tear.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 1.

III—Sleep: Wishes

⁴ Still believe that ever round you
Spirits float who watch and wait;
Nor forget the twain who found you
Sleeping nigh the Golden Gate.

BESANT AND RICE, The Case of Mr. Lucraft and Other Tales, p. 92.

⁵ Visit her, gentle Sleep! with wings of healing,
And may this storm be but a mountain-birth,
May all the stars hang bright above her dwelling,

Silent as though they watched the sleeping Earth!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Dejection, l. 128.

⁶ Softly, O midnight hours!
Move softly o'er the bowers
Where lies in happy sleep a girl so fair:
For ye have power, men say,
Our hearts in sleep to sway
And cage cold fancies in a moonlight snare.

AUBREY DE VERE, Softly, O Midnight Hours.

⁷ Sleep sweet within this quiet room,
O thou! who'er thou art,
And let no mournful yesterday
Disturb thy quiet heart. . . .
Forget thyself and all the world,
Put out each feverish light.
The stars are watching overhead.

Sleep sweet! Good night! Good night!

ELLEN HUNTINGTON GATES, Sweet Sleep. Originally written by Mrs. Gates as a motto for a silken quilt made by a friend, the first line reading, "Sleep sweet beneath this silken quilt."

⁸ Breathe thy balm upon the lonely,
Gentle Sleep!

As the twilight breezes bless
With sweet scents the wilderness,
Ah, let warm white dove-wings only
Round them sweep!

LUCY LARCOM, Sleep Song.

⁹ Dreams of the summer night!
Tell her, her lover keeps

Watch! while in slumbers light
She sleeps! My lady sleeps!

LONGFELLOW, Spanish Student. Act i, sc. 3.

¹⁰ To all, to each, a fair good-night,
And pleasing dreams, and slumbers light!
WALTER SCOTT, Marmion: L'Envoi.

Good night, good night! As sweet repose and rest

Come to thy heart, as that within my breast!
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 123.

¹¹ On your eyelids crown the god of sleep,
Charming your blood with pleasing heaviness:
Making such difference 'twixt wake and sleep,
As is the difference betwixt day and night,
The hour before the heavenly-harness'd team
Begins his golden progress in the east.

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 217.

Enjoy the honey-heavy dew of slumber.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 230.

Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast!
Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest!
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 187.

Sleep rock thy brain.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 237.

¹² Good night, good sleep, good rest from sorrow,
To these that shall not have good morrow;
The gods be gentle to all these.

SWINBURNE, Licet. St. 8.

¹³ Slumbers sweet thy mercy send us,
Holy dreams and hopes attend us,
This livelong night.

RICHARD WHATELY, Evening Hymn.

IV—Sleep: Prayers and Lullabies

¹⁴ Sleep an' let me to my work—
A' thae claes to airm—

Jenny wi' the airm teeth,

Come an' tak' the bairn!

ALEXANDER ANDERSON, Jenny Wi' the Airm Teeth.

¹⁵ When the sheep are in the fauld, and a' the kyc at hame,

And all the weary world to sleep are gane.

LADY ANNE BARNARD, Auld Robin Gray.

- 1 Sleep, sleep, beauty bright,
Dreaming in the joys of night;
Sleep, sleep; in thy sleep
Little sorrows sit and weep.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Cradle Song.
- 2 Fly away, Kentucky Babe, fly away to rest,
Lay yo' kinky, woolly head on yo' mammy's breast.—
Close yo' eyes in sleep.
RICHARD HENRY BUCK, Kentucky Babe. (1896)
Go to sleep, my little piccaninny, . . .
Mammy's little Alabama coon.
HATTIE STARR, Little Alabama Coon. (1893)
Sung by Frankie Raymond in Aladdin, Jr.
- 3 Golden slumbers kiss your eyes,
Smiles awake you when you rise.
Sleep, pretty wantons, do not cry,
And I will sing a lullaby.
Rock them, rock them, lullaby.
THOMAS DEKKER, Patient Grisild: Lullaby.
- 4 If thou wilt close thy drowsy eyes,
My mulberry one, my golden son,
The rose shall sing thee lullabies,
My pretty cosset lambkin!
EUGENE FIELD, Armenian Lullaby.
- 5 Wynken, Blynken, and Nod one night
Sailed off in a wooden shoe—
Sailed on a river of crystal light
Into a sea of dew.
EUGENE FIELD, Wynken, Blynken, and Nod.
- 6 I lay me down to sleep with little care
Whether my waking find me here or there.
MARY WOOLSEY HOWLAND, Rest.
- 7 Like infant's slumbers, pure and light.
JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Evening.
Thou driftest gently down the tides of sleep.
LONGFELLOW, To a Child, l. 115.
- 8 Sleep, baby, sleep!
Thy father's watching the sheep,
Thy mother's shaking the dreamland tree,
And down drops a little dream for thee.
Sleep, baby, sleep!
ELIZABETH PRENTISS, Cradle Song.
- 9 I will both lay me down in peace, and sleep:
for thou, Lord, only makest me dwell in safety.
Old Testament: Psalms, iv, 8.
- 10 O, hush thee, my babie, thy sire was a knight,
Thy mother a lady both lovely and bright;
The woods and the glens, from the towers which we see,
They all are belonging, dear babie, to thee.
Scott, Lullaby of an Infant Chief.
- 11 Hush, my dear, lie still and slumber!
Holy angels guard thy bed!

- Heavenly blessings without number
Gently falling on thy head.
ISAAC WATTS, A Cradle Hymn.
- 12 Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take.
UNKNOWN, Prayer at Lying Down. (New England Primer, 1737.) A few editions give the reading, "I pray, Thee, Lord."
- Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to keep;
When in the morning light I wake,
Lead Thou my feet, that I may take
The path of love for Thy dear sake.
UNKNOWN, Now I Lay Me: Revised.
- I lay me down in peace and sleep,
For thou, dear Lord, my soul will keep.
And as I rest, this prayer I make:
To do thy will when I awake.
GRENVILLE KLEISSER, Evening Prayer.
- N.R.A. me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my codes I'll keep;
If I should bust before I wake,
A.F.O.L. my plant will take.
UNKNOWN, Now I Lay Me: New Deal Version. For the benefit of future generations, it may be worth explaining that in the summer of 1933, a government agency known as the National Recovery Administration, which was declared unconstitutional by the U. S. Supreme Court in 1935, endeavored to regulate American industry by a series of codes, establishing wages and working hours; and the American Federation of Labor sought to organize the country's workers in order to enforce them. The whole movement, of which the N.R.A. was only a part, was known as the "New Deal."
- 13 Hush-a-bye, baby, on the tree-top,
When the wind blows, the cradle will rock;
When the bough breaks, the cradle will fall,
And down will come baby, cradle, and all.
UNKNOWN, Old Nursery Rhyme. The Book Lover (Feb., 1904) says it was the first poem produced on American soil, by a youth who came over in the Mayflower. It has also been attributed to Charles Blake.
- V—Sleep of Little and Great
- 14 Art thou poor, yet hast thou golden slumbers?
O sweet content!
THOMAS DEKKER, Patient Grisild: Song.
- 15 The sleep of a labouring man is sweet.
Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, v, 12.
Sleep is sweet to the labouring man.
JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress: The Author's Apology.
Weariness
Can snore upon the flint, when resty sloth
Finds the down pillow hard.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act III, sc. 6, l. 33.

¹ Soft sleep does not disdain the humble cottage of the peasant, nor the shady bank, nor the valley by zephyrs fanned (Somnus agrestium Lenis vivorum non humilis domos Fastidit umbrosamque ripam, Non Zephyris agitata Tempe)

HORACE, Odes Bk. iii, ode 1, l. 21.

² The lowliest cot will give thee peaceful sleep, While Caius tosses on his bed of down

MARTIAL, Epigrams Bk. ix, epig. 92, l. 3.

Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs, Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee, . . . Than in the perfum'd chambers of the great, Under the canopies of costly state, And hurl'd with sound of sweetest melody? O thou dull god, why liest thou with the vile In loathsome beds, and leavest the kingly couch A watch-case or a common 'larum-bell?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, Act iii, sc. 1, l. 9.

Canst thou, O partial sleep, give thy repose To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude, And in the calmest and most stillest night, With all appliances and means to boot, Deny it to a king? Then happy low, lie down! Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, Act iii, sc. 1, l. 26.

Yet not so sound and half so deeply sweet As he whose brow with homely biggen bound Snores out the watch of night.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, Act iv, sc. 5, l. 26.

VI—Sleep and Health

³ It is recorded of Methusalem, who, being the longest liver, may be supposed to have best preserved his health, that he slept always in the open air; for, when he had lived five hundred years, an angel said to him, "Arise, Methusalem, and build thee an house, for thou shalt live yet five hundred years longer." But Methusalem answered and said, "If I am to live but five hundred years longer, it is not worth while to build me an house; I will sleep in the air, as I have been used to do."

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to Miss —, on the art of procuring pleasant dreams. The story is one of Franklin's pleasant inventions.

⁴ One hour's sleep before midnight is worth three afterwards.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

⁵ It does not become a man of counsel to sleep the whole night through. (Ὁδὸν χρὴ παννύχτω εὐθεὶν βαλὼν φέρειν ἀρετὰν.)

HOMER, Iliad, Bk. ii, l. 24.

⁶ I never take a nap after dinner but when I have had a bad night, and then the nap takes me.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1775.)

For his sleep

Was aery light, from pure digestion bred.

MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. v, l. 3.

⁸ Sleep after luncheon is not good. (Non bonust somnus de prandio.)

PLAUTUS, Moscellaria, l. 697. (Act iii, sc. 2.)

For much sleep is not medicinal in middle of the day.

JOHN RUSSELL, Bake of Nature, l. 952.

Let your midday sleep be short or none at all. (Sit brevis aut nullus tibi somnus meridianus)

UNKNOWN, Maxims, School of Salerno.

⁹ Five hours sleep a traveller, seven a scholar, eight a merchant, and eleven every knave.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, 114. (1666)

Six hours for a man, seven for a woman, and eight for a fool! The precept seems to be based on the Latin lines. Sex horis dormire sat est junevique senique, Septem vis pigro, nulli concedimus octo.

Collectio Salmnitana, v. 7. (Notes and Queries, xi, v. 52.)

¹⁰ When it is time to turn over, it is time to turn out. (Or exactly, "When one begins to turn in bed, it is time to get up.")

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Maxims and Table-Talk.

VII—Sleep: Brother of Death

See also Death: The Last Sleep

¹¹ Since the brother of death daily haunts us with dying mementoes.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia, Ch. v, sec. 9.

And Sleep, Death's brother, yet a friend to life, Gave wearied Nature a restorative.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Repartees Between Cal and Puss.

¹² Care-charmer Sleep, son of the sable Night, Brother to Death, in silent darkness born; Relieve my languish, and restore the light.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Sonnets to Delia, No. xlv.

Care-charming Sleep, thou easer of all woes, Brother to Death . . . thou son of Night.

JOHN FLETCHER, Vulcanian, Act v, sc. 2.

¹³ One brother anticipates another—Sleep before Death.

DIOGENES, when roused from slumber a little before his death. (PIUTARCH, Apothegms: Diogenes.)

¹⁴ Sleep, the brother of Death. ("Ὕπνος, καὶ γινώσκων θανάτου.")

There she met Sleep, the brother of Death. ("Ἐνθ' Ὑπνῷ ἐπαβήκατο, καὶ γινώσκῃ θανάτου.")

HOMER, Iliad, Bk. xiv, l. 231.

Then Sleep and Death, two twins of winged race,
Of matchless swiftness, but of silent pace.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvi, l. 531. (Pope, tr.)

Death's own brother, Sleep. (Consanguineus Leti Sopor.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 278

¹ Heavy Sleep, the Cousin of Death.

THOMAS SACKVILLE, Sleep.

² How wonderful is Death,
Death and his brother Sleep!

One, pale as yonder waning moon
With lips of lurid blue;

The other, rosy as the morn
When thrown on ocean's wave
It blushes o'er the world.

Yet both so passing wonderful!

SHELLEY, Queen Mab, l. 1. Queen Mab was written in 1813. Two years later, Shelley wrote another poem, The Daemon of the World, which began with the same lines.

³ When in the down I sink my head,
Sleep, Death's twin-brother, tunes my breath.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lxvii.

Sleep, kinsman thou to death and trance
And madness, thou hast forged at last
A night-long present of the past.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lxi.

VIII—Sleep: Death's Counterfeit

⁴ Sleep is like death, and after sleep
The world seems new begun;

White thoughts stand luminous and firm,
Like statues in the sun;
Refreshed from supersensuous founts,
The soul to clearer vision mounts.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Sleep.

⁵ Death without dying—living, but not Life.
SIR EDWIN ARNOLD, The Light of the World.
Bk. iv, l. 164.

⁶ We term sleep a death . . . by which we may be literally said to die daily; in fine, so like death, I dare not trust it without my prayers.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii,
sec. 12.

Sleep is a death: O make me try,
By sleeping, what it is to die;
And as gently lay my head
On my grave, as now my bed

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii,
sec. 12.

⁷ Sleep falls like snowflakes, and it seems
'Tis always drifting into dreams;
But Death falls like the snow at sea,
And drifts into Eternity.

FRANCIS CARLIN, Sleep.

⁸ Sleep, I have heard say, has only one fault, that it is like death; for between a sleeping man and a dead man there is very little difference

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 68.

⁹ Sleep's but a short death; death's but a longer sleep

PHINEAS FLETCHER, Apollyonists. Canto i, st. 6.

¹⁰ There will be sleeping enough in the grave.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758. A parody of a popular saying, "Thou shalt sorrow enough in hell," derived from a tale in the Gesta Romanorum.

¹¹ O fool, what else is sleep but the image of chill death? (Stulte, quid est somnus, gelidæ nisi mortis imago?)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. ix, l. 41

¹² Loved she?—in sooth 't were hard to tell,
Sleep counterfeited Death so well.

W. M. PRAED, The Bridal of Belmont, l. 238

¹³ O sleep, thou ape of death, lie dull upon her!
And be her sense but as a monument.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 31.

¹⁴ Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeit,

And look on death itself!

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 81.

O'er their brows death-counterfeiting sleep
With leaden legs and batty wings doth creep.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iii, sc. 2, l. 364

Thy eyes' windows fall,

Like death, when he shuts up the day of life;
Each part, deprived of supple government,
Shall, stiff and stark and cold, appear like death.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iv, sc. 1,
l. 100.

¹⁵ Sleep, death's ally.

ROBERT SOUTHWELL, St. Peter's Complaint.

¹⁶ For next to Death is Sleep to be compared;
Therefore his house is unto his annex.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto vii, st. 25.

¹⁷ Deep rest and sweet, most like indeed to death's own quietness. (Dulcis et alta quies, placidaque similima morti.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 522.

¹⁸ Come, gentle sleep! attend thy votary's prayer,
And, though death's image, to my couch repair;

How sweet, though lifeless, yet with life to lie,
And, without dying, O how sweet to die!

THOMAS WARTON, Latin Epigram on Sleep.
(John Wolkot, tr.)

¹⁹ Each night we die,
Each morn are born anew: each day, a life!
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 286.

IX—Sleep: Insomnia

1 Slumber everywhere! . . .
But I in chilling twilight stand and wait
At the portullis of thy castle gate,
Longing to see the charmed door of dreams
Turn on its noiseless hinges, delicate Sleep!
THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Invocation to Sleep.

2 Come to me now! O, come! benignant sleep!
And fold me up, as evening doth a flower,
From my vain self, and vain things which have power

Upon my soul to make me smile or weep.
And when thou comest, oh, like Death be deep.
PATRICK PROCTOR ALEXANDER, Sleep.

3 Sleep I can get nane For thinking on my dearie.
BURNS, Simmer's a Pleasant Time.

4 In vain from side to side he throws
His form, in courtship of repose.
BYRON, The Siege of Corinth. St. 13.

My slumbers, if I slumber, are not sleep,
But a continuance of enduring thought.
BYRON, Manfred. Act I, sc. 1.

Sleep, Which will not be commanded.
BYRON, Marino Faliero. Act iv, sc. 1.

5 And I with sobs did pray—
O let me be awake, my God!
Or let me sleep away.
S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. vi.

6 Sister Simplicitie!
Sing, sing a song to me,—
Sing me to sleep!
Some legend low and long,
Slow as the summer song
Of the dull Deep.
STANLEY DOBELL, A Sleep Song.

7 Those only can sleep who do not care to sleep.
EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

Still hast to come where thou art wanted most.
WORDSWORTH, To Sleep.

8 Insomnia never comes to a man who has to get up at exactly six o'clock. Insomnia troubles only those who can sleep any time.
ELBERT HUBBARD, Philistines. Vol. xiv, p. 78.

9 But sleep stole on me unawares,
Even on me at last;
Though drop by drop the minutes faint,
Like hours at midnight passed.
HARRIET BLANCHET KING, The First of June.

10 Over the edge of the purple down,
Where the single lamplight gleams,
Know ye the road to the Merciful Town
That is hard by the Sea of Dreams—
Where the poor lay their wrongs away,
And the sick may forget to weep?

But we—pity us! Oh, pity us!
We wakeful; ah, pity us!—
We must go back with Policeman Day—
Back from the City of Sleep!
RUDYARD KIPPLING, The City of Sleep. St. 1.

For I am weary, and am overwrought
With too much toil, with too much care distraught,
And with the iron crown of anguish crowned,
Lay thy soft hand upon my brow and cheek,
O peaceful Sleep!
LONGFELLOW, Sleep.

11 I have forgotten how to sigh—
Remembered how to sleep.
DOROTHY PARKER, The Danger of Writing Defiant Verse.

12 I will not give sleep to mine eyes, or slumber to mine eyelids.
Old Testament: Psalms, cxxxii, 4; Proverbs, vi, 4.

13 Sleep came at length, but with a train
Of feelings true and fancies vain,
Mingling, in wild disorder cast,
The expected future with the past.
SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto I, st. 2.

14 I have not slept one wink.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 103.
And for my soul I cannot sleep a wink.
POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires, ii, 1, 12.

15 I'll wake mine eye-balls blind first.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 104.

16 O sleep, O gentle sleep,
Nature's soft nurse, how have I frightened thee,
That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down
And steep my senses in forgetfulness?
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 5.

Who, with a body fill'd and vacant mind,
Gets him to rest, cramm'd with distressful bread.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 286.

17 At their chamber-door I'll beat the drum
Till it cry sleep to death.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 119.

18 Our foster-nurse of nature is repose,
The which he lacks; that to provoke in him,
Are many simples operative, whose power
Will close the eye of anguish.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 12.

19 Sleep shall neither night nor day
Hang upon his pent-house lid.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 19.

Not poppy, nor mandragora,
Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep
Which thou ow'dst yesterday.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 330.

Give me to drink mandragora.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, I, 5, 4.

¹ O, I have pass'd a miserable night,
So full of ugly sights, of ghastly dreams,
That, as I am a Christian faithful man,
I would not spend another such a night,
Though 'twere to buy a world of happy days.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 2.

ALL the wild trash of sleep, without the rest.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 70.

² And Sleep shall obey me,
And visit thee never,
And the Curse shall be on thee
For ever and ever.

SOUTHEY, The Curse of Kehama. Pt. ii, st. 14.

³ Sleep vanishes before the house of care.
(Somnus sollicitas deficit ante domus.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 4, l. 20. See also under CARE.

⁴ A flock of sheep that leisurely pass by,
One after one; the sound of rain, and bees
Murmuring; the fall of rivers, winds and seas,
Smooth fields, white sheets of water, and pure
sky;

I have thought of all by turns and yet do lie
Sleepless! . . .
Come, blessed barrier between day and day,
Dear mother of fresh thoughts and joyous health!

WORDSWORTH, To Sleep.

If, my dear, you seek to slumber,
Count of stars an endless number;
If you still continue wakeful,
Count the drops that make a lakeful;
Then, if vigilance yet above you
Hover, count the times I love you;
And if slumber still repel you,
Count the times I did not tell you.

FRANKLIN P. ADAMS, Lullaby.

SMILE

I—Smile: Apothegms

¹¹ There is a smile of Love,
And there is a smile of Deceit,
And there is a smile of smiles
In which these two smiles meet.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Smile and Frown.

¹² Her bright smile haunts me still.

JOSEPH EDWARDS CARPENTER. Title of popular song of 1850's.

¹³ What I saw was equal ecstasy:
One universal smile it seemed of all things.
(Ciò ch'io vedeva, mi sembiava un riso Dell'universo.)

DANTE, Paradiso. Canto xxvii, l. 5.

All Nature wears one universal grin.

FILDBEST, Tom Thumb the Great. Act i, sc. 1.

¹⁴ In came Mrs. Fezziwig, one vast substantial smile.

DICKENS, A Christmas Carol. Stave 2.

¹⁵ His smile is sweetened by his gravity.

GEORGE ELIOT, Spanish Gypsy. Bk. i.

His wise, rare smile is sweet with certainties.

W. E. HENLEY, In Hospital: The Chief.

¹⁶ He smiled a kind of sickly smile and curled up on the floor,

And the subsequent proceedings interested him no more.

BRET HARTE, The Society Upon the Stomachus.

¹⁷ In his heart he smiled a sardonic smile.
(Μελοῦσε δὲ θυμῷ σαρδάνῳ μέσα τοῖσι.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xx, l. 301.

Your laugh is of the sardonic kind.

CATUS GRACCIUS, when his adversaries laughed at his defeat by unfair means when applying for a third tribuneship. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Cato Gracchus, ch. 12, sec. 5.) The sardonic smile was supposed to be an involuntary distention of the muscles of the mouth occasioned by a bitter plant, Sardonis herba, which came from Sardinia. Hence, γένος σαρκόνιος, bitter or sardonic smile or laughter, laughter that is forced or mocking.

¹ Make two grins grow where there was only a frown before.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Fig-Pen Pets.

² Nods, and becks, and wreathed smiles.
MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 28.

A smile that glow'd
Celestial rosy red, love's proper hue.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 618.

³ Smiles from reason flow
To brute deny'd, and are of love the food.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 239.

⁴ Smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 210.

⁵ An thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou
't catch cold shortly.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 112.

⁶ The heaving of my lungs provokes me to ridiculous smiling.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. iii, l. 78.

⁷ A smile recures the wounding of a frown.
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 465.

⁸ To hear him speak, and sweetly smile,
You were in Paradise the while.

SIR PHILIP SIMNEY, A Friend's Passion for His Astrophet.

⁹ The smile that won't come off.
JOSEPH W. STANDISH. Title and refrain of popular song. (1903) Said to have originated with Carolyn Wells, as the winning slogan in a contest, c. 1900.

¹⁰ And, as when
A stone is flung into some sleeping tarn,
The circle widens till it lip the marge,
Spread the slow smile thro' all her company.
TENNYSON, Pelleas and Ettorre, l. 88.

The slow wise smile.
TENNYSON, The Miller's Daughter, l. 5.

¹¹ Wrinkles about merely indicate where smiles have been.
MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar.

¹² Yet, if successful, thou wilt be adored—
Lo, like a Cheshire cat our Court will grin!
JOHN WOLCOT, Works. Vol. ii, p. 424.

¹³ When you call me that, smile!
OWEN WINTER, The Virginian, p. 28. See 3293:1.

II—Smile: Women's Smiles

¹⁴ Her smile is as the litten West,
Nigh-while the sun is gone.
THOMAS ASHE, Old Jane.

Her very frowns are fairer far
Than smiles of other maidens are.
HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Song: She Is Not Fair.

¹⁵ They smile so when one's right, and when one's wrong
They smile still more.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 164.

¹⁶ Give me your smile, the lovelight in your eyes,
Life could not hold a fairer paradise.
LEONARD COOKE, The Sunshine of Your Smile.
Popular song of 1915.

¹⁷ But O, her artless smile's mair sweet
Than hinny or than marmalete.
JAMES HOGG, My Love She's But a Lassie Yet.

¹⁸ The odor is the rose;
The smile, the woman.
ROBERT UNDERWOOD JOHNSON, Her Smile.

¹⁹ Smooth flow the waves, the zephyrs gently
play,
Belinda smil'd, and all the world was gay.
POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto ii, l. 51.

When bold Sir Plume had drawn Clarissa down,
Chloe stepp'd in, and kill'd him with a frown;
She smiled to see the doughty hero slain,
But, at her smile, the beau revived again.
POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto v, l. 67.

²⁰ Blest as the immortal gods is he,
The youth who fondly sits by thee,
And bears and sees thee all the while
Softly speak and sweetly smile.
SAPPHO, To —.

(Ille mi par esse deo videtur,
Ille, si fas est, superare divos,
Qui, sedans adversus, identidem te Spectat et audit Dulce ridentem.)
CATULLUS, Odes, No. li, l. 1.

Softly speak and sweetly smile.
ADDISON, Spectator. Vol. iii, No. 229. (Tr. from Boileau.)

²¹ Heaven hath no mouth, and yet is said to smile
After your style:
No more hath earth, yet that smiles too,
Just as you do.

AURELIAN TOWNSEND, To the Lady May. (c. 1635)

²² I feel in every smile a chain.
JOHN WOLCOT, Pindaricus.

²³ And she hath smiles to earth unknown;
Smiles, that with motion of their own

Do spread, and sink, and rise.
WORDSWORTH, Louisa. St. 2.

III—Smile: Deceitful Smiles

¹ Oh sir, she smiled, no doubt, Whene'er I passed her; but who passed without

Much the same smile?

ROBERT BROWNING, My Last Duchess.

² Smile with an intent to do mischief, or cozen him whom he salutes.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

³ But own'd, that smile, if oft observed and near,

Waned in its mirth, and wither'd to a sneer.
BYRON, Lara. Canto i, st. 17.

⁴ From thy own smile I snatch'd the snake.
BYRON, Manfred. Act i, sc. 1.

There is a snake in thy smile, my dear,
And bitter poison within thy tear.

SHILLER, The Cenci: Song. Act v, sc. 4.

⁵ The smiler with the knife under the cloak.

CHAUCER, The Knights Tale, l. 1141.

He surest strikes that smiling gives the blow.

SUSANNAH CENTLIVE, The Beau's Duel: Epilogue.

⁶ But he smiled, as he sat by the table,
With the smile that was childlike and bland.

BRET HARTE, *Plain Language from Truthful
James*.

But his smile it was pensive and childlike.

BRET HARTE, *Plain Language from Truthful
James*.

⁷ Eternal smiles his emptiness betray,
As shallow streams run dimpling all the way.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 315. See also under WATER.

Egnatius, because he has white teeth, is everlastingly smiling. If people come to the prisoner's bench, when the counsel for the defence is making everyone cry, he smiles: if they are mourning at the funeral of a dear son, when the bereaved mother is weeping for her only boy, he smiles:
whatever it is, wherever he is, whatever he is doing, he smiles. It is a disease he has. (*Quicquid est, ubicumque, quodcumque agit, renidet.
Hunc habet morbum.*)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode 29, l. 1.

⁸ One may smile, and smile, and be a villain.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 108.

Why I can smile and murder while I smile.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 182.

There's daggers in men's smiles.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 146.

⁹ Seldom he smiles, and smiles in such a sort

As if he mock'd himself and scorn'd his spirit,
That could be moved to smile at any thing.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 305.

Of such vinegar aspect
That they'll not show their teeth by way of smile,
Though Nestor swear the jest be laughable.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i,
sc. 1, l. 54.

¹⁰ With silent smiles of slow disparagement.

TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 14.

¹¹ And Milo's lurking marble smile.

WILLIAM WATSON, Termonds.

IV—Smile and Tear

See also Laughter and Tears

¹² Smiles form the channel of a future tear.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 97.

And if she met him, though she smiled no more,
She looked a sadness sweeter than her smile.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 72.

Of all tales 'tis the saddest—and more sad,
Because it makes us smile.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 9.

¹³ The social smile, the sympathetic tear.

THOMAS GRAY, The Alliance of Education and Government, l. 37.

¹⁴ Why comes not death to those who mourn?—
He never smiled again!

FELICIA HEMANS, He Never Smiled Again.

'Tis hard to smile when one would weep,

To speak when one would silent be;

To wake when one would wish to sleep,

And wake to agony.

ANNE HUNTER, The Lot of Thousands.

¹⁵ A smile is ever the most bright and beautiful with a tear upon it. What is the dawn without the dew? The tear is rendered by the smile precious above the smile itself.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Dante and Gemma Donati.

¹⁶ All kin' o' smily round the lips,

An' teary round the lashes.

J. R. LOWELL, The Courtin'.

¹⁷ As Jupiter

On Juno smiles, when he impregns the clouds
That shed May flowers.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 499.

¹⁸ Behold who ever wept, and in his tears
Was happier far than others in their smiles.

PETRARCH, The Triumph of Eternity, l. 93.

¹⁹ With a smile on her lips and a tear in her eye,
SCOTT, Locksley. (Marmion. Canto v, st. 12.)

Reproof on her lip, but a smile in her eye.

SAMUEL LOVER, Rory O'More.

- 1
Nobly he yokes
A smiling with a sigh, as if the sigh
Was that it was, for not being such a smile;
The smile mocking the sigh.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 51.
Triumphs for nothing and lamenting toys
Is jollity for apes and grief for boys.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 193.
- 2
You have seen
Sunshine and rain at once: her smiles and tears
Were like a better way: those happy smilets,
That play'd on her ripe lip, seem'd not to know
What guests were in her eyes: which parted thence,
As pearls from diamonds dropp'd.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 19.
Venus smiles not in a house of tears.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iv, sc. 1,
l. 8.
- 3
'Tis easy enough to be pleasant,
When life flows along like a song;
But the man worth while is the one who will
smile
When everything goes dead wrong;
For the test of the heart is trouble,
And it always comes with the years,
But the smile that is worth the praise of earth
Is the smile that comes through tears.
ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Worth While.
It's easy to fight when everything's right
And you're mad with the thrill and the glory;
It's easy to cheer when victory's near,
And wallow in fields that are gory.
It's a different song when everything's wrong,
When you're feeling infernally mortal;
When it's ten against one, and hope there is none,
Buck up, little soldier, and chortle!
ROBERT W. SERVICE, Carry On.

SMITH

- 4
The first artificer of death; the shrewd
Contriver who first sweated at the forge,
And forc'd the blunt and yet unbloodied steel
To a keen edge, and made it bright for war. . . .
And the first smith was the first murd'rer's
son.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 313.
And he sang: "Hurra for my handiwork!"
And the red sparks lit the air;
Not alone for the blade was the bright steel
made;
And he fashioned the first ploughshare.
CHARLES MACKAY, Tubal Cain. St. 4.
And fitfully you still may see the grim smiths ranking round,
All clad in leathern panoply, their broad hands only bare;

- Some rest upon their sledges here, some work the windless there.
SAMUEL FERGUSON, The Forging of the Anchor.
- 5
The smith hath always a spark in his throat.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4754.
Meaning he is always thirsty.
He is not a blacksmith, but he has a spark in his throat.
C. H. SPURGEON, Plowman's Pictures, 39.
- 6
I heard that Smug the smith, for ale and spice
Sold all his tools, and yet he kept his vice.
SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Of a Drunken Smith.
(Epigrams. Bk. iv, epig. 301.)
- 7
The smith and his penny both are black.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.
- 8
As great Pythagoras of yore,
Standing beside the blacksmith's door,
And hearing the hammers, as they smote
The anvils with a different note,
Stole from the varying tones, that hung
Vibrant on every iron tongue,
The secret of the sounding wire,
And formed the seven-chorded lyre.
LONGFELLOW, To a Child, l. 175.
And the smith his iron measures hammered to
the anvil's chime;
Thanking God, whose boundless wisdom makes the flowers of poesy bloom
In the forge's dust and cinders, in the tissues of the loom.
LONGFELLOW, Nuremberg, l. 34.
- 9
Under a spreading chestnut-tree
The village smithy stands;
The smith, a mighty man is he,
With large and sinewy hands;
And the muscles of his brawny arms
Are strong as iron bands.
LONGFELLOW, The Village Blacksmith, l. 1.
The tree was really a horse-chestnut.
Week in, week out, from morn till night,
You can hear his bellows blow;
You can hear him swing his heavy sledge,
With measured beat and slow,
Like a sexton ringing the village bell,
When the evening sun is low.
LONGFELLOW, The Village Blacksmith, l. 13.
- 10
In other part stood one who at the forge
Labouring, two massy clods of iron and brass
Had melted.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 560.
- 11
From whence came Smith, albe he knight or squire,
But from the smith that forgeth at the fire?
RICHARD ROWLANDS, *Restitution of Decayed
Intelligence*, p. 310. (c. 1600)
Fate tried to conceal him by naming him Smith.
O. W. HOLMES, The Boys. Of Samuel Francis
Smith, author of America.

Here lies what had nor birth, nor shape, nor fame;
No gentleman! no man! no-thing! no name! . . .
More, shrunk to Smith—and Smith's no name at all.

Pope, Epitaph on James More-Smythe.

The Smiths never had any arms, and have invariably sealed their letters with their thumbs.

¹ I saw a smith stand with his hammer, thus,
The whilst his iron did on the anvil cool,
With open mouth swallowing a tailor's news.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 193.

² The painful smith, with force of fervent heat,
The hardest iron soon doth mollify,
That with his heavy sledge he can it beat,
And fashion it to what he it list apply.

SNAIL

³ Whereso'er he roam,—
Knock when you will,—he's sure to be at home.

VINCENT BOURNE, The Snail. (Charles Lamb, tr.)

The snail, which everywhere doth roam,
Carrying his own house still, still is at home.

JOHN DONNE, To Sir Henry Wotton.

I can tell you why a snail has a house . . .
To put his head in

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 5, l. 30.

⁴ He was a sort of snail which crawled over a man in his sleep and left its slime.

JOHN SINGLETON COPLEY. Referring to an artist named Carter. (DUNLAP, History of the Arts of Design in the U.S., i, 129.)

⁵ An inadvertent step may crush the snail
That crawls at ev'ning in the public path;
But he that has humanity, forewarn'd,
Will tread aside, and let the reptile live.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 564.

⁶ Like snails I see the people go
Along the pavement, row on row;
And each one on his shoulder bears
His coiling shell of petty cares—
The spiral of his own affairs.

ELEANOR HAMMOND, From a Street Corner.

⁷ Wise emblem of our politic world,
Sage snail, within thine own self curled,
Instruct me softly to make haste,
Whilst these my feet go slowly fast.

RICHARD LOVELACE, The Snail.

⁸ The slow snail climbeth the tower at last,
though the swift swallow mount it sooner.

JOHN LYLE, Euphuus, p. 419.

⁹ You have beaten the snail in slowness. (Vici-tis cochlearum tarditudine.)

PLAUTUS, Pænulus, l. 532. (Act iii, sc. 1.)

There he comes, in a snail's trot.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, John Bull. Act iii, sc. 1. (1803)

He is easy-paced, this snail.

JOHN DONNE, To Sir Henry Wotton.

I will thitherward hie me in haste like a snail.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)

¹⁰ The snail, whose tender horns being hit,
Shrinks backward in his shelly cave with pain,
And there, all smother'd up, in shade doth sit,
Long after fearing to creep forth again.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 1033.

¹¹ "The snail," says the Hindoon, "sees nothing but his own shell, and thinks it the grandest palace in the universe."

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Flynnley Letters. No. 10.

¹² There was a laughing devil in his sneer.

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto i, st. 9.

And shaped his weapon with an edge severe,
Sapping a solemn creed with solemn sneer.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 107.

¹³ Better to stand ten thousand sneers than one abiding pang, such as time could not abolish,
of bitter self-reproach.

THOMAS DE QUINCEY, Confessions of an English Opium Eater. Pt. i.

¹⁴ I can't help it, I was born sneering.

¹⁷ Who can refute a sneer?

WILLIAM PALEY, Moral Philosophy. Vol. ii, bk. v, ch. 9.

¹⁸ "You laugh," he says, "and indulge too much in curved nostrils." ("Rides," ait, "et nimis uncis Naribus indulges.")

PRASUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 40.

¹⁹ Damn with faint praise, assent with civil leer,
And without sneering, teach the rest to sneer.
Pope, Epitaph to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 301.

¹ I fancy that it is just as hard to do your duty when men are sneering at you as when they are shooting at you.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Brooklyn Navy Yard, 11 May, 1914.

SNEEZING

² He's a friend at a sneeze; the most you can get of him is a God bless you.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologis. No. 2436.

Will you demand of me, whence this custom ariseth, to bless and say God help to those that sneeze? We produce three sorts of wind: that issuing from below is too undecent; that from the mouth implieth some reproach of gourmandise; the third is sneezing: and because it cometh from the head, and is without imputation, we thus kindly entertain it. Smile not at this subtlety; it is (as some say) Aristotle's.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. III, ch. 6.

³ He hath sneezed thrice; turn him out of the hospital.

⁴ (Hang it, I shall sneeze till spring!)

Snuff is a delicious thing.

LEIGH HUNT, Sneezing.

⁵ Just where the breath of life his nostrils drew,
A charge of snuff the wily virgin threw;
The gnomes direct, to every atom just,
The pungent grains of titillating dust.
Sudden, with starting tears each eye o'erflows,
And the high dome re-echoes to his nose.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto v, l. 81.

⁶ Sneeze on a Sunday morning fasting.

You'll enjoy your true love to everlasting.

UNKNOWN. (DYER, English Folk-Lore, p. 239.)

Sneeze on a Monday, you sneeze for danger;
Sneeze on a Tuesday, you kiss a stranger;
Sneeze on a Wednesday, you sneeze for a letter;
Sneeze on a Thursday, for something better;
Sneeze on a Friday, you sneeze for sorrow;
Sneeze on a Saturday, your sweetheart tomorrow;
Sneeze on a Sunday, your safety seek,
The Devil will have you the whole of the week.

UNKNOWN. (HARLAND, Lancs. Folk-Lore, p. 68.)

SNOB

⁷ Don't be proud and turn up your nose
At poorer people in plainer clothes;

But learn, for the sake of your soul's repose,
That all proud flesh, where'er it grows,
Is liable to irritation.

S. S. COX, Because You Flourish in Worldly Affairs.

⁸ I attach but little value to rank or wealth, but the line must be drawn somewhere. A man in that station may be brave and worthy; but at every step he would commit solecisms that society would never pardon.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act I.

⁹ Snobbery is but a point in time. Let us have patience with our inferiors. They are ourselves of yesterday.

ISAAC GOLDBERG, Tin Pan Alley.

¹⁰ We are all snobs of the Infinite, parvenus of the Eternal.

JAMES HUNTER, Iconoclasts, p. 16.

¹¹ Ain't a snob a fellow as wants to be taken for better bred, or richer, or cleverer, or more influential than he really is?

CHARLES LEVER, One of Them. Ch. 39.

¹² Heaven grant him now some noble nook,
For, rest his soul! he'd rather be

Genteelly damn'd beside a Duke,

Than sav'd in vulgar company.

THOMAS MOORE, Epitaph on a Tuft-Hunter.

¹³ Now she is dead she greets Christ with a nod,—
(He was a carpenter)—but she knows God.

VIRGINIA McCORMICK, The Snob.

¹⁴ Say what strange motive, Goddess! could compel
A well-bred Lord t' assault a gentie Belle?

O say what stranger cause, yet unexplor'd,

Could make a gentie Belle reject a Lord?

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto i, l. 7.

¹⁵ Perpetual nosing after snobbery at least suggests the snob.

R. L. STEVENSON, Some Gentlemen in Fiction.

¹⁶ Rough to common men,
But honeying at the whisper of a lord.

TENNYSON, The Princess: Prologue, l. 114.

¹⁷ He who meanly admires a mean thing is a Snob—perhaps that is a safe definition of the character.

THACKERAY, Book of Snobs. Ch. 2.

It is impossible, in our condition of Society, not to be sometimes a Snob.

THACKERAY, Book of Snobs. Ch. 3.

The state of society, viz. Toadyism, organized; base Man-and-Mammon worship, instituted by command of law;—snobbishness, in a word, perpetuated.

THACKERAY, Book of Snobs. Ch. 3.

That which we call a snob, by any other name would still be snobbish.

THACKERAY, Book of Snobs. Ch. 18.

No one succeeds better than Mr. Thackeray in cutting his coat according to his cloth. He's he flattered the aristocracy; but when he croaked the Atlantic, George Washington became the idol of his worship.

EDMUND YATZ. (Town Talk, 12 June, 1858.)

A tuft-hunter is a snob, a parasite is a snob, the man who allows the manhood within him to be awed by a coronet is a snob. The man who worships mere wealth is a snob.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Life of Thackeray, p. 56.

SNOW

I—Snow: Apothegms

Ye, farewell all the snow of ferné year!

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde, l. 1176.

Where are the snows of yesteryear? (Où sont les neiges d'antan?)

FRANÇOIS VILLON, Ballade des Dames du Temps Jadis. (Rossetti, tr.)

One burden answers, ever and aye,
"Nay, but where is the last year's snow?"

VILLON, Ballade des Dames du Temps Jadis. (Lang, tr.)

But where are the snows of last year? That was the greatest concern of Villon, the Parisian poet. (Mais où sont les neiges d'antan? C'était le plus grand souci qu'eust Villon, le poète parisien.)

RABELAIS, Works, Bk. ii, ch. 14.

Where's the snow

That fell the year that's fled—where's the snow?

A little snow, tumbled about,
Arise becomes a mountain.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 176.

Right, as snow in harvest.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 248.

II—Snow: Description

Lo, what wonders the day hath brought,
Born of the soft and slumbrous snow!

ELIZABETH AKERS ALLEN, Snow.

And out of the frozen mist the snow
In wavering flakes begins to glow;

Flake after flake

They sink in the dark and silent lake.

BRYANT, The Snow-Shower.

Through the sharp air a flaky torrent flies,
Mocks the slow sight, and hides the gloomy skies;

The fleecy clouds their chilly bosoms bare,
And shed their substance on the floating air.

GEORGE CRABBE, Inebriety, l. 17.

Whenever a snowflake leaves the sky,
It turns and turns to say "Good-by!
Good-by, dear clouds, so cool and gray!"
Then lightly travels on its way.

MARY MAPES DODGE, Snowflakes.

But when a snowflake, brave and meek,
Lights on a rosy maiden's cheek,
It starts—"How warm and soft the day!"
"Tis summer!" and it melts away.

MARY MAPES DODGE, Snowflakes.

Announced by all the trumpets of the sky,
Arrives the snow, and, driving o'er the fields,
Seems nowhere to alight: the whited air
Hides hills and woods, the river, and the heaven,

And veils the farm-house at the garden's end.
The sled and traveller stopped, the courier's feet

Delayed, all friends shut out, the housemates sit

Around the radiant fireplace, enclosed
In a tumultuous privacy of storm.

EMERSON, The Snow-Storm, l. 1.

Come, see the north wind's masonry.
Out of an unseen quarry evermore
Furnished with tile, the fierce artificer
Curves his white bastions with projected roof
Round every windward stake, or tree, or door!

EMERSON, The Snow-Storm, l. 10.

The frolic architecture of the snow.

EMERSON, The Snow-Storm, l. 28.

1
Out of the bosom of the Air,
Out of the cloud-folds of her garments shaken,
Over the woodlands brown and bare,
Over the harvest-fields forsaken,
Silent, and soft, and slow
Descends the snow.
LONGFELLOW, Snow-Flakes.

2
What heart could have thought you?—
Past our devisal (A filigree petal!)

Fashioned so purely, Fragilely, surely.
FRANCIS THOMPSON, To a Snow-Flake.

Through the bushed air the whitening shower
descends,

At first thin-wavering; till at last the flakes
Fall broad and wide and fast, dimming the day
With a continual flow. The cherished fields
Put on their winter-robe of purest white.

'Tis brightness all; save where the new snow melts

Along the many current.

JAMES THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 229.

Oh! the snow, the beautiful snow,
Filling the sky and the earth below; . . .
Beautiful snow, from the heavens above,
Pure as an angel and fickle as love!

JORN WHITTAKER WATSON, Beautiful Snow.
Fraudulently claimed by no less than seven people. (See STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems, p. 178.)

4
Like an army defeated
The snow hath retreated.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, Written in March.

5
I saw fair Chloris walk alone,
Whilst feather'd rain came swiftly down,
As Jove descended from his tower
To court her in a silver shower.
The wanton snow flew on her breast
Like little birds unto their nest,
But, overcome with whiteness there,
For grief it thaw'd into a tear;
Thence falling on her garment's hem,
To deck her, froze into a gem.

WILLIAM STRODE, On Chloris Walking in the Snow.

SOCIETY

I—Society: Definitions

6
Man seeketh in society comfort, use, and protection.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

Man was formed for society.

WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Of the Nature of Laws in General.

[Man] is a social animal. (Sociæ animal est.)
SEXCEA, De Beneficiis. Bk. vii, sec. 1.

7
The bond of human society is reason and speech. (In universi generis humani sociatate
. . . vinculum est ratio et oratio.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 16, sec. 50.

8
Fine society is only a self-protection against the vulgarities of the street and the tavern.
. . . 'Tis an exclusion and a precinct. . . It is an unprincipled decorum; an affair of clean linen and coaches, of gloves, cards, and elegance in trifles.

EMERSON, *Conduct of Life: Considerations by
the Way*.

Society is a masked ball, where every one hides his real character, and reveals it by hiding.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

Society is a joint stock company, in which the members agree, for the better securing of his bread to each shareholder, to surrender the liberty and culture of the eater.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

Society is frivolous, and shreds its day into scraps, its conversation into ceremonies and escapes.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Character.

Society is a hospital of incurables.

EMERSON, New England Reformers.

9
Society never advances.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

No society can ever be so large as one man.

EMERSON, New England Reformers.

10
Here is the use of society: it is so easy with the great to be great.

EMERSON, Essays: Society and Solitude.

When a man meets his fitting mate society begins.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Social Aims.

It is rendering mutual service to men of virtue and understanding to make them acquainted with one another.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. vi, p. 424.

11
The spirit of truth and the spirit of freedom
—they are the pillars of society.

HENRIK IBSEN, Pillars of Society. Act iv.

12
Society is the union of men and not the men themselves. (La Société est l'union des hommes, et non pas les hommes.)

MONTESQUIEU, L'Esprit des Loix. Bk. x, sec. 3.

13
The difference between what is commonly called ordinary company and good company is only hearing the same things said in a little room or in a large salon.

POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

14
The problem of building a human society is always the difficulty of establishing a relation between individual and communal happiness.

DORA RUSSELL, The Right to Be Happy, p. 255.

¹ Society is like the air, necessary to breathe, but insufficient to live on.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays.

² Society, saith the text, is the happiness of life. SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 2, 167.

³ Society exists for the benefit of its members; not the members for the benefit of society.

SPENCER, Principles of Ethics. Sec. 222.

⁴ A society cannot be founded only on the pursuit of pleasure and power; a society can only be founded on the respect for liberty and justice.

TAINÉ, Hist. English Literature. Bk. II, ch. 11.

⁵ What men call social virtue, good fellowship, is commonly but the virtue of pigs in a litter, which lie close together to keep each other warm.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 23 Oct., 1852.

⁶ Society therefore is as ancient as the world.

VOLTAIRE, Philosophical Dictionary: Policy.

⁷ There is

One great society alone on earth:

The noble Living and the noble Dead.

WORDSWORTH, The Prelude. Bk. xi, l. 393.

II—Society: Apothegms

⁸ Brothers, I am sorry I have got no Morrison's Pill for curing the maladies of Society.

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. I, ch. 4.

⁹ I want you to see Peel, Stanley, Graham, Sheil, Russell, Macaulay, Old Joe, and so on. They are all upper-crust here.

THOMAS C. HALIBURTON, Sam Slick in England. Ch. 24. (1843)

Those families, you know, are our upper crust, not upper ten thousand.

J. FENIMORE COOPER, Ways of the Hows. Ch. 6. (1850)

At present there is no distinction among the upper ten thousand of the city.

N. P. WILLIS, Necessity for a Promenade Drive. (1860)

Warren . . . is a novus homo, and only a Conservative on that account; it being the quickest method to gain admission among the Upper Ten.

JAMES PAYN, By Proxy. Ch. 36. (1878)

A rout which . . . embraces a tithe of the Upper Ten Thousand, is conventionally described . . . by the epithets 'small' and 'early.'

G. O. TREVELYAN, Interludes, p. 286. (1905)

There are only about four hundred people in New York Society.

WARD McALLISTER. A boast at the Union Club, after he had cut down the list of guests for the ball given by Mrs. William Astor, 1 Feb., 1892. The phrase was caught up by the newspapers, and passed into the idiom of the language. (Dict. of Amer. Biog.)

¹⁰ The Brahmin caste of New England. This is the harmless, inoffensive, untitled aristocracy referred to.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, Elsie Venner. Ch. 1.

⁵ The thoughts of the best minds always become the last opinion of Society.

EMERSON, Correspondence of Carlyle and Emerson, i, 29.

⁶ Of all the cordials known to us, the best, safest, and most exhilarating, with the least harm, is society.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Clubs.

⁷ Without society, and a society to our taste,
men are never contented.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. vi, p. 15.

⁸ It is an extreme evil to depart from the company of the living before you die.

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Sec. 1.

For it is most true that a natural and secret hatred and aversion towards society in any man, bath somewhat of the savage beast.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Friendship.

⁹ A little society is needful to show a man his failings.

R. L. STEVENSON, Ethical Studies, p. 82.

¹⁰ Company keeps our mind from growing too coarse and rough.

¹⁷ For one of the pleasures of having a rout
Is the pleasure of having it over.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Dream.
St. 3.

¹⁸ I live in the crowds of jollity, not so much to enjoy company as to shun myself.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 16.

¹⁹ Society is no comfort To one not sociable.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 12.

²⁰ No society can surely be flourishing and happy, of which the far greater part of the members are poor and miserable.

ADAM SMITH, Wealth of Nations. Bk. i, ch. 8.

²¹ Other people are quite dreadful. The only possible society is oneself.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act iii.

²² High society is for those who have stopped working and no longer have anything important to do.

V—Society and Convention

¹ "I am afraid," replied Elinor, "that the pleasantness of an employment does not always evince its propriety."

JANE AUSTEN, Sense and Sensibility. Ch. 13.

² Conventionality is not morality. Self-righteousness is not religion. To attack the first is not to assail the last. To pluck the mask from the face of the Pharisee, is not to lift an impious hand to the Crown of Thorns.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Jane Eyre: Preface.

³ It's wiser being good than bad;
It's safer being meek than fierce:
It's fitter being sane 'han mad.

ROBERT BROWNING, Apparent Failure.

⁴ For a "mixt company" implies, that, save Yourself and friends, and half a hundred
more,

Whom you may bow to without looking grave,
The rest are but a vulgar set.

BYRON, Reppò. SL 59.

⁵ In general, the more completely cased with formulas a man may be, the safer, happier is it for him.

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. ii, ch. 17.

⁶ the Cambridge ladies who live in furnished minds . . .

they believe in Christ and Longfellow, both
dead.

E. E. CUMMINGS, Sonnets: Realities.

⁷ My business in the social system is to be agreeable; I take it that everybody's business in the social system is to be agreeable.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 18.

⁸ Society everywhere is in conspiracy against the manhood of every one of its members.
. . . The virtue in most request is conformity.
Self-reliance is its aversion. It loves not realities and creators, but names and customs.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

Society will pardon much to genius and special gifts, but, being in its nature a convention, it loves what is conventional, or what belongs to coming together.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

Comme il faut, is the Frenchman's description of good society.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

⁹ The snow is lying very deep,
My house is sheltered from the blast.
I hear each muffled step outside,
I hear each voice go past.

But I'll not venture in the drift
Out of this bright security,
Till enough footsteps come and go
To make a path for me.

AGNES LEZ, Convention.

¹⁰ Where it is a duty to worship the sun it is pretty sure to be a crime to examine the laws of heat.

JOHN MORLEY, Miscellanies: Voltaire.

¹¹ What will Mrs. Grundy say?

THOMAS MORTON, Speed the Plough. (1798)

Mrs. Grundy, in the play, is a neighbor and obsession of Dame Ashfield, who constantly refers to her, wondering what she will think or say. Mrs. Grundy never appears. It was this play which, on 8 Feb., 1798, at Covent Garden, introduced Mrs. Grundy into English literature.

Aleways ding-dinging Dame Grundy into my ears—What will Mrs. Grundy say? er, What will Mrs. Grundy think?

THOMAS MORTON, Speed the Plough. Act i, sc. 1.

The world's an ugly world. Offend
Good people, how they wrangle!
Their manners that they never mend,—
The characters they mangle!
They eat, and drink, and scheme, and plod,—
They go to church on Sunday;
And many are afraid of God—
And more of Mrs. Grundy.

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, The Jester's Plea.

There be four things that keep us all from having our own way,—
Money, Fortune, Mrs. Grundy, and Policeman A.
D'ARCY THOMPSON, Sales Altia.

PYRRHO. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pyrrho. Bk. ix,
sec. 61.)

Society has only one law, and that is custom.

P. G. HAMERTON, Intellectual Life. Pt. vi, let. 1.

¹³ Conventional people are roused to fury by departure from convention, largely because they regard such departure as a criticism of themselves.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, The Conquest of Happiness, p. 131.

¹⁴ Keep decorum.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, I, 2, 77.

Let them cant about decorum
Who have characters to lose.

BURNS, The Jolly Beggars.

¹⁵ Men like conventions because men made them.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 64.

¹⁶ To say what you think will certainly damage you in society; but a free tongue is worth more than a thousand invitations.

Is all his soldiership.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 1, l. 26.

¹⁴ It is just as fitting for a soldier to be ignorant of some things, as that he should know others. (Tam nescire quædam milites, quam scire oportet.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. i, sec. 83.

¹⁵ A military gent I see—and while his face I scan,

I think you'll all agree with me—He came from Hindostan.

THACKERAY, The Newcomes. Bk. i, ch. 1.

¹⁶ Ten good soldiers, wisely led,

Will beat a hundred without a head.

D'ARCY THOMPSON, Paraphrase of Euripides.

¹⁷ It is not a fair deal to take a man from a farm or a factory, clap a tin hat on his head, and then shoot him if his nerve fails.

ERNEST THURTELL, Speech, House of Commons, on bill to abolish death penalty for desertion.

¹ All soldiers run away, madam.
 DUXE OF WELLINGTON, when asked whether
 British soldiers ever ran away.

² Of boasting more than of a bomb afraid,
 A soldier should be modest as a maid.
 YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. iv, l. 251.

³ On becoming soldiers we have not ceased to be citizens.

UNKNOWN, Humble Representation, addressed to Parliament by Cromwell's soldiers, 1647.

When we assumed the soldier, we did not lay aside the citizen.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Address, to the provincial Congress of New York, 25 June, 1775.
 The quotation is inscribed on the memorial amphitheatre in Arlington Cemetery.

⁴ Here rests in honored glory an American soldier known but to God.

Inscription, on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery.

II—Soldiers: Their Virtues

⁵ Glory is the soldier's prize;
 The soldier's wealth is honour.

BURNS, The Soldier's Return, l. 59.

⁶ The army is a school in which the miser becomes generous, and the generous prodigal; miserly soldiers are like monsters, very rarely seen.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 39.

⁷ Dear God, I raised my boy to be a soldier;
 I tried to make him strong of will and true.

FLORENCE EARLE COATES, A Soldier. An answer to a popular song of the early World War period, I Did Not Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier, written by Albert Bryan and published in 1914. In 1917, Bryan climbed aboard the patriotic band-wagon by writing It's Time for Ev'ry Boy to Be a Soldier; in 1916, J. Will Callahan produced,
I'm Going to Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier, and in 1917, Happy Mack turned out
I Didn't Raise My Boy to be a Slacker. All were fleetingly popular.

The man who has not raised himself to be a soldier, and the woman who has not raised her boy to be a soldier for the right, neither one of them is entitled to citizenship in the Republic.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, to the Soldiers at Camp Upton, 1917.

⁸ He stands erect; his slouch becomes a walk;
 He steps right onward, martial in his air,
 His form and movement.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 639.

⁹ That little bronze button,
 Still keep it in view,
 And honor the wearers,
 Once brave boys in blue.

ANNE CHAZ, The Little Bronze Button. (1899)

Ye living soldiers of the mighty war,
 Once more from roaring cannon and the drums,
 And bugles blown at morn, the summons comes;
 Forget the halting limb, each wound and scar:

Once more your Captain calls to you;
 Come to his last review!

R. W. GILDER, The Burial of Grant.

¹⁰ Last night, among his fellow-roughs
 He jested, quaffed, and swore;
 A drunken private of the Buffs,
 Who never looked before.

To-day, beneath the foeman's frown,
 He stands in Elgin's place,
 Ambassador from Britain's crown,
 And type of all her race.

FRANCIS H. DOYLE, The Private of the Buffs.

So let his name through Europe ring!

A man of mean estate,

Who died as firm as Sparta's king,
 Because his soul was great.

FRANCIS H. DOYLE, The Private of the Buffs.

From softness only softness comes;
 Urged by a bitterer shout within,
 Men of the trumpets and the drums
 Seek, with appropriate discipline,
 That Glory past the pit or wall
 Which contradicts and stops the breath,
 And with immortalizing gall
 Builds the most stubborn things on death.

OLIVER GOGARTY, Marcus Curtius.

¹¹ The broken soldier, kindly bade to stay,
 Sat by his fire, and talk'd the night away,
 Wept o'er his wounds, or, tales of sorrow done,
 Shouldered his crutch, and show'd how fields were won.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 155.

¹² If soldier,
 Chase brave employments with a naked sword
 Throughout the world. Fool not, for all may have

If they dare try, a glorious life, or grave.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 13.

¹³ The man-at-arms is the only man.

ISSER, Lady Inger. Act i. Quoted as a proverb.

¹⁴ So 'ere's to you, Fuzzy-Wuzzy, at your 'ome
 in the Soudan;

You're a pore benighted 'eathen but a first-class fightin' man.

RUDYARD KIPLING, "Fuzzy-Wuzzy."

Ah there, Piet!—picked up belaid the drive!
 The wonder wasn't 'ow 'e fought, but 'ow 'e
 kep' alive,

With nothin' in 'is belly, on 'is back, or to 'is
 feet—

I've known a lot o' men behave a dam' sight
 worse than Piet,

RUDYARD KIPLING, Piet.

¹⁵ The soldier should be fear-inspiring; not decked with gold and silver, but relying on his courage and his steel. . . . Valor is the soldier's adornment.

LIVY, History. Bk. ix, sec. 40.

1 They carved at the meal With gloves of steel,
And they drank the red wine through the helmet barred.

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto i, st. 4.

A soldier's but a man; A life's but a span;
Why, then, let a soldier drink.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 73.

2 A soldier,
Full of strange oaths and bearded like the pard,
Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble reputation
Even in the cannon's mouth.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 149.

Arm'd at point exactly, cap-a-pe.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 200.

All furnished, all in arms,
All plumed like estridges that with the wind
Baited like eagles having lately bathed;
Glittering in golden coats, like images;
As full of spirit as the month of May,
And gorgeous as the sun at midsummer.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 97.

3 I am a soldier and unapt to weep
Or to exclaim on fortune's fickleness.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act v, sc. 3, l. 133.

They are soldiers,
Witty, courteous, liberal, full of spirit.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act i, sc. 2, l. 42.

He is a soldier fit to stand by Caesar.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 126.

'Tis the soldiers' life
To have their balmy slumbers waked with strife.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 257.

8 Let it be your pride, therefore, to show all men everywhere not only what good soldiers you are, but also what good men you are.
. . . Let us set for ourselves a standard so high that it will be a glory to live up to it, and then let us live up to it and add a new laurel to the crown of America.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, to the soldiers of the National Army, 1917.

9 When captains courageous, whom death could not daunt,
Did march to the siege of the city of Gaunt,
They mustered their soldiers by two and by three,

And the foremost in battle was Mary Ambree.

UNKNOWN, Mary Ambree. (PACY, Reliques.)

Captains Courageous.

RUDYARD KIPPLING. Title of boy's story.

III—Soldiers: Their Faults

7 The Soldier, arm'd with Sword & Gun,
Palsied strikes the Summer's Sun. . . .
Nought can deform the Human Race
Like to the Armour's iron brace.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Auguries of Innocence.

8 For he was of that noble trade
That demi-gods and heroes made,
Slaughter, and knocking on the head,
The trade to which they all were bred.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 2, l. 321.

9 Mouths without hands; maintain'd at vast expense,

In peace a charge, in war a weak defence.

DRYDEN, Cymon and Iphigenia, l. 401.

10 The soldiers of America have killed more Americans, twenty times over, than they have foreign foes.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xi, p. 38.

11 No faith and no honor is found in men who follow camps. (Nulla fides pietasque viris qui castra sequuntur.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. x, l. 407.

12 The braggart warrior. (Miles gloriosus.)

PLAUTUS. Title of comedy.

Each year his mighty armies marched forth in gallant show,

Their enemies were targets, their bullets they were tow.

BÉRANGER, Le Roi d'Yvetot. (Thackeray, tr.)

13 Telling me . . . it was great pity, so it was,
This villainous saltpetre should be digg'd
Out of the bowels of the harmless earth,
Which many a good tall fellow had destroy'd
So cowardly; and but for these vile guns,
He would himself have been a soldier.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 57

If I be not ashamed of my soldiers, I am a soused gurnet.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 11.

14 A soldier is an anachronism of which we must get rid.

BERNARD SHAW, The Devil's Disciple. Act iii.

I never expect a soldier to think.

BERNARD SHAW, The Devil's Disciple. Act iii.

15 True, quoth my Uncle Toby, thou didst very right, Trim, as a soldier—but certainly very wrong as a man.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. vi, ch. 8.

A soldier, cried my Uncle Toby, interrupting the corporal, is no more exempt from saying a foolish thing, Trim, than a man of letters— But not so often, an' please your honour, replied the corporal.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. viii, ch. 19.

1 Many believe that subtlety is wanting in military genius. (Credunt plerique militaribus ingenius subtilitatem deesse.)
TACITUS, Agrioola. Sec. 9.

IV—Soldiers and the Fair Sex

2 The whisler'd votary of waltz and war.
BYRON, The Waltz, l. 15.

3 We know, Mr. Weller—we, who are men of the world—that a good uniform must work its way with the women, sooner or later.
DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 37.

4 Such is the country maiden's fright,
When first a red-coat is in sight,
Behind the door she hides her face;
Next time at distance eyes the lace.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Tame Stag.
Gold lace has a charm for the fair.
W. S. GILBERT, Patience. Act I.

The love that loves a scarlet coat,
Should be more uniform!
THOMAS HOOD, Faithless Nelly Gray.

5 The sex is ever to a soldier kind.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xiv, l. 246. (Pope, tr.)
He's an absent-minded beggar, and his weaknesses are great—

But we and Paul must take him as we find him—
He is out on active service, wiping something off a slate—

And he's left a lot of little things behind him!
RUDYARD KIPLING, The Absent-Minded Beggar.
There are girls he walked with casual. They'll be sorry now he's gone.

For an absent-minded beggar they will find him,
But it ain't the time for sermons with the winter coming on.
We must help the girl that Tommy's left behind him!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Absent-Minded Beggar.

6 But we are soldiers;
And may that soldier a mere recreant prove,
That means not, hath not, or is not in love!
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act I, sc. 3, l. 286.

7 When the military man approaches, the world locks up its spoons and packs off its woman-kind.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman.

8 What female heart can withstand a red-coat? I think this should be a part of female education. As you have the rocking-horse to accustom them to ride, I would have military dolls in the nursery, to harden their hearts against officers and red-coats.

STEWART SMITH, (LAST HOLLAND, Memoirs. Vol. I, p. 313.)

9 Malbrouck is off to the wars; . . .
I don't know when he'll return.
(Malbrouck s'en va-t-en guerre;
Mironton, mironton, mirontaine,
Malbrouck s'en va-t-en guerre,
Ne sait quand reviendra.)

UNKNOWN, Malbrouck. A famous old French song, sometimes attributed to Madame de Sévigné, and supposed to refer to the unsuccessful expedition against St. Malo made by Charles, Third Duke of Marlborough, in 1758. Found in many collections; popularized by Marie Antoinette about 1780; introduced by Beaumarchais into Le Mariage de Figaro, and by George Du Maurier into Trilby. Sung to the air of "We won't go home till morning."

O, send Lewis Gordon home
And the lad I mauna name,
Though his back be at the wa'
Here's to him that's far awa'.
WILLIAM GEDDES (?), Lewis Gordon.

The unreturning brave.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 27.

V—Soldiers and Public Ingratitude

10 For a soldier I listed, to grow great in fame,
And be shot at for sixpence a day.
CHARLES DICKENS, Charity.

How happy's the soldier who lives on his pay,
And spends half-a-crown out of sixpence a day!
JOHN O'KEEFE, The Poor Soldier.

Ninepence a day fer killin' folks comes kind o' low fer murder.
J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. I, No. 2.

11 For it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an'
"Chuck 'im out, the brute!"
But it's "Saviour of 'is country" when the guns begin to shoot.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Tommy.

Then it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an'
"Tommy, 'ow's yer soul?"
But it's "Thin red line of 'eroes" when the drums begin to roll.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Tommy.

We aren't no thin red 'eroes, nor we aren't no blackguards too,
But single men in barracks, most remarkable like you;

An' if sometimes our conduct isn't all your fancy paints,

Why, single men in barracks don't grow into plaster saints.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Tommy.

The world's wicked.
We are men, not saints, sweet lady.

MASSINGER, Unnatural Combat. Act I, sc. 1.

Tommy Atkins, as a sobriquet of the British soldier, comes from the imaginary name "Thomas Atkins," employed in 1815 in connection with The Soldier's Account Book, called into use by the War Office. "Thomas Atkins" appeared in the sample forms accompanying the official circular letter, 31 August, 1815.

¹ The painful warrior famoused for fight,
After a thousand victories once foil'd,
Is from the book of honour razed quite,
And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xxv.

Our God and soldier we alike adore,
When at the brink of ruin, not before;
After deliverance, both alike requited,
Our God forgotten, and our soldiers slighted.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Epigram. See also DEVI: SICK AND WELL.

And when they're worn,
Hacked, bewn with constant service, thrown aside,

To rust in peace, and rot in hospitals.

THOMAS SOUTHERNE, The Loyal Brother.

² Some for hard masters, broken under arms,
In battle lopt away, with half their limbs,
Beg bitter bread thro' realms their valour
saved.

VI—Soldiers: Officers

³ The honorable thing, that which makes the real general, is to have clean hands. (Καλὸν δὲ καὶ στρατηγικὸν ἀληθὲς ἡ περὶ τὰς χεῖρας ἐγρηπτεία.)

ARISTIDES, to Themistocles. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Aristides. Ch. 24, sec. 4.)

The greatest general is he who makes the fewest mistakes.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Sayings of Napoleon.

I made all my generals out of mud.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Sayings of Napoleon.

It is the part of a good general to talk of success, not of failure. (Ἐνὶ στρατηγικῷ χειρὶ τοῦ τὰ κρείσσου μὴδὲ τὰ δεινὰ λέγειν.)

SOPHOCLES, Œdipus Coloneus, l. 1429.

The proper qualities of a general are judgment and deliberation. (Ratio et consilium proprie ducis artes.)

⁴ We can make majors and officers every year,
but not scholars.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
i, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 15.

I am sorry it was not a general—I could make more of them.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Remark, when he heard of the death of a private.

If he is mad, I wish he would bite my other generals.

GEORGE II, Rétoric, to one who complained that Gen. James Wolfe was a madman.

Get me the brand, and I'll send a barrel to my other generals.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Rétoric, when told that General Grant was drinking too much whiskey.

⁶ Captains are casual things.

JOHN FLETCHER, Rule a Wife and Have a Wife.
Act iii.

An army all of captains, used to pray
And stiff in fight, but serious drill's despair,
Skilled to debate their orders, not obey.

J. R. LOWELL, Under the Old Elm. Referring to the Continental army.

That in the captain's but a choleric word,
Which in the soldier is flat blasphemy.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii,
sc. 2, l. 130.

The courageous captain of complements.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, 4, 19.

See now comes the captain all daubed with gold lace.

SWIFT, The Grand Question Debated.

^{6a} Hail, ye indomitable heroes, hail!
Despite of all your generals, ye prevail.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, The Crimean Heroes.

Grant lies asleep in his great white tomb, where the Hudson tides run deep;

And Sheridan and Sherman lie on marble beds asleep; . . .

But what of the men those heroes led: of Smith and Robinson?

REGINALD WRIGHT KAUFFMAN, Heroes of Yesterday.

⁷ I have heard, in such a way as to believe it,
of your recently saying that both the army and the government needed a dictator. . . .
Only those generals who gain successes can set up dictators. What I ask of you now is military success, and I will risk the dictatorship.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, *Letter to Major-General
Joseph Hooker*, appointing him commander of the Army of the Potomac, 26 Jan., 1863.

⁸ I personally wish Jacob Freese, of New Jersey, to be appointed colonel of a colored regiment, and this regardless of whether he can tell the exact shade of Julius Cæsar's hair.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, *Letter to Secretary of War
Stanton*.

⁹ "Companions," said he [Saturninus], "you have lost a good captain, to make of him a bad general."

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 9.

¹ Yet, trained in camps, he knew the art
To win the soldier's hardy heart.
They love a captain to obey,
Boisterous as March, yet fresh as May;
With open hand and brow as free,
Lover of wine and minstrelsy;
Ever the first to scale a tower,
As venturous in a lady's bower:—
Such buxom chief shall lead his host
From India's fires to Zembla's frost.
SCOTT, Marmion. Canto iii, st. 4.

² It is a bad soldier who grumbles when following his commander. (Malus miles est qui imperatorem gemens sequitur.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epis. cvii, sec. 10.

³ If you have a station in the file,
Not i' the worst rank of manhood, say 't.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 102.

⁴ 'Tis the curse of service,
Preferment goes by letter and affection,
Not by the old gradation, where each second
Stood heir to the first.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 1, l. 35.

Worked himself, step by step, through each preferment,
From the ranks upwards. And verily, it gives
A precedent of hope, a spur of action
To the whole corps, if once in their remembrance
An old, deserving soldier makes his way.

SCHILLER, Wallenstein. Pt. I, act i, sc. 1. (Coleridge, tr.)

⁵ Cassio, I love thee;
But never more be officer of mine.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 248.

^{5a} A thousand soldiers are easily got, but a single general is hard to find. ('Chien ping i tē i chiang nan 'chui.)

UNKNOWN. A Chinese proverb.

VII—Soldiers: How Sleep the Brave

⁶ Lay him low, lay him low,
In the clover or the snow!
What cares he? he cannot know:
Lay him low!

GEORGE HENRY BAKER, Dirge for a Soldier.

He rush'd into the field, and, foremost fighting, fell.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 23.

He slept an iron sleep,—

Slain fighting for his country.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xi, l. 285. (Bryant, tr.)

⁷ In the field of proud honour—our swords in our hands,

Our King and our Country to save—
While victory shines on life's last ebbing sands,
O! who would not die with the brave!

BURNS, Song of Death, l. 16.

Ob who would not sleep with the brave?
A. E. HOVEYMAN, Lancer, l. 2.

⁸ I see before me the Gladiator lie:
He leans upon his hand—his manly brow
Consents to death, but conquers agony.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 140.

⁹ How sleep the brave, who sink to rest,
By all their country's wishes blest!
When Spring, with dewy fingers cold,
Returns to deck their hallow'd mold,
She there shall dress a sweeter sod
Than Fancy's feet have ever trod.

By fairy hands their knell is rung,
By forms unseen their dirge is sung;
There Honour comes, a pilgrim grey,
To bless the turf that wraps their clay,
And Freedom shall a-while repair,
To dwell a weeping hermit there!

WILLIAM COLLINS, Ode Written in 1746.

The snow shall be their winding-sheet,
And every turf beneath their feet
Shall be a soldier's sepulchre.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Hohenlinden. St. 8.

¹⁰ Toll for the brave—

The brave! that are no more:

All sunk beneath the wave,
Fast by their native shore.

COWPER, On the Loss of the Royal George.

Far in foreign fields from Dunkirk to Belgrade
Lie the soldiers and chiefs of the Irish Brigade.

THOMAS DAVIS, Battle Eve of the Brigade.

¹¹ We meet neath the sounding rafter,
And the walls around are bare;
As they shout back our peals of laughter,
It seems that the dead are there.
Ho! stand to your glasses steady!

'T is all we have left to prize.

A cup to the dead already,—

Hurrah for the next that dies!

BARTHOLOMEW DOWLING, The Revel.

And hands that wist not though they dug a grave,

Undid the hasps of gold, and drank, and gave,
And he drank after, a deep glad kingly draught:
And all their life changed in them, for they quaffed

Death; if it be death so to drink, and fare
As men who change and are what these twain were.

SWINBURNE, Tristram of Lyonesse: The Sailing of the Swallow, l. 759.

¹² It is a sign of a soldier to believe that there is nothing left of man after death, except a corpse. (Militare est credere nihil hominis superesse post mortem, nisi cadaver.)

ERASMUS, Hippus Anippus.

Old soldiers never die, they just fade away.

GENERAL DOUGLAS MACARTHUR, Address, before a joint meeting of U.S. Congress, April 19, 1951; quoting an old army ballad. See 2290b:4.

1 Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the Judgment Day;
Love and tears for the Blue,
Tears and love for the Gray.
FRANCIS MILLS FINCH, The Blue and the Gray.
Each for his land, in a fair fight,
Encountered, strove, and died,
And the kindly earth that knows no spite
Covers them side by side.
RUDYARD KIPLING, The American Rebellion:
After.

Sleep sweetly in your humble graves,
Sleep, martyrs of a fallen cause.
HENRY TIMMONS, Ode.

2 He that stepped forward to follow the flag,
To ride with a saber or march with a Krag,
You'll find now, with thousands, shipped home in a bag,
Just a little brass tag.
EDGAR A. GUEST, A Little Brass Tag.

3 Let those who have no homes at all,
Go battle for a long one.
THOMAS HOOD, The Volunteer, l. 69.

4 In a wood they call the Rouge Bouquet,
There is a new-made grave today,
Built by never a spade nor pick,
Yet covered with earth ten metres thick.
There lie many fighting men,
Dead in their youthful prime.
Never to laugh nor love again
Nor taste the Summertime.
JOYCE KILMER, Rouge Bouquet.

If any question why we died,
Tell them, because our fathers lied.
RUDYARD KIPLING, Epitaphs of the War: Common Form.

5 We have met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting-place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Gettysburg Address, 19
Nov., 1863.

These heroes are dead. They died for liberty—they died for us. They are at rest. They sleep in the land they made free, under the flag they rendered stainless, under the solemn pines, the sad hemlocks, the tearful willows, the embracing vines. They sleep beneath the shadows of the clouds, careless alike of sunshine or storm, each in the widowless palace of rest. Earth may run red with other wars—they are at peace. In the midst of battles, in the roar of conflict, they found the serenity of death.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Memorial Day Vision.

6 Nicanor lay dead in his harness.
Apocrypha: II Maccabees, xv, 28.

7 Take up our quarrel with the foe:
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high.
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders fields.

JOHN MCCRAE, In Flanders Fields. First published in Punch, London, 8 Dec., 1915.

Your flaming torch aloft we bear,
With burning heart an oath we swear
To keep the faith, to fight it through,
To crush the foe or sleep with you
In Flanders fields.

C. B. GALBREATH, Answer to In Flanders Fields.

8 When soldiers brave death, they drive him into the ranks of the enemy.
NAPOLEON, Address to His Soldiers, two days after the battle of Jena.

9 "And where do we go now?" brave Bingham
said,
And Bethell, with his feet among the dead
Feeling the slant plate sink, the waters thrust, Answered him cheerily, "Why, to heaven I trust."

ROBERT NICHOLS, The Souls of the Righteous.

O loved, living, dying, heroic soldier,
All, all, my joy, my grief, my love, are thine!
ROBERT NICHOLS, Fulfillment.

10 A soldier of the Legion lay dying in Algiers,
There was lack of woman's nursing, there was dearth of woman's tears; . . .
And he said, "I never more shall see my own,
my native land;
Take a message, and a token, to some distant friends of mine,
For I was born at Bingen,—at Bingen on the Rhine."

CAROLINE NORTON, Bingen on the Rhine.

11 The muffled drum's sad roll has beat
The soldier's last tattoo;
No more on Life's parade shall meet
The brave and fallen few.
On Fame's eternal camping-ground
Their silent tents are spread,
And Glory guards, with solemn round,
The bivouac of the dead.

THEODORE O'HARA, The Bivouac of the Dead.

Nor shall your story be forgot,
While Fame her record keeps,
Or Honor points the hallowed spot
Where Valor proudly sleeps.
THEODORE O'HARA, The Bivouac of the Dead.

1
The sunshine streaming upon Salmon's height
Is not so sweet and white
As the most heretofore sin-spotted Soul
That darts to its delight
Straight from the absolution of a faithful fight.

COVENTRY PATMORE, Peace.

2
Soldiers are citizens of death's grey land.
STEPHEN SASSOON, Dreamers.

3
Soldier, rest! thy warfare o'er,
Dream of fighting fields no more;
Sleep the sleep that knows not breaking,
Morn of toil, nor night of waking.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 31.

Death had been seen by sudden blow,
By wasting plague, by tortures slow,
By mine or breach, by steel or ball,
Knew all his shapes and scorned them all.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto i, st. 8.

Fell as he was in act and mind,
He left no bolder heart behind:
Then, give him, for a soldier meet,
A soldier's cloak for winding sheet.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto vi, st. 33.

4
O, wither'd is the garland of the war,
The soldier's pole is fallen.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv, sc. 15, l. 64.

Cut is the branch that might have grown full straight,
And burn'd is Apollo's laurel bough,
That sometime grew within this learned man.
MARLOWE, Doctor Faustus. Final chorus.

5
Died with their swords in hand.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act i, sc. 1, l. 36.

O, farewell, honest soldier.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 16.

God's soldier be he!
Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
I would not wish them to a fairer death:
And so, his knell is knoll'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 8, l. 47.

6
Sleep, soldiers! still in honored rest
Your truth and valor wearing:
The bravest are the tenderest,—
The loving are the daring.

BAYARD TAYLOR, The Song of the Camp.

7
Home they brought her warrior dead.
TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. v, l. 532.

8
Where are the boys of the old Brigade,
Who fought with us side by side?
F. E. WEATHERLY, The Old Brigade.

Not in the Abbey proudly laid
Find they a place or part;
The gallant boys of the old Brigade,
They sleep in Old England's heart.
F. E. WEATHERLY, The Old Brigade.

9
Not a drum was heard, not a funeral note,
As his corse to the rampart we hurried;
Not a soldier discharged his farewell shot
O'er the grave where our hero we buried.
CHARLES WOLFE, The Burial of Sir John Moore After Corunna. In 1908, R. C. Newick published a pamphlet at Bristol, England, contending that this poem was written by a private soldier named Joseph Wolfe, a member of the squad which dug Moore's grave, but the ascription to Charles Wolfe is undoubtedly correct.

No useless coffin enclosed his breast,
Not in sheet or in shroud we wound him;
But he lay like a warrior taking his rest
With his martial cloak around him.
Few and short were the prayers we said,
And we spoke not a word of sorrow;
But we steadfastly gazed on the face that was
dead,
And we bitterly thought of the morrow. . . .
Slowly and sadly we laid him down,
From the field of his fame fresh and gory;
We carved not a line, and we raised not a stone,
But we left him alone with his glory.
WOLFE, The Burial of Sir John Moore.

I—Solitude: Definitions and Apophthegms

11
It had been hard for him that spake it to have put more truth and untruth together, in few words, than in that speech: "Whosoever is delighted in solitude is either a wild beast, or a god."

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Friendship.

12
To fly from need not be to hate mankind.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 59.

13
The secret of solitude is that there is no solitude.

JOSEPH COOK, Boston Monday Lectures: Conscience.

14
There is one means of procuring solitude which to me, and I apprehend to all men, is effectual, and that is to go to the window and look at the stars.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. III, p. 263.

Inspiration makes solitude anywhere.
EMERSON, Notes, Addresses, and Lectures: Literary Ethics.

15
When you have closed your doors, and darkened your room, remember never to say that you are alone, for you are not alone; God is within, and your genius is within,—and what need have they of light to see what you are doing?

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. i, ch. 14.

A solitude is the audience-chamber of God.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Lord Brooke and Sir Philip Sidney.

1 "And nobody with me at sea but myself."

GOLDSMITH, The Haunch of Venison, l. 60.

Quoted from a letter of Henry Frederick, Duke of Cumberland, to Lady Grosvenor, a correspondence which, in 1770, gave great delight to scandal-mongers.

All by my own-alone self.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Nights with Uncle Remus. Ch. 36.

2 Woe unto him that is never alone, and cannot bear to be alone.

P. G. HAMERON, The Intellectual Life. Pt. ix, letter 6.

3 The strongest man in the world is he who stands most alone.

HENRIK IBSEN, An Enemy of the People. Act v.

The more powerful and original a mind, the more it will incline towards the religion of solitude.

ALDOUS HUXLEY, Proper Studies, p. 218.

4 Now the New Year reviving old Desires,
The thoughtful Soul to Solitude retires.

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubāiyāt. St. 4. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

5 You must show him . . . by leaving him severely alone.

CHARLES STEWART PARNELL, Speech at Ennis, 19 Sept., 1880.

7 Solitude vivifies; isolation kills.

JOSÉPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. v, No. 60.

8 Time is not here, nor days, nor months, nor years,
An everlasting NOW of solitude!

SOUTHEY, Thalaba. Bk. i, sec. 28. See also PRESENT: THE EVERLASTING NOW.

9 I never found the companion that was so companionable as solitude.

THOREAU, Walden: Solitude.

10 O! lost to virtue, lost to manly thought,
Lost to the noble sallies of the soul!
Who think it solitude, to be alone.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 6.

II—Solitude: Its Virtues

11 Converse with men makes sharp the glittering wit,
But God to man doth speak in solitude.

JOHN STUART BLACKIE, Highland Solitude.

The solitude should teach us how to die;
It hath no flatterers; vanity can give
No hollow aid; alone—man with his God must strive.

BYRON, Childs Harold. Canto iv, st. 33.

12 O Solitude, the soul's best friend,
That man acquainted with himself dost make.

CHARLES COTTON, The Retirement.

13 Solitude is the nurse of enthusiasm, and enthusiasm is the true parent of genius. In all ages solitude has been called for—has been flown to.

ISAAC D'ISRAËLI, Literary Character of Men of Genius. Ch. 10.

So vain is the belief

That the sequestered path has fewest flowers.

THOMAS DOUBLEDAY, The Poet's Solitude.

14 Go cherish your soul; expel companions; set your habits to a life of solitude; then will the faculties rise fair and full within.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Literary Ethics.

I am sure of this, that by going much alone a man will get more of a noble courage in thought and word than from all the wisdom that is in books.

EMERSON, Journals, 1833.

What a saving grace is in poverty and solitude, that the obscure youth learns the practice instead of the literature of his Virtues!

EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

15 Living in solitude till the fulness of time, I still kept the dew of my youth and the freshness of my heart.

HAWTHORNE: Inscribed beneath his bust in Hall of Fame.

16 By all means use sometimes to be alone.
Salute thyself: see what thy soul doth wear. . . .

Who cannot rest till he good fellows find,
He breaks up house, turns out of doors his mind.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 23.

17 Two paradises 'twere in one,
To live in Paradise alone.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Garden.

18 Wisdom's self
Oft seeks to sweet retired Solitude,
Where with her best nurse Contemplation
She plumes her feathers, and lets grow her wings,

That in the various bustle of resort
Were all too ruff'd, and sometimes impair'd.

MILTON, Comus, l. 275.

Solitude is the best nurse of wisdom.

LAURENCE STERNE, Lectures. No. 62.

Impulses of deeper birth

Have come to him in solitude.

WORDSWORTH, A Poet's Epitaph, l. 47.

1 O blessed solitude! O sole blessedness. (O beata solitudo! O sola beatitudo.)

CORNELIUS MURS, Solitudo. (1566)

I praise the Frenchman, his remark was shrewd—

"How sweet, how passing sweet is solitude!"

But grant me still a friend in my retreat,

Whom I may whisper—Solitude is sweet.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 739. The quotation has been attributed to LA BRUYÈRE.

2 Hail, mildly pleasing Solitude,

Companion of the wise and good;

But from whose holy piercing eye

The herd of fools and villains fly.

Oh! how I love with thee to walk,

And listen to thy whispered talk,

Which innocence and truth imparts,

And melts the most obdurate hearts.

JAMES THOMSON, Hymn on Solitude, l. 1.

I will arise and go now, and go to Innisfree,

And a small cabin build there, of clay and wattle made:

Nine bean-rows will I have there, a hive for the honey-bee,

And live alone in the bee-loud glade.

W. B. YEATS, The Lake Isle of Innisfree.

3 O sacred solitude! divine retreat!

Choice of the prudent! envy of the great,

By thy pure stream, or in thy waving shade,

We court fair wisdom, that celestial maid.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire v, l. 254.

III—Solitude: Its Faults

4 Solitude affects some people like wine; they must not take too much of it, for it flies to the head.

MARY COLERIDGE, Gathered Leaves, p. 223.

5 Oh, solitude! where are the charms

That sages have seen in thy face?

Better dwell in the midst of alarms,

Than reign in this horrible place.

COWPER, Verses Supposed to be Written by Alexander Selkirk.

6 Woe to him that is alone when he falleth;

For he hath not another to help him up.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, iv, 10. (Vulg. soli.—Vulgate.)

7 The wise saith, "Woe him that is alone,

For, and he fall, he hath no help to rise."

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 694.

Woe be to him that lust to be alone,

For if he fall, help hath he none.

THOMAS HOOD, Dr Regimine Principum.

8 Solitude is dangerous to reason, without being favourable to virtue. . . . Remember that the solitary mortal is certainly luxurious,

probably superstitious, and possibly mad.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol. i, p. 219.

Solitude is pasturage for suspicion.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Sandra Belloni. Ch. 28.

9 In solitudo

What happiness, who can enjoy alone,

Or all enjoying, what contentment find?

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 364.

10 Overbearing austerity is always the companion of solitude. (Τῇ ἐπιπολῇ αὐστηρίας ἀνάδεται μὴ ἐνταπεινότης.)

PLATO, Epistle to Dion. (PLUTARCH, Lives:

Alcibiades and Coriolanus. Ch. 2, sec. 2.)

Solitude would ripen a plentiful crop of despots.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nominalist and Realist.

11 Solitude prompts us to all kinds of evil. (Omnia nobis mala solitudo persuadet.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Luciliū. Epis. xxv, 6.

There are some solitary wretches who seem to have left the rest of mankind only as Eve left Adam, to meet the devil in private.

POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

IV—Solitude and the Crowd

12 Little do men perceive what solitude is, and how far it extendeth. For a crowd is not company, and faces are but a gallery of pictures, and talk but a tinkling cymbal, where there is no love.

SIR FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Friendship.

But 'midst the crowd, the hum, the shock of men,

To hear, to see, to feel, and to possess,

And roam along, the world's tired denizen,

With none who bless us, none whom we can bless, . . .

This is to be alone; this, this is solitude!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 26.

Among them, but not of them.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 113.

How lonely we are in the world! . . . You and I are but a pair of infinite isolations, with some fellow-islands a little more or less near to us.

TRACKEY, Pendennis. Ch. 16.

13 The time when, most of all, you should withdraw into yourself is when you are forced to be in a crowd.

EPICURUS, Fragments. No. 209.

14 Far from the sweet society of men.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xxi, l. 394. (Pope, tr.)

Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife,

Their sober wishes never learn'd to stray;

Along the cool sequester'd vale of life

They kept the noiseless tenor of their way.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard. St. 19.

Far from the clank of crowds.

WALT WHITMAN, Starting from Paumanok.

Sec. 1.

1
Man dwells apart, though not alone,
He walks among his peers unread;
The best of thoughts which he hath known
For lack of listeners are not said.
JEAN INGLOW, Afternoon at a Parsonage:
Afterthought.

2
Oh that I had in the wilderness a lodging place of wayfaring men; that I might leave my people, and go from them! for they be all adulterers, an assembly of treacherous men

Old Testament: Jeremiah, ix, 2. (Quis dabit me in solitudine diversorium viatorum—Vulgate)

Oh for a lodge in some vast wilderness,
Some boundless contiguity of shade,
Where rumour of oppression and deceit,
Of unsuccessful or successful war,
Might never reach me more.

COWPER, The Task. Bk ii, l. 1.

O Solitude! if I must with thee dwell,
Let it not be among the jumbled heap
Of murky buildings: climb with me the steep,— Nature's observatory; . . . let me thy vigils keep 'Monks' boughs pavilion'd, where the deer's swift leap

Startles the wild bee from the foxglove bell.
KEATS, Sonnet: O Solitude.

3
We need not bid, for cloistered cell,
Our neighbour and our work farewell.
JOHN KEELE, The Christian Year: Morning.

The city does not take away, neither does the country give, solitude; solitude is within us.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest:
The Country. No. 48.

4
Avoid the reeking herd,
Shun the polluted flock,
Live like that stoic bird
The eagle of the rock.
ELINOR WYLIE, The Eagle and the Mole.

5
I should have then this only fear:
Lest men, when they my pleasures see,
Should hither throng to live like me,
And so make a city here.
ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Wish.

V—Solitude and Loneliness

6
Yes: in the sea of life enisld,
With echoing straits between us thrown,
Dotting the shoreless watery wild,
We mortal millions live alone.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, To Marguerite.

7
Indeed, though in a wilderness, a man is never alone, not only because he is with himself and his own thoughts, but because he is with the Devil, who ever consorts with our solitude. . . . There is no such thing as solitude, nor anything that can be said to be alone and by itself, but God.

STR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii,
sec. 11.

8
When is man strong until he feels alone?
ROBERT BROWNING, Colombe's Birthday. Act iii.
He travels the fastest who travels alone.
RUDYARD KIPLING, The Winners.

Alone!—that worn-out word,
So idly spoken, and so coldly heard;
Yet all that poets sing, and grief hath known,
Of hope laid waste, knells in that word—
ALONE!

BULWER-LYTTON, The New Timon. Pt. ii.

I am as one who is left alone at a banquet, the lights dead and the flowers faded.

BULWER-LYTTON, Last Days of Pompeii. Ch. 5.

I feel like one who treads alone
Some banquet-hall deserted,
Whose lights are fled, whose garlands dead,
And all but he departed!

THOMAS MOORE, Oft, in the Still Night.

10
Then forth uprose that lone wayfaring man.
CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt. i, st. 27.

All perished!—I alone am left on earth!
To whom nor relative nor blood remains,
No!—not a kindred drop that runs in human veins!

CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt. iii, st. 17.

11
Alone, alone, all, all alone,
Alone on a wide wide sea!
S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. iv.

So lonely 'twas, that God himself
Scarce seemed there to be.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. vii.

12
I am a lone lorn creature and everythink goes contrairy with me.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 3.

13
Thrice happy he, who by some shady grove,
Far from the clamorous world, doth live
his own;

Though solitary, who is not alone,
But doth converse with that eternal love.
WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Urania.

In solitude, where we are least alone.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 90.

15
He will not take me where he goes,
He's deaf to me and blind.
Always, I am left at home,
Sitting in my mind.
AMANDA BENJAMIN HALL, The Wanderer.

1 Why should we faint and fear to live alone,
Since all alone, so Heaven has will'd, we die,
Nor e'en the tenderest heart, and next our
own,
Knows half the reasons why we smile and
sigh?

It sank deep into his heart, like the melody of a song sounding from out of childhood's days.

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Hesperus. Ch. 12.

15 Song is untouched by death. (Carmina morte carent.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. I, eleg. 15, l. 32. See also POETRY AND IMMORTALITY.

16 Give in return for old wine, a new song. (Redde cantionem, veteri pro vino, novam.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus. Act v, sc. 6, l. 8.

I know a man . . . sold a goodly manor for a song.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act III, sc. 2, l. 10.

I bought it for a song.

JOHN CROWNE, Regulus. Act II, sc. 1. (1694)

Hence comes the common saying, and commoner practice, of parting with money for a song.

SWIFT, Tale of a Tub. Sec. 9. (1704)

All this for a song!

WILLIAM CECIL, LORD BURGHLEY, Lord High Treasurer, when commanded by Queen Elizabeth to give Edmund Spenser a hundred pounds.

17 A beam and witting periah'd in the throng,
One died in metaphor, and one in song.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto v, l. 31

¹ A very excellent good-conceited thing; after, a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 18.

² Come, sing me a bawdy song; make me merry.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 16.

When Satan makes impure verses, Allah sends a divine tune to cleanse them.

BERNARD SHAW, The Adventures of the Black Girl in Her Search for God.

³ Warble, child; make passionate my sense of hearing.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iii, 1, 1.

The sly whoresons

Have got a speeding trick to lay down ladies;

A French song and a fiddle has no fellow.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 3, l. 39.

To each word a warbling note.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act v, sc. 1, l. 405.

He hath songs for man or woman, of all sizes.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 191.

⁴ Cicala to cicala is dear, and ant to ant, and hawk to hawk, but to me the muse and song.

THEOCRITUS, Idylls. No. 9, st. 2. (Lang, tr.)

Your song, divine poet, is to me even as sleep is to the weary. (Tale tuum carmen nobis, divine poeta, Quale sopor fessis.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. v, l. 45.

II—Song: Singing and Working

⁵ The mouth which is busy with song is not busy with the grapes. (Bouche qui mord à la chanson ne mord pas à la grappe.)

EDMOND ABOUT, Les Mariages de Paris. Quoted as a proverb.

⁶ 'Tis a sure sign work goes on merrily, when folks sing at it.

ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, The Maid of the Mill. Act i, sc. 1.

⁷ Gloomy cares will be lightened by song. (Minuentur atræ Carmine curæ.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 11, l. 35.

He who sings scares away his woes. (Quien Canta Sus males espanta.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 22.

⁸ They sing, they will pay. (Ils chantent, ils payeront.)

CARDINAL MAZARIN, when he heard the Parisian populace singing, after the imposition of some new taxes. Originally a patois: "S'ils chantent la chansonnette, ils payeront."

Slavedrivers know well enough that when the slave is singing a hymn to liberty he is consoling himself for his slavery and not thinking about breaking his chain.

MROUZ DE UNAMUNO, Essays and Soliloquies, p. 94.

⁹ Men, even when alone, lighten their labors by song, however rude. (Etiam singulorum fatigatio quamlibet se rudi modulatione solatur.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. i, ch. 10, sec. 16.

¹⁰ Knitting and withal singing, and it seemed that her voice comforted her hands to work.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. i.

She makes her hand hard with labour, and her heart soft with pity: and when winter evenings fall early (sitting at her merry wheel), she sings a defiance to the giddy wheel of fortune . . . and fears no manner of ill because she means none.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, A Fair and Happy Milk-maid.

Verse sweetens toil, however rude the sound;

She feels no biting pang the while she sings,

Nor as she turns the giddy wheel around,

Revolves the sad vicissitudes of things.

RICHARD GIFFORD, Contemplation. (1753)

Samuel Johnson, who was fond of tinkering with other men's poetry, changed the second line of this stanza to "All at her work the village maiden sings."

The sad vicissitude of things.

LAURENCE STERNE, Sermon: The Character of Shimei. (1767)

III—Song: Any Words Good Enough

¹¹ Nothing is capable of being well set to music that is not nonsense.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 18.

To varnish nonsense with the charms of sound.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Apology, l. 219.

This particularly rapid, unintelligible patter, isn't generally heard, and if it is it doesn't matter!

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act ii.

¹² For music any words are good enough.

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds. (Plauché, tr.)

¹³ That which is not worth saying is sung. (Ce qui ne vaut pas la peine d'être dit, on le chante.)

BEAUMARCHAIS, Barbier de Séville. Act i, sc. 1.

Let a man try the very uttermost to speak what he means, before singing is had recourse to.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Journal, 17 Nov., 1843, referring to poetry.

¹⁴ Why "words for music" are almost invariably trash now, though the words of Elizabethan songs are better than any music, is a gloomy and difficult question.

W. S. LARSON, Essays: T. H. Bayly.

As for the words, there will be no difference between the words that are and are not set to music; both will conform to the same laws.
PLATO, The Republic. Bk. iii, sec. 398.

2
Soft words, with nothing in them, make a song.

EDMUND WALLER, To Mr. Creech.

IV—Song: Its Power

3
Her fingers witched the chords they passed along,
And her lips seemed to kiss the soul in song.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, Theodric, l. 30.

How oft, from yonder window o'er the lake,
Her song of wild Helvetian swell and shake
Has made the rudest fisher bend his ear
And rest enchanted on his oar to hear!
THOMAS CAMPBELL, Theodric, l. 42.

4
At ev'ry close she made, th' attending throng
Replied, and bore the burden of the song:
So just, so small, yet in so sweet a note,
It seem'd the music melted in the throat.
DRYDEN, The Flower and the Leaf, l. 197.

5
'Tis not in the high stars alone,
Nor in the cups of budding flowers,
Nor in the redbreast's mellow tone,
Nor in the bow that smiles in showers,
But in the mud and scum of things
There away, away something sings.
EMERSON, The Poet. Frag. 14.

The leagued might of trivial things
Wars with the soul that dreams and sings.
DON MARQUIS, The Singer.

6
When I but hear her sing, I fare
Like one that raised, holds his ear
To some bright star in the supremest
Round;

Through which, besides the light that's seen,
There may be heard, from Heaven within,
The rests of Anthems, that the Angels
sound.

OWEN FELLTHAM, Lusoria. No. xxxiv. This is the poem beginning, "When, dearest, I but think of thee," usually attributed to Sir John Suckling, but Felltham claimed it, and modern criticism is disposed to support
the claim.

Where thro' the long-drawn aisle and fretted vault

The pealing anthem swells the note of praise.
THOMAS GRAY, *Elegy Written in a Country
Church-yard*, l. 39.

Compared with these, Italian trills are tame;
The tickled ears no heartfelt raptures raise.
BURNS, The Cotter's Saturday Night, l. 115.

The sweetness which a hymn or psalm affords

Is when the soul unto the lines accords.

GEORGE HERBERT, A True Hymn.

7
Song wins grace with the gods above, and with the gods below. (Carmines di superi placantur, carmines Manes.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, eph. 1, l. 138.

8
The song on its mighty pinions,
Took every living soul, and lifted it gently to heaven.

LONGFELLOW, Children of the Lord's Supper,
l. 44.

For doth not Song
To the whole world belong?
Is it not given wherever tears can fall,
Wherever hearts can melt or blushes glow,
Or mirth or sadness mingle as they flow,
A heritage to all?

ISA CRAIG KNOX, On the Centenary of Burns.

9
Listen to that song and learn it!
Half my kingdom would I give,
As I live,

If by such songs you would earn it!
LONGFELLOW, The Saga of King Olaf. Pt. v.

Such songs have power to quiet
The restless pulse of care,
And come like the benediction
That follows after prayer.
LONGFELLOW, The Day Is Done. St. 9.

10
Or bid the soul of Orpheus sing
Such notes as, warbled to the string,
Drew iron tears down Pluto's cheek.
MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 105.

But would you sing, and rival Orpheus' strain,
The wond'ring forests soon should dance again;
The moving mountains hear the powerful call.
And headlong streams hang list'ning in their fall!
POPE, Pastorals: Summer, l. 81.

None knew whether
The voice or lute was most divine,
So wondrously they went together.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Prologue,
No. 2.

11
A persuasive thing is song; let girls learn to sing. (Res est blanda canor; discant cantare puellae.)

QVINT, Art Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 315.

The rude sea grew civil at her song,
And certain stars shot madly from their spheres
To hear the sea-maid's music.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream,
Act ii, sc. 1, l. 152.

An admirable musician: O! she will sing the savageness out of a bear.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 198.

12
The song that nerves a nation's heart
Is in itself a deed.

TENNYSOON, The Charge of the Heavy Brigade:
Epilogue.

¹ To kindle war by song. (Martem accendere cantu.)

V—Song: The Old Songs

⁴ I cannot sing the old songs

I sang long years ago,

For heart and voice would fail me,

And foolish tears would flow;

For bygone hours come o'er my heart

With each familiar strain;

I cannot sing the old songs,

Or dream those dreams again.

CHARLOTTE ALINGTON BARNARD, I Cannot Sing the Old Songs. Mrs. Barnard wrote under the pseudonym of Claribel. (c. 1860)

I cannot sing the old songs

Though well I know the tune,

Familiar as a cradle-song

With sleep-compelling croon;

Yet though I'm filled with music,

As choirs of summer birds,

"I cannot sing the old songs"—

I do not know the words.

ROBERT J. BURNETT, Songs Without Words.

I can not sing the old songs now!

It is not that I deem them low,

'Tis that I can't remember how

They go.

CHARLES STUART CALVERTLY, Changed.

⁴ Sing me the songs I delighted to hear,

Long, long ago, long ago.

T. H. BAYLY, The Long Ago.

Old songs, the precious music of the heart!

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. Pt. ii, No. 12.

⁵ He play'd an ancient ditty, long since mute,

In Provence call'd "La belle dame sans mercy."

KEATS, The Eve of St. Agnes. St. 33. "La Belle Dame, sans Merci" is a poem by Alain Chartier, sometimes attributed to Jean Marot. Keats also wrote a poem with that title. See 7187:16.

⁶ O Carril, raise again thy voice! let me hear the song of Sebn, which was sung in my halls of joy, when Fingal, king of shields, was there, and glowed at the deeds of his fathers.

OSIAN, Fingal. Bk. iii, st. 1.

⁷ To sing a song that old was sung.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles: Act i, Prelude, l. 1.

And stretched metre of an antique song.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xvii.

Songs consecrate to truth and liberty.

SHAKESPEARE, To Wordsworth, l. 12.

⁸ In the years fled, Lips that are dead

Sang me that song.

MRS. R. A. M. STEVENSON, Song.

⁹ Those high songs of thine

That stung the sense like wine,

Or fell more soft than dew or snow by night.

SWINBURNE, To Victor Hugo. St. 6.

¹⁰ A love-song I had somewhere read,

An echo from a measured strain,

Beat time to nothing in my head

From some odd corner of the brain.

It haunted me, the morning long,

With weary sameness in the rhymes,

The phantom of a silent song,

That went and came a thousand times.

TENNYSOON, The Miller's Daughter. St. 9.

¹¹ You sing the same old song. (Cantilenam eandem canis.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 495. (Act iii, sc. 2.)

Bring the good old bugle, boys! we'll sing another song—

Sing it with a spirit that will start the world along—

Sing it as we used to sing it, fifty thousand strong,

While we were marching through Georgia.

HENRY CLAY WORK, Marching Through Georgia.

¹² Of all the friends I used to love,

My harp remains alone;

Its faithful voice seems still to be

An echo of my own.

My tears, when I bend over it,

Will fall upon its string;

Yet those who hear me little think

I'm saddest when I sing.

T. H. BAYLY, I'm Saddest When I Sing.

For now to sorrow must I tune my song,

And set my harp to notes of saddest woe.

MILTON, The Passion, l. 8.

Our sweetest songs are those which tell of saddest thought.

SHAKESPEARE, To a Skylark. St. 18.

I can't sing. As a singist I am not a success. I am saddest when I sing. So are those who hear me. They are sadder than I am.

ANTIMUS WARD, Lecture.

At what I sing there's some may smile,

While some, perhaps, will sigh.

¹ He could songes make, and well endite.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 95.

He knew
Himself to sing, and build the lofty rhyme.
MILTON, Lycidas, l. 10.

² On the beryl-rimmed rebecs of Ruby
Brought fresh from the hyaline streams,
She played on the banks of the Yuba
Such songs as she heard in her dreams.
THOMAS HOLLEY CHIVERS, Lily Adair.

Y'ought to heeah dat gal a-warblin'
Robins, la'ks an' all dem things
Heish de moufs an' hides dey faces
When Malindy sings.
PAUL LAURENCE DUNBAR, When Malindy Sings.

³ A wandering minstrel I—
A thing of shreds and patches,
Of ballads, songs, and snatches,
And dreamy lullaby
W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado, Act i.
Sing, minstrel, sing us now a tender song
Of meeting and parting, with the moon in it.
STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Ulysses, Act i, sc. 1.

⁴ A few can touch the magic string,
And noisy Fame is proud to win them:—
Alas for those that never sing,
But die with all their music in them!
O. W. HOLMES, The Voiceless, St. 1.

Songs may be mute; for songs may exist unsung, but voices exist only while they sound.
W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Abbé Delille and Landor.

⁵ Because the road was steep and long
And through a dark and lonely land,
God set upon my lips a song
And put a lantern in my hand.
JOYCE KILMER, Love's Lantern.

⁶ In the ink of our sweat we will find it yet,
The song that is fit for men!
FREDERIC LAWRENCE KNOWLES, The Song.

⁷ He touch'd the tender stops of various quills,
With eager thought warbling his Doric lay.
MILTON, Lycidas, l. 183.

⁸ Sweetest the strain when in the song
The singer has been lost.
ELIZABETH STUART PHILIPS, The Poet and the Poem.

¹⁰ In Heaven a spirit doth dwell
Whose heart-strings are a lute;
None sing so wildly well
As the angel Israfael.
EDGAR ALLAN POE, Israfael.
And the angel Israfael, who has the sweetest voice of all God's creatures.

GEORGE SALE, Preliminary Discourse to the Koran, iv, 71. Often wrongly attributed to the Koran. Thomas Moore has the correct attribution in Lalla Rookh, pt. viii, l. 419, footnote; but Poe attributes it to the Koran, although he got it either from Sale, whose work he had reviewed, or from Moore. He interpolated the phrase, "whose heart-strings are a lute," which appears neither in the Koran, nor Sale, nor Moore, and which is undoubtedly his own. Thomas Holley Chivers, a Georgia physician and versifier, appropriated it, together with many other of Poe's phrases, and then alleged that Poe had stolen them from him. (See WOODSWORTH, Life of Poe, i, 180.)

¹¹ The sweet psalmist of Israel.
Old Testament: II Samuel, xxiii, 1.
¹² Scenes sung by him who sings no more!
His bright and brief career is o'er,
And mute his tuneful strains.
SCOTT, The Lord of the Isles, Canto iv, st. 11.

For him, no minstrel raptures swell.
SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel, Canto vi, l. 8.

Why then a final note prolong,
Or lengthen out a closing song?
SCOTT, Marmion: L'Envoi.

He ceased. But still their trembling ears retained
The deep vibrations of his witching song.
JAMES THOMSON, The Castle of Indolence,
Canto i, st. 20.

¹³ Sing, siren, for thyself.
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, Act III,
sc. 2, l. 47.

The Siren waits thee, singing song for song.
W. S. LANDOR, To Robert Browning.

¹⁴ Sing again, with your dear voice revealing
A tone
Of some world far from ours,
Where music and moonlight and feeling
Are one.
SHELLEY, To Jane.

¹⁵ And round thee with the breeze of song
To stir a little dust of praise.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam, Pt. lxiv.

Short swallow-flights of song, that dip
Their wings in tears, and skim away.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam, Pt. xlviii.

¹⁶ Swift, swift, and bring with you
Song's Indian summer!
FRANCIS THOMPSON, A Carrier Song, St. 2.

¹⁷ I do not sing unbidden. (Non in jussa cano.)
VENAN, Elogues, No. vi, l. 9.

¹⁸ Enough of mournful melodies, my lute!
Be henceforth joyous, or be henceforth mute.
Song's breath is wasted when it does but fan
The smouldering infelicity of muzz.
WILLIAM WATSON, Epigrams.

IX—Some Familiar Refrains and Choruses *

1
Tin Pan Alley.

MONROE H. ROSENFELD. Said to be the title of an article on the music business published by Rosenfeld in a New York newspaper about 1892. (See GOLDNER, Tin Pan Alley, p. 173.) Also claimed by Robert H. Duirée, who died at Carmel, Cal., 5 Oct., 1935 Just before his death, Duirée issued a statement to the press alleging that he had coined the phrase many years ago as a name for West Twenty-Eighth Street, then the home of many music publishing houses, while walking through the street with Eyes W. Sargent, dramatic critic for the New York Morning Telegraph, who used it in his paper next day. No date was given.

2
Mister Jefferson Lord, play that barber shop chord,

That soothing harmony, it makes an awful, awful hit with me.

Play that strain, just to please me, again, . . .
Oh, Lord, play that barber shop chord!

WILLIAM TRACEY, Play that Barber Shop Chord. (c. 1910) Music by Lewis Muir.

That strain again! It had a dying fall

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act I, sc. 1, l. 4. The willing harmonizer inevitably asks sooner or later, "What has quartet singing to do with a barber shop? . . . Whatever the historical association may be, anyone familiar with quartet singing knows "barber shop swipes" by ear. Those harmonies, generally moving in opposite directions while the melody stands still, are recognized by the musical treatises. But they are called by very different names, such as tonic, dominant and subdominant, of which the first alone has a truly tonorial fragrance.

SIGMUND SPAETH, Barber Shop Ballads: Preface.

I wonder who's kissing her now,
Wonder who's teaching her now,
Wonder who's looking into her eyes,
Breathing sighs, telling lies

FRANK R. ADAMS and WILL M. HOUGH, I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now (1909)
Music by J. E. Howard. First sung in a musical comedy, The Prince of To-night.

4
Take back the heart thou gavest,
What is my anguish to thee?
Take back the freedom thou cravest,
Leaving the fetters to me.

CHARLOTTE ALINGTON BARNARD (CLARIBEL),
Take Back the Heart (1860)

I'll be loving you, always, . . .

* This section is continued in the Appendix, and many other refrains and choruses will be found scattered throughout the book under appropriate headings. She Was Bred in Old Kentucky, for example, will be found under Kentucky, and so on. To find the refrain desired, consult the INDEX and CONCORDANCE for its key-word.

Not for just an hour,
Not for just a day,
Not for just a year, but always.

IRVING BERLIN, Always. (1925)
Everybody's doin' it now.

IRVING BERLIN. Title and refrain. (1911)

Remember we found a lonely spot,
And after I learned to care a lot,
You promised that you'd forget me not,
But you forgot to remember.

IRVING BERLIN, Remember. (1925)

What'll I do when you are far away
And I am blue, what'll I do, what'll I do?

IRVING BERLIN, What'll I Do. (1923)

East side, West side,
All around the town,
The tots sing "Ring-a-Rosie,
London Bridge is falling down";

Boys and girls together,
Me and Mamie Rourke,

Tripped the light fantastic
On the sidewalks of New York.

JAMES W. BLAKE, The Sidewalks of New York. (1894) Music by Charles B. Lawlor.
Used as a campaign song for Alfred E. Smith in the presidential campaign of 1928.

7
In de ebening by the moonlight, you could hear us darkies singing,
In de ebening by the moonlight, you could hear de banjo ringing;

How de old folks would enjoy it, they would sit all night and listen,
As we sang in the ebening by de moonlight.

JAMES A. BLAND, In the Evening by the Moonlight. (1880) Bland was a Virginia negro, and proclaimed himself to be "the best Ethiopian song-writer in the world," perhaps not an overstatement. The unforgettable Carry Me Back to Old Virginny was also his. See under VIRGINIA.

8
Bunch up your conversation, that's what I demand,

And don't forget you're talkin' to a Lady.
HENRY M. BLOSSOM, JR., Don't Forget You're Talking to a Lady (1902) Music by George A. Spink.

9
Get in your place and take a back seat,
Go way back and sit down.

ELMER BOWMAN, Go Way Back and Sit Down. (1901) Music by Al. Johns.

10
If you want to win her hand,
Let the maiden understand

That she's not the only pebble on the beach.
HENRY BRAISTAD, You're Not the Only Pebble on the Beach. (1896) Sung by the "Little Magnet," Lottie Gilson, for years.

11
When you ain't got no money, well you needn't come 'round.

CLARENCE S. BREWSTER. Title and refrain of song set to music by A. B. Sloane in 1898.

One of May Irwin's hits.

1 Oh, you beautiful doll!
SEYMOUR BROWN. Title and refrain. (1911)

2 Just for the sake of Society,
Baby is sad and lone,
Just for a thing called Propriety,
Mother's heart's turning to stone.
ALFRED BRYAN, Just for the Sake of Society.
(1904) Music by Kerry Mills. The terrible situation was that the heartless mother had gone to a ball, leaving her baby alone, and it fell into the fire and was burned to death.
Smother me with kisses, hon, and kill me with
love,
Wrap yourself around me like a serpent 'round
a dove.

ALFRED BRYAN, Smother Me with Kisses.
(1914) Music by Harry Carroll. Introduced by Lillian Lorraine at the New York Winter Garden.

Sometime, someday, somewhere,
Mid other scenes more fair,
Your eyes of blue my face will view,
And its sad look of care:
Because my heart was true,
To soothe my dark despair,
With glances sweet my gaze you'll meet,
Sometime, someday, somewhere.

ALFRED BRYAN, Sometime, Someday, Somewhere. (1903) Music by Al. Johns. See

3 The Rhine may be fine, but a cold stein for mine,
Down where the Wurzbürger flows.
VINCENT P. BRYAN, Down Where the Wurzburger Flows. (1902) Music by Harry Von Tilzer. Sung by the incomparable Nora Bayes, just entering vaudeville, who became known as "the Wurzbürger Girl." When she carried the song to London, the London Times asked "why she did not sing about the Thames" instead of some "western American stream."

Come, come, come, and make eyes with me,
Under the Anheuser Bush.
ANDREW B. STEKLING, *Under the Anheuser
Bush*. (1903) Music by Harry Von Tilzer.
Also popularized by Nora Bayes.

4 Tammany, Tammany,
Big Chief sits in his tepee,
Cheering braves to victory.
Tammany, Tammany,
Swamp 'em, swamp 'em, get the "wampum," Tammany.

VINCENT BRYAN, Tammany. (1905) Music by Gus Edwards. First sung at the annual smoker of the National Democratic Club of New York City in the fall of 1905. Afterwards introduced by Jefferson De Angelis

in Fantasia at the Lyric Theatre, New York City. Official song of Tammany Hall.

5 There are smiles that make us happy,
There are smiles that make us blue,
There are smiles that steal away the tea-
drops

As the sunbeams steal away the dew.
There are smiles that have a tender meaning
That the eyes of love alone may see,
But the smiles that fill my life with sunshine
Are the smiles that you give to me.
J. WILL CALLAHAN, Smiles. (c. 1917) Music
by Lee S. Roberts.

6 Member dat rainy eve dat I drove you out,
Wid nothing but a fine tooth comb?
I knows I'se to blame; well, ain't dat a shame?
Bill Bailey, won't you please come home?
HUGHIE CANNON, Bill Bailey, Won't You Please Come Home? (1902) Introduced by John
Queen in a farce comedy called *Town
Topics*, at Newburgh, N. Y., it quickly produced a whole crop of songs dealing with the troubles of the Bailey family; among them:

I wonder why Bill Bailey don't come home?
FRANK FOGERTY. Title and refrain. (1902)
I ain't got time to stay, I'll do no work this day,
'Cause I'm happy since Bill Bailey came back home.
BILLY JOHNSON, *Since Bill Bailey Came Back
Home*. (1902) Music by Seymour Furth.

7 You can't keep a good man down.
M. F. CAREY. Title and refrain. (1900)

8 'Tis years since last we met,
And we may not meet again;
I have struggled to forget,
But the struggle was in vain;
For her voice lives on the breeze,
And her spirit comes at will;
In the midnight on the seas,
Her bright smile haunts me still.
J. E. CARPENTER, *Her Bright Smile Haunts Me
Still*. (1893) Music by W. T. Wrightson.

9 So won't you grant me all my wishes,
Won't you sprinkle me with kisses,
If you want my love to grow?
EARL CARROLL, Sprinkle Me With Kisses.
(1915) Music by Ernest R. Ball. Sung by Evelyn Nesbit.

10 Then drill, ye Tarriers, drill,
Drill, ye Tarriers, drill,
Oh, it's work all day without sugar in your tay
When ye work beyant on the railway,
And drill, ye Tarriers, drill.

THOMAS F. CASEY, Drill, Ye Tarriers, Drill.
(1888) "Tarriers" was the name given unskilled Irish laborers in New York, engaged in drilling out rock in making excavations for new buildings. The song was introduced to the town in Hoyt's A Brass Monkey, which opened at the Bijou Theatre, 15 Oct., 1888, and instantly became popular.

1 Oh, Mandy Lee, I love you, 'deed I do, my Mandy Lee,
Your eyes they shine like diamonds, love, to
me.

THURLAND CHATTAWAY, Mandy Lee. (1899)

2 I'm sorry, dear, so sorry, dear,
I'm sorry I made you cry!
Won't you forget? won't you forgive?
Don't let us say good-bye!
One little word, one little smile,
One little kiss won't you try?
It breaks my heart to hear you sigh,
I'm sorry I made you cry!
N. J. CLESİ, I'm Sorry I Made You Cry.
(1918)

3 Too proud to beg, too honest to steal,
I know what it is to be wanting a meal;
My tatters and rags I try to conceal,
I'm one of the Shabby Genteel.
HARRY CLYTON, Shabby Genteel. (c. 1870)

4 I can't tell why I love you, but I do.
WILL D. COBB. Title and refrain. (1900)
I don't want money—don't you think that's funny?
Come closer, honey, I'll tell you true;
I don't want jewelry, fine clothes or foolery
When I grows up, I wants just you.
WILL D. COBB, I Don't Want Money. (1901)
Music by Gus Edwards.

SONNET

5 Rafael made a century of sonnets.
ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More. Sec. 2.

6 What is a sonnet? 'Tis the pearly shell
That murmurs of the far-off murmuring sea;
A precious jewel carved most curiously;
It is a little picture painted well.
RICHARD WATSON GILDER, The Sonnet.

7 There Sackville's sonnets sweetly sauced
And feafly fined be.
JASPER HEYWOOD, Metrical Preface to the Thyestes of Seneca.

8 For, of all compositions, be thought that the sonnet
Best repaid all the toil you expended upon it.
J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 368.

9 The sonnet is a trunk, and you must pack
With care, to ship frail baggage far away;
The octet is the trunk; sestet, the tray;

10 Tight, but not overloaded, is the knack.
CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Thoughts While Packing a Trunk.

A sonnet is a moment's monument,—
Memorial from the Soul's eternity
To one dead deathless hour.
D. G. ROSSETTI, The Sonnet.

11 A torturer of phrases into sonnets.
SCOTT, Auchincloss. Pt. iii, ch. 1.

12 I had rather than forty shillings I had my Book of Songs and Sonnets here.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act 1, sc. 1, l. 205.

13 Will you then write me a sonnet in praise of my beauty?
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
v, sc. 2, l. 4.

Deep-brain'd sonnets.
SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 209.

A halting sonnet of his own pure brain.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
v, sc. 4, l. 87.

14 The Sonnet is a world, where feelings caught
In webs of phantasy, combine and fuse
Their kindred elements 'neath mystic dews
Shed from the ether round man's dwelling wrought.

JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS, The Sonnet.

Spare thou no pains; carve thought's pure diamond
With fourteen facets, scattering fire and light.
JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS, The Sonnet.

Our Sonnet's world hath two fixed hemispheres:
This, where the sun with fierce strength masculine
Pours his keen rays and bids the noonday shine;
That, where the moon and the stars, concordant
powers,
Shed milder rays, and daylight disappears
In low melodious music of still hours.
JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS, The Sonnet.

15 A sonnet is a wave of melody:
From heaving waters of the impassioned soul
A billow of tidal music one and whole
Flows, in the "octave"; then, returning free,
Its ebbing surges in the "sestet" roll
Back to the depths of Life's tumultuous sea.
THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, The Sonnet's Voice.

16 Scorn not the Sonnet; Critic, you have frowned,
Mindless of its just honours; with this key
Shakespeare unlocked his heart; the melody
Of this small lute gave ease to Petrarch's wound; . . . and, when a damp
Fell round the path of Milton, in his hand
The Thing became a trumpet; whence he blew

Soul-animating strains—alas, too few!

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, Scorn Not the Sonnet.

"With this same key Shakespeare unlocked his heart," once more!
Did Shakespeare? If so, the less Shakespeare be!
ROBERT BROWNING, House. St. 10.

Shall I sonnet-sing you about myself?
Do I live in a house you would like to see?
Is it scant of gear, has it store of pelf?

"Unlock my heart with a sonnet key?"

No: thanking the public, I must decline.

ROBERT BROWNING, House. St. 1.

"Scorn not the sonnet," though its strength be sapped,

Nor say malignant its inventor blundered;
The corpse that here in fourteen lines is wrapped
Had otherwise been covered with a hundred.

RUSSELL H. LORNE, On a Magazine Sonnet.

I—Sorrow: Definitions

BYRON, Manfred. Act I, sc. 1.

'Tis held that sorrow makes us wise.

TENNISON, In Memoriam. Pt. cviii.

² For Sorrow's a woman a man may take
And know, till his heart and body break.
SAMUEL HOFFENSTEIN, Sorrow That Cries.

³ There is no wisdom in useless and hopeless sorrow, but there is something in it so like virtue, that he who is wholly without it cannot be loved.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Mrs. Thrale, 1781.

⁴ Sorrow is a kind of rust of the soul, which every new idea contributes in its passage to scour away.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 47.

⁵ Sorrow, the great idealizer.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: Spenser.

⁶ Our size of sorrow,
Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great
As that which makes it.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act IV,
sc. 15, l. 4.

Sorrow breaks seasons and reposing hours,
Makes the night morning, and the noon-tide
night.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act I, sc. 4, l. 76.

⁷ Sorrow is held the eldest child of sin.

JOHN WYATT, Duchess of Melfi. Act V, sc. 5.

Sorrow is good for nothing but sin.

⁹ Nothing comes to us too soon but sorrow.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Home.

¹⁰ The busy bee has no time for sorrow.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

Sorrow preys upon its solitude. . . .

The busy have no time for tears.

BYRON, The Two Foscari. Act IV, sc. 1.

¹¹ All sorrows are less with bread. (Los duelos con Pan son menos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. II, ch. 13.

Fat sorrow is better than lean sorrow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1507.

A lean sorrow is hardest to bear.

SARA ORNE JEWETT, Life of Nancy, p. 278.

There are few sorrows, however poignant, in which a good income is of no avail.

LOGAN PEARSON SMITH, Afterthoughts.

¹² If you wish to live a life free from sorrow, think of what is going to happen as if it had already happened.

EPICURUS, Fragments. No. 158.

Why should we Anticipate our sorrows? 'Tis like those
That die for fear of death.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, The Sophy.

To grieve for evils is often wrong; but it is much more wrong to grieve without them.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letters. Vol. II, p. 23.

Smit with exceeding sorrow unto Death.

TENNISON, The Lover's Tale, l. 590.

¹⁶ The world will never be long without some good reason to hate the unhappy.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Adventurer. No. 99.

¹⁷ We often console ourselves for being unhappy by a certain pleasure in appeasing so.
(On se console souvent d'être malheureux) par un certain plaisir qu'on trouve à le paraître.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées.
No. 573.

1 Humanity is fortunate, because no man is unhappy except by his own fault. (Bono loco res humanæ sunt, quod nemo nisi vitio suo miser est.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, 15.

2 I cannot sing: I'll weep, and word it with
thee;

For notes of sorrow out of tune are worse
Than priests and fanes that lie.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 240.

3 More in sorrow than in anger.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 232.

4 Hysterica passio, down, thy climbing sorrow.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 58.

All's cheerless, dark, and deadly.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 290.

Affliction may one day smile again; and till then,
sit thee down, sorrow!

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc.
1, l. 316.

5 To show an unfelt sorrow is an office
Which the false man does easy.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 142.

6 Past sorrows, let us moderately lament them;
For those to come, seek wisely to prevent them.

JOHN WEBSTER, Duchess of Malfi. Act iii, sc. 2.

III—Sorrow: A Blessing

7 The path of sorrow, and that path alone,
Leads to the land where sorrow is unknown;
No traveller ever reach'd that blest abode
Who found not thorns and briars in his road.

COWPER, An Epistle to a Protestant Lady in France, l. 9.

8 Who ne'er his bread in sorrow ate,
Who ne'er the mournful midnight hours
Weeping upon his bed has sate,
He knows you not, ye Heavenly Powers.
(Wer nie sein Brod mit Thränen ass,
Wer nie die kummervollen Nächte
Auf seinem Bette weinend sass,
Der kennt euch nicht, ihr himmlischen Mächte.)

GOETHE, Wilhelm Meister. Bk. ii, ch. 13.

(Longfellow, tr., used as the motto for Hyperion. Bk. i.)

9 I walked a mile with Sorrow
And ne'er a word said she;
But, oh, the things I learned from her

When Sorrow walked with me.

ROBERT B. HAMILTON, Along the Road.

10 How beautiful, if sorrow had not made
Sorrow more beautiful than Beauty's self.

KEATS, Hyperion. Bk. i, l. 35.

Come then, Sorrow! Sweetest Sorrow!
Like an own babe I nurse thee on my breast:
I thought to leave thee, And deceive thee,
But now of all the world I love thee best.

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. iv, l. 279.

11 A grace within his soul hath reigned
Which nothing else can bring;
Thank God for all that I have gained
By that high sorrowing.

RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, Sorrow.

Do not cheat thy heart and tell her
"Grief will pass away,
Hope for fairer times in future,
And forget to-day."

Tell her, if you will, that sorrow
Need not come in vain;

Tell her that the lesson taught her
Far outweighs the pain.

ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, Friend Sorrow.

12 This sorrow's heavenly;
It strikes where it doth love.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 21.

13 All pains are nothing in respect of this,
All sorrows short that gain eternal bliss.
EDMUND SPENSER, Amoretti. Sonnet lxii.

14 Lives there whom pain hath evermore pass'd by

And sorrow shunned with an averted eye?
Him do thou pity, him above the rest,
Him of all hopeless mortals most unblest'd.

WILLIAM WATSON, Epigrams.

15 A soul, by force of sorrows high,
Uplifted to the purest sky
Of undisturbed humanity!

WORDSWORTH, The White Doe of Rylstone.
Canto ii, l. 585.

IV—Sorrow: Its Relief

16 Sing away sorrow, cast away care.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 8.

17 For 'tis some ease our sorrows to reveal
If they to whom we shall impart our woes,
Seem but to feel a part of what we feel,
And meet us with a sigh, but at the close.

SAMUEL DANIEL, The Tragedy of Cleopatra.
Act iv, sc. 1.

Some ease it is hid sorrows to declare.

FRANCIS DAVISON, A Complaint.

So sorrow is cheered by being poured
From one vessel into another.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kipling's: Her Misery.

PETRONIUS, Fragments. No. 121.

⁵ Wherever sorrow is, relief would be.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 5, 86.

⁶ For gnarling sorrow hath less power to bite

The man that mocks at it and sets it light.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 3, l. 292.

Fell sorrow's tooth doth never rankle more

Than when it bites, but lanceth not the sore.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 3, l. 302.

In wooing sorrow let's be brief,

Since, wedding it, there is such length in grief.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 1, l. 93.

⁷ If sorrow can admit society,

Tell o'er your woes again by viewing mine.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 38.

⁸ Sorrow concealed, like an oven stopp'd,

Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act ii, sc. 4, 36.

⁹ To weep with them that weep doth ease some deal;

But sorrow flouted at is double death.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act iii, sc. 1, 245.

¹⁰ Stay but to-morrow, and your present sorrow will be weary, and will lie down to rest.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Sermons. Vol. i, p. 327.

V—Sorrow: The Common Lot

¹¹ Why waste a word, or let a tear escape,
While other sorrows wait you in the world?

ROBERT BROWNING, Salutation's Adventure.

¹² How selfish Sorrow ponders on the past,

And clings to thoughts now better far removed!

BRONN, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 96.

¹³ But sorrow return'd with the dawning of morn,

And the voice in my dreaming ear melted away.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Soldier's Dream.

¹⁴ Men die, but sorrow never dies;

The crowding years divide in vain,

And the wide world is knit with ties

Of common brotherhood in pain.

SUSAN COOLIDGE, The Cradle Tomb in Westminster Abbey.

But when I came to Heartbreak Hill,

Silver touched the sea;

I knew that many and many a soul

Was climbing close to me;

I knew I walked that weary way

In a great company.

HELEN GRAY CONE, Heartbreak Road.

¹⁵ When I was young, I said to Sorrow,

"Come, and I will play with thee!"

He is near me now all day,

And at night returns to say,

"I will come again to-morrow—

I will come and stay with thee."

AUBREY DE VIRE, Song: When I Was Young.

¹⁶ Heavy the sorrow that bows the head

When love is alive and hope is dead!

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act 1.

¹⁷ To each his sufferings; all are men,

Condemn'd alike to groan,—

The tender for another's pain,

Th' unfeeling for his own.

Yet ah! why should they know their fate?

Since sorrow never comes too late.

THOMAS GRAY, On a Distant Prospect of Eton College, l. 91.

¹⁸ Sorrows our portion are: ere hence we go,

Crosses we must have; or, hereafter, woe.

ROBERT HERRICK, Sorrows.

¹⁹ When sparrows build and the leaves break forth

My old sorrow wakes and cries.

JEAN INGLETON, Supper at the Mill: Mother's Song.

²⁰ O, sorrow! Why dost borrow

Heart's lightness from the merriment of

May?

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. iv, l. 164.

To Sorrow I bade good-morrow,

And thought to leave her far away behind;

But cheerly, cheerly, She loves me dearly;

She is so constant to me, and so kind.

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. iv, l. 173.

1 I have a silent sorrow here,
A grief I'll ne'er impart.

KOTZKE, The Stranger. Act iv, sc. 1.

2 Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by? behold, and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow.

Old Testament: Lamentations, i, 12.
Much then I learned and much can show
Of human guilt and human woe,
Yet ne'er have in my wanderings known
A wretch whose sorrows matched my own!
SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto iv, st. 23.

3 Believe me, every man has his secret sorrows, which the world knows not; and oftentimes we call a man cold when he is only sad.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. iii, ch. 4.

Into each life some rain must fall,
Some days must be dark and dreary.

LONGFELLOW, The Rainy Day.
Nor indolence, nor pleasure, nor the fret
Of restless passions that would not be stilled,
But sorrow, and a care that almost killed,
Kept me from what I may accomplish yet.
LONGFELLOW, Mezzo Cammin.

4 Our days and nights
Have sorrows woven with delights.

6 A weary lot is thine, fair maid,
A weary lot is thine!
To pull the thorn thy brow to braid,
And press the rue for wine!
SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto iii, st. 28.

7 There is no day without sorrow. (Nulla dies merore caret.)
SENeca, Troades, l. 77.

Each new morn
New widows howl, new orphans cry, new sorrows
Strike heaven on the face.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 4.

8 When sorrows come, they come not single spies,
But in battalions!
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. v, l. 78. See also under MISFORTUNE, 1322:5.

9 O, if thou teach me to believe this sorrow,
Teach thou this sorrow how to make me die.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 29.

I will instruct my sorrows to be proud;
For grief is proud and makes his owner stoop.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 68.
Here I and sorrows sit;

Here is my throne, bid kings come bow to it.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 73.

10 But now will canker sorrow eat my bud,
And chase the native beauty from his cheek.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 82.

Hath sorrow struck
So many blows upon this face of mine,
And made no deeper wounds?
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 277.

11 Storming her world with sorrow's wind and rain.
SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 7.

Ab, do not, when my heart hath 'scaped this sorrow,
Come in the rearward of a conquer'd woe;
Give not a windy night a rainy morrow,
To linger out a purposed overthrow.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xc.

12 I have, as when the sun doth light a storm,
Buried this sigh in wrinkle of a smile:
But sorrow, that is couch'd in seeming gladness,
Is like that mirth fate turns to sudden sadness.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act I, sc. 1, l. 37.

13 Sorrow so royally in you appears,
That I will deeply put the fashion on.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 2, l. 51.

14 It stirs
Too much of suffocating sorrow!
SHELLEY, Rosalind and Helen, l. 66.

15 O Sorrow, wilt thou rule my blood,
Be sometimes lovely like a bride,
And put thy harsher moods aside,
If thou wilt have me wise and good?
TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lix, st. 2.

Your sorrow, only sorrow's shade,
Keeps real sorrow far away.
TENNYSON, Margaret. St. 4.

16 Some natural sorrow, loss, or pain,
That has been, and may be again.
WORDSWORTH, The Solitary Reaper, l. 23.

SOUL

I—Soul: Definitions

17 Soul is the Man.
THOMAS CAMPION, Are You What You Fair Looks Express?

18 The soul of man is larger than the sky,
Deeper than ocean, or the abyssal dark
Of the unfathom'd centre.
HARTLEY COLLENDER, To Shakespeare.

19 A soul,—a spark of the never-dying flame that separates man from all the other beings of earth.

J. FARMER COOPER, Afloat and Ashore. Ch. 12.

Our souls sit close and silently within,
And their own web from their own entrails spin;

And when eyes meet far off, our sense is such,
That, spider-like, we feel the tenderest touch.
DARWIN, Marriage à la Mode. Act ii, sc. 1.

The Supreme Critic on the errors of the past and the present, and the only prophet of that which must be, is that great nature in which we rest as the earth lies in the soft arms of the atmosphere; that Unity, that Over-Soul, within which every man's particular being is contained and made one with all other.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: The Over-Soul.

The one thing in the world, of value, is the active soul.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: The American Scholar.

Whether or not the philosophers care to admit that we have a soul, it seems obvious that we are equipped with something or other which generates dreams and ideals, and which sets up values.

JOHN ESKRINE. (DURANT, On the Meaning of Life, p. 39.)

By the word soul, or psyche, I mean that inner consciousness which aspires. By prayer I do not mean a request preferred to a deity;
I mean . . . intense aspiration.

RICHARD JEFFERIS, The Story of My Heart.

The soul's a sort of sentimental wife,
That prays and whimpers of the higher life.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, The Decadent to His Soul.

For every soul is a circus,
And every mind is a tent,
And every heart is a sawdust ring
Where the circling race is spent.

VACHEL LINDSAY, Every Soul is a Circus.

Hands of invisible spirits touch the strings
Of that mysterious instrument, the soul,
And play the prelude of our fate.
The voice prophetic, and are not alone.

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act i, sc. 3, l. 111.

Men do not know what the nature of the soul is, whether it is engendered with us or whether it is infused into us at our birth; whether it perishes with us, dissolved by death, or whether it haunts the gloomy shades and bottomless pits of Orcus, or whether, by divine influence, it infuses itself into other animals.

(Ignoratur enim, quæ sit natura animæ;
Nata sit, an contra nascentibus insinuetur;
Et simul intereat nobiscum, morte diremta;
An tenebras Orci visat, vastasque lacunas:
An pecudes alias divinitus insinuet se.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. i, l. 113.

So the soul cannot exist separate from the body, and the man himself, whose body seems as it were the urn of the soul.

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 553.

My mind is incapable of conceiving such a thing as a soul. I may be in error, and man may have a soul; but I simply do not believe it.

THOMAS A. EMERSON, Do We Live Again?

Nobody knows how the idea of a soul or the supernatural started. It probably had its origin in the natural laziness of mankind.

JOHN B. WATSON, Behaviorism, p. 3.

A soul is a troublesome possession, and when man developed it he lost the Garden of Eden.

SOMERSET MAUGHAM, Red.

The soul on earth is an immortal guest,
Compelled to starve at an unreal feast.

HANNAH MORE, Reflections of King Hezekiah,
l. 125.

There is a divinity within our breast. (Deus est in pectore nostro.)

OVID, Epistula ex Ponto. Bk. iii, epla. 4, l. 93.

Of all things which a man has, next to the gods, his soul is the most divine and most truly his own.

PLATO, Laws. Bk. iv, sec. 252.

The soul has in itself a capacity for affection,
and loves just as naturally as it perceives, understands, and remembers.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 7.

Do you ask where the Supreme Good dwells?
In the soul. And unless the soul be pure and holy, there is no room in it for God. (Quis sit summi boni locus queris? Animus. Hic nisi purus ac sanctus est, deum non capit.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epist. 87, 21.

The soul is more powerful than any sort of fortune; . . . of its own power it can produce a happy life, or a wretched one. (Valentior enim omni fortuna animus est.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epist. 98, 2.

The soul is our king. (Rex noster est animus.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epist. 114, 24.

The soul has this proof of its divinity: that divine things delight it. (Animus hoc habet argumentum divinitatis sue, quod illum divina delectant.)

SENECA, Naturales Questiones. Bk. i, Praefatio.

Mine eternal jewel.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 68.

1 My soul is an enchanted Boat,
Which, like a sleeping swan, doth float
Upon the silver waves of thy sweet singing;
And thine doth like an Angel sit
Beside the helm conducting it,
Whilst all the winds with melody are ringing.
SHELLY, Prometheus Unbound. Act II, sc. 5, l. 72.

2 The human soul is a silent harp in God's quire, whose strings need only to be swept by the divine breath to chime in with the harmonies of creation.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 10 Aug., 1838.

The soul has that measureless pride which revolts from every lesson but its own.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Prudence, l. 43.

3 What then do you call your soul? What idea have you of it? You cannot of yourselves, without revelation, admit the existence within you of anything but a power unknown to you of feeling and thinking.

VOLTAIRE, A Philosophical Dictionary: Soul.

4 But who would force the Soul tilts with a straw
Against a Champion cased in adamant.

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. III, 7.

For the Gods approve
The depth, and not the tumult, of the soul.

WORDSWORTH, Lodamia, l. 75. Emerson (Uncollected Lectures: Natural Religion) attributes this to Socrates. See 913:19.

5 Amazing pomp! redouble this amaze;
Ten thousand add; add twice ten thousand
more;

Then weigh the whole; one soul outweighs them all.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night VII, l. 995.

6 And I have written three books on the soul,
Proving absurd all written hitherto,
And putting us to ignorance again.

ROBERT BROWNING, Cleon, l. 57.

II—Soul: Apothegms

7 My soul still flies above me for the quarry it shall find.

WILLIAM ROSE BENT, The Falconer of God.

8 The soul's Rialto bath its merchandise;
I barter curl for curl upon that mart.

E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese. No. xix.

And he that makes his soul his surety,
I think, does give the best security.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. III, canto I, l. 203.

When by habit a man cometh to have a bargaining soul, its wings are cut so that it can never soar.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 253.

Most people sell their souls and live with a good conscience on the proceeds.

13 Why do you hasten to remove anything which hurts your eye, while if something affects your soul, you postpone the cure until next year?

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. I, epia. 2, l. 38.

14 Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.

New Testament: Luke, XII, 19; Ecclesiastes,
VIII, 15. See also under EATING.

15 For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?

New Testament: Matthew, XVI, 26.

16 Ah, what a dusty answer gets the soul
When hot for certainties in this our life!

GEORGE MEREDITH, Modern Love, St. 50.

Dusty Answer.

ROSAMOND LEHMAN. Title of novel.

17 Lack of wealth is easily repaired; but poverty of soul is irreparable. (La pauvreté des biens est aisée à guerir; la pauvreté de l'âme, impossible.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. III, ch. 10.

18 I will hew great windows for my soul.

2
Would you damn your precious soul?
RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v. ch. 54.
Well, God's above all; and there be souls must be saved, and there be souls must not be saved.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 105.
Thinkst thou I'll endanger my soul gratis?
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 16.

3
Poor men have no souls.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

4
My soul to-day is far away
Sailing the Vesuvian Bay.
THOMAS BUCHANAN READ, Drifting.

5
Now my soul hath elbow-room.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act v, sc. 7, l. 28.

7
No seed shall perish which the soul hath sown.
JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS, Sonnet: A Belief.

8
Star to star vibrates light; may soul to soul
Strike thro' a finer element of her own?
TENNYSON, Aylmer's Field, l. 578.

9
Be careless in your dress if you must, but keep a tidy soul.

10
MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

I played with fire, did counsel spurn, . . .
But never thought that fire would burn,
Or that a soul could ache.

HENRY VAUGHAN, Garland. (1655)

My soul is all an aching void.

CHARLES WESLEY, Hymns.

No craving void left aching in the breast.
POPE, Eliza to Abelard, l. 94.

XII—Souls: Good and Bad

11
Calm Soul of all things! make it mine
To feel, amid the city's jar,
That there abides a place of thine,
Man did not make, and can not mar!
MATTHEW ARNOLD, Lines Written in Kensington Gardens, l. 37.

12
A soul as white as Heaven.
BRAVEMONT AND FLETCHER, The Maid's Tragedy. Act iv, sc. 1.

The man who in this world can keep the whiteness of his soul, is not likely to lose it in any other.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp. Ch. 1.

God help all poor souls lost in the dark.
ROBERT BROWNING, Heretic's Tragedy. St. 10.
'T is an awkward thing to play with souls,
And matter enough to save one's own.
ROBERT BROWNING, A Light Woman.

14
I trust in my own soul, that can perceive
The outward and the inward, Nature's good And God's.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Soul's Tragedy. Act 1.

15
Of what avail to have a soul derived from above, and to lift the head on high, if, after the manner of beasts, men go astray? (Quid mentem traxisse polo, quid profuit altum
Exerxisse caput, pecudum si more pererrant?)
CLAUDIAN, De Raptu Proserpinae. Bk. iii, l. 41.

Two souls, alas! reside within my breast,
And each withdraws from and repels its brother.

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. 1, sc. 2. (Taylor, tr.)

I feel two natures struggling within me.
GEORGE GRAY BARNARD, Title of group of statuary.

The lark soars up in the air,
The toad sits tight in his hole;
And I would I were certain which of the pair
Were the truer type of my soul!
F. ARSTEX, Stanza Written in Depreiston Near Dulwich.

In me there meet a combination of antithetical elements which are at eternal war with one another.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act 1.

17
Awake, my Soul, and with the Sun,
Thy daily stage of Duty run;
Shake off dull Sloth, and early rise,
To pay thy Morning Sacrifice.

BENNET THOMAS KEN, Morning Hymn. (1695)

Build thee more stately mansions, O my soul,
As the swift seasons roll!
Leave thy low-vaulted past!

Let each new temple, nobler than the last,
Shut thee from heaven with a dome more vast,
Till thou at length art free,
Leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresting 208!

O. W. HOLMES, The Chambered Nautilus.

18
I count that soul exceeding small
That lives alone by book and creed,—
A soul that has not learned to read.
JOAQUIN MILLER, The Larger College.

Ah! there be souls none understand;
Like clouds, they cannot touch the land.
Unanchored ships, they blow and blow,
Sail to and fro, and then go down
In unknown seas that none shall know,
Without one ripple of renown.

Call these not fools; the test of worth
Is not the hold you have of earth.
Ay, there are gentlest souls sea-blown
That know not any harbor known.
Now it may be the reason is,
They touch on fairer shores than this.

JOAQUIN MILLER, The Ship in the Desert, xxi.

19
There was a little Man, and he had a little Soul;

And he said, "Little Soul, let us try, try, try!"

THOMAS MOORE, Little Men and Little Soul.

The soul's calm sunshine and the heartfelt joy.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epist. iv, l. 168.

The soul alone renders us noble. (Animus facit nobilem.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epist. xlv, 5.

Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul;
And there I see such black and grained spots
As will not leave their tinct.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 89.

The soul of man is like the rolling world,
One half in day, the other dipt in night;
The one has music and the flying cloud,
The other, silence and the wakeful stars.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Horion.

My soul is a dark ploughed field
In the cold rain;

My soul is a broken field
Ploughed by pain.

SARA TEASDALE, The Broken Field.

A sinful soul possess'd of many gifts,
A spacious garden full of flowering weeds.

TENNYSON, To —.

What profits now to understand
The merits of a spotless shirt—

A dapper boot—a little hand—

If half the little soul is dirt.

TENNYSON, The New Timon and the Poets.
(Published in Punch, 28 Feb., 1846, in answer to attack made by Bulwer-Lytton in The New Timon when Tennyson received a pension.)

"Two things," the wise man said, "fill me with awe:

The starry heavens and the moral law."

Nay, add another wonder to thy roll—

The living marvel of the human soul!

HENRY VAN DYKE, Stars and the Soul. A reference to Kant. See 1914:8.

And keeps that palace of the soul serene.

EDMUND WALLER, O! Tea, l. 9.

The palace of the soul.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 6. See also under SKULL.

A charge to keep I have,

A God to glorify;

A never-dying soul to save,

And fit it for the sky.

CHARLES WESLEY, Christian Fidelity.

IV—Soul and Body

To man, propose this test—

Thy body at its best,

How far can it project thy soul on its lone way?

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Esra. St. 8.

Whoe'er thou art, O reader, know
That Death has murdered Johnny!

And here his body lies fu' low—

For saul he ne'er had ony.

ROBERT BURNS, On Wee Johnny. John Wilson, the printer of Burns's poems, at Kilmar-nock.

A fiery soul, which working out its way,

Fretted the pigmy body to decay,

And o'er informed the tenement of clay.

DAYDEN, Abraham and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 156.

He was one of a lean body and visage, as if his eager soul, biting for anger at the clog of his body, desired to fret a passage through it.

THOMAS FULLER, Life of the Duke of Alva.

For the sword outwears its sheath,

And the soul wears out the breast.

BYRON, So We'll Go No More a-Roving.

Though a sound body cannot restore an un-sound mind, yet a good soul can, by its virtue, render the body the best possible.

EMERSON, Representative Men; Plato. See also MIND AND BODY.

It is much more necessary to cure the soul than the body, for death is better than a bad life. (Ψυχῆς σώματος ἀναγκαστικὸν ἰατρὸν τοῦ γὰρ κακὸς ὧν τοῦ τοῦ σώματος κρείσσον.)

EPICETUS (?), Encheiridion. Frag. 32.

The soul needs few things, the body many.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

The body is sooner dressed than the soul.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

The body, laden with yesterday's vices, drags down the soul as well, and fastens to the earth a fragment of the divine spirit. (Corpus onustum Hesternis vitiis animum quoque prægravat una Atque adûgit humo divinæ particulam auræ.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 77.

The limbs will quiver and move after the soul is gone.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (NORTHCOLE, Johnsoniana, p. 487.)

There is nothing the body suffers that the soul may not profit by.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways. Ch. i.

The soul is nothing apart from the senses.

PROTAGORAS. (DIOGENES LAËRTIUS, Protagoras. Bk. ix, sec. 51.)

The body is the socket of the soul.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

The perfect body is itself the soul.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Before a Statue of Achilles.

It is the soul, and not the strong-box, which should be filled. (Animum impleri debere, non arcam.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucillum. Epist. xcii, sec. 32.

1
So every spirit, as it is more pure,
And bath in it the more of heavenly light,
So it the fairer body doth procure
To habit in, and it more fairly dight,
With cheerful grace and amiable sight.
For, of the soul, the body form doth take,
For soul is form, and doth the body make.

EDMUND SPENSER, Hymn in Honour of Beauty, l. 127.

For what is form, or what is face,
But the soul's index, or its case?

NATHANIEL COTTON, Pleasure.

How should I gauge what beauty is her dole,
Who cannot see her countenance for her soul,
As birds see not the casement for the sky?
And as 'tis check they prove its presence by,
I know not of her body till I find
My flight debarred the heaven of her mind.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Her Portrait.

3
Our life is but the Soul made known by its fruits, the body. The whole duty of man may be expressed in one line: Make to yourself a perfect body.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 21 June, 1840.

V—Soul: The Unconquered Soul

4
No coward soul is mine,
No trembler in the world's storm-troubled sphere:

I see Heaven's glories shine,
And faith shines equal, arming me from fear.
EMILY BRONTË, Last Verses.

5
My feet are heavy now but on I go,
My head erect beneath the tragic years.

JOHN DAVIDSON, I Felt the World A-spinning on Its Nave.

6
The soul selects her own society,
Then shuts the door;
On her divine majority
Obtrude no more.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. I, No. 13.

7
Let fortune empty her whole quiver on me.
I have a soul that, like an ample shield,
Can take in all, and verge enough for more.

DAYTON, Don Sebastian. Act I, sc. I.

8
Give ample room, and verge enough.
THOMAS GRAY, The Bard, l. 51.

9
Out of the night that covers me,
Black as the pit from pole to pole,
I thank whatever gods may be
For my unconquerable soul.

W. E. HENLEY, Invictus.

Out of the light that dazzles me,
Bright as the sun from pole to pole,
I thank the God I know to be
For Christ, the Conqueror of my soul.
DOROTHEA DAY, Victas.

Dame Nature doubtless has designed
A man the monarch of his mind.
JOHN BYRON, Careless Content.

10
It matters not how strait the gate,
How charged with punishments the scroll,
I am the master of my fate:
I am the captain of my soul.
W. E. HENLEY, Invictus.

I am the captain of my soul;
I rule it with stern joy;
And yet I think I had more fun
When I was cabin boy.
KEITH PRESTON, An Awful Responsibility.

Arise, O Soul, and gird thee up anew,
Though the black camel Death kneel at thy
gate;
No beggar thou that thou for alms shouldst sue:
Be the proud captain still of thine own fate.
JAMES B. KENYON, The Black Camel.

Mistress of mine own self and mine own soul.
TENNYSON, The Foresters. Act IV, sc. 1.
See also under SELF-CONTROL.

11
God gave thy soul brave wings; put not those feathers

Into a bed, to sleep out all ill weathers.
GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 14.

12
Only a sweet and virtuous soul,
Like seasoned timber, never gives,
But though the whole world turn to coal,
Then chiefly lives.
GEORGE HERBERT, Virtue.

13
A frame of adamant, a soul of fire,
No dangers fright him, and no labours tire.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, *The Vanity of Human
Wishes*, l. 191.

14
Give thanks, O heart, for the high souls
That point us to the deathless goals. . . .
The company of souls supreme
The conscripts of the Mighty Dream. . . .
Brave souls that took the perilous trail
And felt the vision could not fail.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Conscripts of the Dream.

15
Lord of myself, accountable to none.
But to my conscience, and my God alone,
JOHN OLINGHAM, Salute Addressed to a Friend.

16
Make thee a soul that will abide; only that endures to the end. (Iam molire animum, qui duret; . . . Solus ad extremos permanet ille rogos.)

OVIN, Ars Amatoria. Bk. II, l. 119.

¹ 'Tis my soul
That I thus hold erect as if with stays,
And decked with daring deeds instead of ribbons.

EDMOND ROSTAND, Cyrano de Bergerac. Act i,
sc. 4.

² I love a soul not all of wood,
Predestined to be good,
But true to the backbone
Unto itself alone
And false to none;
Born to its own affairs,
Its own joys and own cares;
By which the work that God begun
Is finished, and not undone.

H. D. THOREAU, Conscience.

³ They have mighty souls beating in narrow breasts. (Ingentes animos angusto in corpore versant.)

VIRGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 83.

Little bodies have great souls.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

What a mighty soul in a narrow bosom. (Welch höher Geist in einer engen Brust.)

GOETHE, Torquato Tasso. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 199.

⁴ What do you suppose will satisfy the soul,
except to walk free and own no superior?
WALT WHITMAN, Laves for Creations.

Ever the undiscouraged, resolute, struggling soul of man; . . .

Ever the soul dissatisfied, curious, unconvinced
at last;

Struggling to-day the same—battling the same.
WALT WHITMAN, Life.

O my brave soul! O farther farther sail!
O daring joy, but safe! are they not all the seas of God?

O farther, farther, farther sail!
WALT WHITMAN, Passage to India. Sec. 9.

⁵ And the most difficult of tasks to keep Heights which the soul is competent to gain.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 138.

VI.—Soul: Its Last Journey

⁶ To-day the journey is ended,
I have worked out the mandates of fate;
Naked, alone, undefended,
I knock at the Uttermost Gate.
Behind is life and its longing,
Its trial, its trouble, its sorrow,
Beyond is the Infinite Morning
Of a day without a to-morrow.

WENONAH STEVENS ABBOTT, A Soul's Soliloquy.

⁷ There's a quiet harbor somewhere
For the poor a-weary soul.
H. H. BROWNELL, The Burial of the Dead.

⁸ A happy soul, that all the way

To heaven hath a summer day. . . .
And, when life's sweet fable ends,
Soul and body part like friends:—
No quarrels, murmurs, no delay;
A kiss, a sigh, and so away.

RICHARD CRASHAW, In Praise of Lessius's
Rules of Health, l. 33.

⁹ Gentle little soul, hastening away, my body's guest and comrade, whither goest thou now, pale, fearful, pensive, not jesting, as of old?
(Animula, vagula, blandula
Hospes comesque corporis,
Quæ nunc abibis in loca,
Pallidula, rigida, nudula,
Nec, ut soles, dabis joca?)

HADRIAN, Morientis, Ad Animam Suam
(ÆLIUS SPARTIANUS, Life of the Emperor Hadrian.)

Ah! gentle, fleeting, wav'ring sprite,
Friend and associate of this clay!
To what unknown region borne,
Wilt thou now wing thy distant flight?
No more with wonted humour gay,
But pallid, cheerless, and forlorn.

HADRIAN, Ad Animam Suam. (Byron, tr.)

Vital spark of heavenly flame,
Quit, oh quit, this mortal frame!
Trembling, hoping, ling'ring, flying,
Oh, the pain, the bliss of dying! . . .
Hark! they whisper; angels say,
Sister Spirit, come away!

POPE, The Dying Christian to His Soul. (The Spectator, 15 Nov., 1711.)

Poor little pretty, fluttering thing,
Must we no longer live together?
And dost thou prune thy trembling wing,
To take thy flight thou know'st not whither?
Thy humorous vein, thy pleasing folly
Lies all neglected, all forgot:
And pensive, wavering, melancholy,
Thou dread'st and hop'st thou know'st not what.

HADRIAN, Ad Animam Suam. (Prior, tr.)

Ma petite âme, ma mignonne,
Tu t'en vas donc, ma fille, et Dieu sache où tu
vas:

Tu pars seulette, nuë, et tremblotante, hélas!
Que deviendra ton humeur folichonne!
Que deviendront tant de jolis ébats!

HADRIAN, Ad Animam Suam. (Fontanella, tr.)
Prior quotes Fontanella's version before his own.

¹⁰ Ah, the souls of those that die
Are but sunbeams lifted higher.
LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. iv:
The Cloisters, l. 19.

The dust's for crawling, heaven's for flying,
Wherefore, O Soul, whose wings are grown,
Soar upward to the sun!
EDGAR LEE MASTERS, The Spoon River An- thology: Julian Scott.

¹¹ Return unto thy rest, my soul,

From all the wanderings of thy thought,
From sickness unto death made whole,
Safe through a thousand perils brought.
JAMES MONTGOMERY, Rest for the Soul.

¹ I reflected, how soon in the cup of Desire
The pearl of the soul may be melted away;
How quickly, alas, the pure sparkle of fire
We inherit from heav'n, may be quenched in the clay.
THOMAS MOORE, Stanzas.

² My soul, the seas are rough, and thou a stranger
In these false coasts; O keep aloof; there's danger;
Cast forth thy plummet; see, a rock appears;
Thy ship wants sea-room; make it with thy tears.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. li, No. 11.

³ Go, Soul, the Body's guest,
Upon a thankless errand:
Fear not to touch the best,
The truth shall be thy warrant:
Go, since I needs must die,
And give the World the lie.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Lie. Probably written by Raleigh during his imprisonment, 1592. Found in a manuscript of 1593.
Has also been attributed to Sir John Davies, Joshua Sylvester, Lord Pembroke and Richard Edwards.

Tell zeal, it lacks devotion;
Tell love, it is but lust;
Tell time, it is but motion;
Tell flesh, it is but dust!
And wish them not reply,
For thou must give the lie.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Lie.

Yet stab at thee that will,
No stab the soul can kill!

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Lie.

⁴ And the souls mounting up to God
Went by her like thin flames.

D. G. ROSSETTI, The Blessed Damsel.

⁵ Her soul from earth to Heaven lies,
Like the ladder of the vision,
Whither go To and fro,
In ascension and demission,
Star-dusted feet of Paradise.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Scala Jacobi Portaque Eburnea.

VII—Soul: Transmigration

⁶ Animals share with us the privilege of having a soul.

PYTHAGORAS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras.
Bk. viii, sec. 13.)

The soul, bound now in this creature, now in that, goes on a round ordained of necessity.

PYTHAGORAS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras.
Bk. viii, sec. 14.)

I was Euphorbus at the siege of Troy.

PYTHAGORAS.

When I was a shepherd on the plains of Assyria.
THEOPHAST.

⁷ Our souls are deathless, and ever, when they have left their former seat, do they live in new abodes and dwell in the bodies that have received them. (Morte carent animæ sem-perque priore relicta Sede novis domibus vivunt habitantque receptæ.)

OVIN, Metamorphoses. Bk. xv, l. 158.

⁸ The soul is immortal, and is clothed successively in many bodies.

PLATO. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Plato. Sec. 40.)

I hold that when a person dies
His soul returns again to earth;
Attired in some new flesh-disguise
Another mother gives him birth.
With sturdier limbs and brighter brain
The old soul takes the roads again.

JOHN MARSHFIELD, A Creed.

⁹ Thou almost makest me waver in my faith
To hold opinion with Pythagoras,
That souls of animals infuse themselves
Into the trunks of men.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
iv, sc. 2, l. 130.

Clown: What is the opinion of Pythagoras concerning wildfowl?

Malvolio: That the soul of our grandam might haply inhabit a bird.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 34.

SOUND

I—Sound: Definitions

¹⁰ A thousand trills and quivering sounds
In airy circles o'er us fly,
Till, wafted by a gentle breeze,
They faint and languish by degrees,
And at a distance die.

The words are spoken to a dead man. (Verba sunt mortuo.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 1015. (Act v, sc. 8.)

¹⁹ He never speaks but his mouth opens.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 193.

²⁰ I do not much dislike the matter, but the manner of his speech.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, ii, 2, 113.

²¹ Say, and speak thick.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, Act iii, sc. 2, l. 53.

What should we speak of
When we are old as you? when we shall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December, how,
In this our pinching cave, shall we discourse
The freezing hours away?

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 35.

I will speak daggers to her, but use none.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 414.

Nor shall it be your excuse, that, murderer as you are, you have spoken daggers, but used none.

GERTRUDE STEIN, Enough Said. The poem consists of these words, five times repeated.

The first duty of man is to speak; that is his chief business in this world.

R. L. STEVENSON, Talk and Talkers.

Who hath given man speech? or who hath set therein

A thorn for peril and a snare for sin?

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

God's great gift of speech abused

Makes thy memory confused.

TENNISON, A Dirge. St. 7.

III—Speech: Speaking Well

The speaking in perpetual hyperbole is comely in nothing but in love.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Love.

Every man, who can speak at all, can speak elegantly and correctly if he pleases, by attending to the best authors and orators; and, indeed, I would advise those who do not speak elegantly, not to speak at all; for I am sure they will get more by their silence than by their speech.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 26 Dec., 1749.

The manner of speaking is full as important as the matter, as more people have ears to be tickled, than understandings to judge.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 July, 1750.

Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt.

New Testament: Colossians, iv, 6.

Though I be rude in speech.

New Testament: II Corinthians, xi, 6.

Rude am I in my speech,
And little bless'd with the soft phrase of peace.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 81.

The music that can deepest reach,
And cure all ill, is cordial speech.

What thou speakest, and of what weight,
Where, to whom, why, and when.

UNKNOWN, Whatever Thou Say, Advise Thee Well. (MS. Trinity College, Cambridge, c. 1530.)

If you your lips would keep from slips
Five things observe with care;
To whom you speak, of whom you speak,
And how, and when, and where.

W. E. NORRIS, Thirby Hall, i, 315. Quoted.

If you your ears would keep from jeers,
These things keep meekly hid:
Myself and me, or my and mine,
Or how I do or did.

W. E. NORRIS, Thirby Hall, i, 315. Quoted.

¹⁵ Discretion of speech is more than eloquence.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Discourse.

And let him be sure to leave other men their turns to speak.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Discourse.

There is no man but speaketh more honestly than he can do or think.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. II.

¹⁶ You, having a large and fruitful mind, should not so much labour what to speak as to find what to leave unspoken. Rich soils are often to be weeded.

FRANCIS BACON, Letter to Coke, expostulating with him on his verbosity.

¹⁷ Speak not at all, in any wise, till you have somewhat to speak; care not for the reward of your speaking, but simply and with undivided mind for the truth of your speaking.

CARLYLE, Essays: Biography.

There is endless merit in a man's knowing when to have done.

CARLYLE, Essays: Francis.

¹⁸ A wise man, then, sets hatch before the door,
And, whilst he may, doth square his speech with heed.

THOMAS DELONEY, Strange Histories, l. 70.

Think all you speak; but speak not all you think:
Thoughts are your own; your words are so no
more.

Where Wisdom steers, wind cannot make you sink:
Lips never err, when she does keep the door.

HENRY DELAUNE, Epigram.

⁶ The man is wise who speaketh few things.
(Vir sapit qui pauca loquitur.)

WILLIAM LILLY, Grammatices Rudiments, p.
42. (a. 1522) Quoted by SHAKESPEARE, *Love's
Labour's Lost*, iv, 2, 82.

⁷ But ye, keep ye on earth
Your lips from over-speech,
Loud words and longing are so little worth,
And the end is hard to reach.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

VI—Speech: To Conceal Thought For Candid Speech, see Candor

⁸ He who does not make his words rather serve to conceal than discover the sense of his heart, deserves to have it pulled out like a traitor's,
and strewn publicly to the rabble.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains, ii, 25, (1759)

The true use of speech is not so much to express our wants as to conceal them.

GOLDSMITH, The Bee, No. 3. An echo of Butler, whose Remains he had just reviewed.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 24.

Speak fair and think what you will.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 144.

1 A knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 25.

2 It oft falls out,
To have what we would have, we speak not what we mean.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 117.

3 Speech was given to the ordinary sort of men whereby to communicate their mind, but to wise men whereby to conceal it.

ROBERT SOUTH, Sermon, preached in Westminster Abbey, 30 April, 1676.

4 Speech was given to man to disguise his thoughts. (La parole a été donnée à l'homme pour déguiser sa pensée.)

TALLEYRAND. (BARÈNE, Talleyrand, vi. HAREL, Le Nain Jaune.) Harel afterwards alleged that the mot was really his own, and that he had put it into Talleyrand's mouth.

When Harel wished to put a joke or witticism into circulation, he was in the habit of connecting it with some celebrated name, on the chance of retaining it if it took. Thus he assigned to Talleyrand, in the Nain Jaune, the phrase, "Speech was given to man to disguise his thoughts."

FOURNIER, L'Esprit dans l'Histoire.

5 Men use thought only to justify their wrongdoing, and employ speech only to conceal their thoughts. (Ils ne se servent de la pensée que pour autoriser leurs injustices, et emploient les paroles que pour déguiser leurs pensées.)

VOLTAIRE, Dialogues: No. xiv, Le Chapon et la Poule. (1766)

We must distinguish between speaking to deceive and being silent to be reserved. (Il faut distinguer entre parler pour tromper et se taire pour être impénétrable.)

SPIDER

⁷ There webs were spread of more than common size,

And half-starved spiders prey'd on half-starved flies.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Prophecy of Fomine, l. 327.

⁸ Much like a subtle spider, which doth sit
In middle of her web, which spreadeth
wide;

If aught do touch the utmost thread of it,
She feels it instantly on every side.

SIR JOHN DAVIES, The Immortality of the Soul: Sec. 18, Feeling.

Or almost like a spider, who, confin'd
In her web's centre, shak't with every wind,
Moves in an instant if the buzzing fly
Stirs but a string of her lawn canopy.

- ¹⁰ It is a dangerous grieving of the spirit, when,
 instead of drawing ourselves to the spirit, we will labour to draw the Spirit to us.
RICHARD SIBBES, The Fountain Sealed.
 The life of any one can by no means be changed after death; an evil life can in no wise be converted into a good life, or an infernal into an angelic life: because every spirit, from head to foot, is of the character of his love, and therefore, of his life; and to convert this life into its opposite, would be to destroy the spirit utterly.

Spirits when they please
Can either sex assume, or both; so soft
And uncompounded is their essence pure,
Not tied or manac'd with joint or limb,
Nor founded on the brittle strength of bones,
Like cumbrous flesh; but in what shape they choose,

Dilated or condens'd, bright or obscure,
Can execute their aerie purposes,
And works of love or enmity fulfil.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. 1, l. 423.

Spirits that live throughout
Vital in every part, not as frail man
In entrails, heart or head, liver or reins,
Cannot but by annihilating die;
Nor in their liquid texture mortal wound
Receive, no more than can the fluid air:
All heart they live, all head, all eye, all ear,
All intellect, all sense, and as they please,
They limb themselves, and colour, shape or size
Assume, as likes them best, condense or rare.

THOMAS GRAY, Ode on the Spring, l. 1.
And the glad earth, caressed by murmuring showers,
Wakes like a bride, to deck herself with flowers!
HENRY SYLVESTER CORNWELL, May.
When Spring unlocks the flowers to paint the laughing soil.
RICHARD HERRA, Hymn for Seventh Sunday after Trinity.
The Spring's already at the gate
With looks my care beguiling;
The country round appeareth straight
A flower-garden smiling.
HERRA, Book of Songs: New Spring.

I come, I come! ye have called me long.
I come o'er the mountains with light and song!
Ye may trace my step o'er the wakening earth,
By the winds which tell of the violet's birth,
By the primrose-stars, in the shadowy grass,
By the green leaves opening as I pass.

FELICIA HEMANS, The Voice of Spring.

Spring in the world!
And all things are made new!

RICHARD HOVY, Spring.

2
The sweet season, that bud and bloom forth
brings,
With green hath clad the hill, and eke the vale.

HENRY HOWARD, Description of Spring.

3
In the tassel-time of Spring.
R. U. JOHNSON, Before the Blossom.

4
I wonder if the tides of spring
Will always bring me back again
Mute rapture at the simple thing
Of lilacs blooming in the rain.

THOMAS S. JONES, JR., Beyond.

Alas, for us no second spring,
Like mallows in the garden-bed.

ANDREW LANG, Triolets after Moschus.

5
The lovely town was white with apple-blossoms,
And the great elms o'erhead
Dark shadows wove on their aerial looms,
Shot through with golden thread.

LONGFELLOW, Hawthorne. St. 2.

6
Came the Spring with all its splendor,
All its birds and all its blossoms,
All its flowers, and leaves, and grasses.

LONGFELLOW, Hiwahka. Pt. xxi, l. 109.

Then came the lovely spring with a rush of blossoms and music,
Flooding the earth with flowers, and the air with melodies vernal.

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: Pt. iii, The Theologian's Tale.

7
Every clod feels a stir of might,
An instinct within it that reaches and
towers,

And, groping blindly above it for light,
Climbs to a soul in grass and flowers.

J. R. LOWELL, The Vision of Sir Launfal: Prelude.

The holy spirit of the Spring
Is working silently.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Songs of Spring Days. Pt. ii.

8
This wind is called Zephyrus, whose mild
And fruitful birth gets the young Spring with child,

Filling her womb with such delicious heat,
As breeds the blooming rose and violet.

SHACKELLEY MARMION, Cupid and Psyche.

9
Wag the world how it will,
Leaves must be green in spring.

HERMAN MELVILLE, Malvern Hill.

10
O Spring! I know thee. Seek for sweet surprise

In the young children's eyes.
But I have learnt the years, and know the yet
Leaf-folded violet.

ALICE MEYNELL, In Early Spring.

11
Spring rides no horses down the hill,
But come on foot, a goose-girl still.
And all the loveliest things there be
Come simply so, it seems to me.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MULLAY, The Goose-Girl.

12
In those vernal seasons of the year, when the air is calm and pleasant, it were an injury and sullenness against Nature not to go out and see her riches, and partake in her rejoicing with heaven and earth.

MILTON, Treatise of Education.

13
The Spring returns!
Triumphant through the wider-arched cope
She comes, she comes, unto her tyranny,
And at her coronation are set ope
The prisons of the mind, and man is free!

CHARLES LEONARD MOORE, The Spring Returns.

14
Sound, jocund strains; on pipe and viol sound,
Young voices sing;

Wreath every door with snow-white voices
round,

For lo! 't is Spring!
Winter has passed with its sad funeral train,
And Love revives again.

LEWIS MORRIS, Life-Music.

15
Spring, the sweet Spring, is the pleasant year's king.

THOMAS NASHE, Spring.

16
Gentle Spring! in sunshine clad,
Well dost thou thy power display!
For Winter maketh the light heart sad,
And thou, thou makest the sad heart gay.

CHARLES D'ORLÉANS, Spring. (Longfellow, tr.)

17
It was then perpetual spring. (Ver erat æternum.)

OVIM, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 107.

Here is eternal spring. (Hic ver ætædum.)
VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 149.

18
There is no time like Spring,
When life's alive in every thing.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Spring.

19
Never yet was a springtime,
Late though lingered the snow,
That the sap stirred not at the whisper

Of the southwind, sweet and low;
Never yet was a springtime
When the buds forgot to blow.

MARGARET ELIZABETH SANBORN, Awakening.

1 I sing the first green leaf upon the bough,
The tiny kindling flame of emerald fire,
The stir amid the roots of reeds, and how
The sap will flush the briar.

CLINTON SCOLLARD, Song in March.

2 The vernal sun new life bestows
Even on the meanest flower that blows.

SCOTT, Marmion: Canto i, Introduction, l. 63.

3 When daffodils begin to peer,
With heigh! the doxy over the dale,
Why, then comes in the sweet o' the year;
For the red blood reigns in the winter's pale.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 1.

4 For, lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth;
the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land.
Old Testament: Song of Solomon, li, 11, 12.

5 Fresh Spring, the herald of love's mighty king,
In whose coat-armour richly are display'd
All sorts of flowers the which on earth do
spring

In goodly colours gloriously array'd.
EDMUND SPENSER, Amoretti. Sonnet lxx.

So forth issued the Seasons of the year:
First, lusty Spring, all dight in leaves of flowers
That freshly budded and new blooms did bear
(In which a thousand birds had built their bowers,

That sweetly sung, to call forth paramours).
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. vii, canto vii, st. 28.

6 When the hounds of spring are on winter's traces,

The mother of months in meadow or plain
Fills the shadows and windy places
With liap of leaves and ripple of rain.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

7 Once more the Heavenly Power
Makes all things new,
And comes the red-plough'd hills
With loving blue;

The blackbirds have their wills,
The thrushes too.

TENNISON, Early Spring. St. 1.

8 Dip down upon the northern shore,
O sweet new-year delaying long;
Thou doest expectant Nature wrong;
Delaying long, delay no more.

TENNISON, In Memoriam. Pt. lxxxii.

Now fades the last long streak of snow,
Now burgeons every maze of quick
About the flowering squares, and thick
By ashen roots the violets blow.

TENNISON, In Memoriam. Pt. cxv.

And even into my inmost ring
A pleasure I discern'd,
Like those blind motions of the spring,
That show the year is turn'd.

TENNISON, The Talking Oak, l. 173.

The boyhood of the year.

TENNISON, Sir Launcelot and Queen Guinevere. St. 3.

9 Come, gentle Spring, ethereal mildness, come;
And from the bosom of yon dropping cloud,
While music wakes around, veiled in a shower
Of shadowing roses, on our plains descend.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 1.

Fair-handed Spring unbosoms every grace—
Throws out the snow-drop and the crocus first.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 529.

10 Spring, with that nameless pathos in the air
Which dwells in all things fair,
Spring, with her golden suns and silver rain,
Is with us once again.

HENRY TIMROD, Spring.

The good-wife oped the window wide,
The good-man spanned his plough;
Tis time to run, 'tis time to ride,
For Spring is with us now.

CHARLES GODFREY LELAND, Spring.

11 Now the woods are in leaf, now the year is in its greatest beauty. (Nunc frondent sylvæ, nunc formosissimus annus.)

VIRGIL, Ecdogues. No. iii, l. 57.

In spring heat returns to the bones. (Vere calor redit ossibus.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iii, l. 272.

12 We have not a leaf, yet, large enough to make an apron for a Miss Eve of two years old.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to George Montagu, 6 May, 1770.

13 Again the blackbirds sing; the streams
Wake, laughing, from their winter dreams,
And tremble in the April showers
The tassels of the maple flowers.

J. G. WHITTIER, The Singer. St. 20.

II—Spring and Love

14 When things were as fine as could possibly be
I thought 'twas the spring; but alas it was she.
JOHN BYRON, A Pastoral.

15 One of love's April fools.

CONGREVE, The Old Batchelor. Act i, sc. 1.

16 Men are the devil—they all bring woo.
In winter it's easy to say just "No"

Men are the devil, that's one sure thing,
But what are you going to do in spring?

MARY CAROLYN DAVIES, Men Are the Devil.

A trap's a very useful thing:
Nature in our path sets Spring.
It is a trap to catch us two,
It is planned for me and you.

MARY CAROLYN DAVIES, Traps.

All the veneration of Spring connects itself with love. . . . Even the frog and his mate have a new and gayer coat for this benign occasion.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. ix, p. 178.

Spring! and the buds against the sky;
Heart, forget that you saw
The little brown bird that fluttered by—
The bird with the wisp of straw.

CAROLINE GILTMAN, Spring.

In spring time, the only pretty ring time,
When birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding:
Sweet lovers love the spring.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 3, l. 20

Love, whose month is ever May.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv,
sc. 3, l. 102.

Of temper amorous as the first of May.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. i, l. 2.

He has a hard heart who does not love in May.
(Moult a dur cuer qui en Mai n'aime.)

UNKNOWN, Roman de la Rose.

It is the season now to go
About the country high and low,
Among the lilacs hand in hand,
And two by two in fairy land.

R. L. STEVENSON, Underwoods. No. 4.

Now the hedged meads renew
Rustic odour, smiling hue,
And the clean air shines and twinkles as the world goes wheeling through;
And my heart springs up anew,
Bright and confident and true,
And my old love comes to meet me in the dawning and the dew.

R. L. STEVENSON, My Old Love.

In the spring a livelier iris changes on the burnished dove;

In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 19.

When Spring is old, and dewy winds
Blow from the south, with odors sweet,
I see my love, in shadowy groves,
Speed down dark aisles on shining feet.

MAURICE THOMPSON, Atalanta's Race.

Love knows no winter; no, no! It is, and remains the sign of spring.

(Die Liebe wintert nicht; Nein, nein! Ist und bleibt Frühlings-Schein.)
LUDWIG TIENE, Herbstlied.

This is the time when bit by bit
The days begin to lengthen sweet
And every minute gained is joy—
And love stirs in the heart of a boy.

KATHERINE TYRAN, Turn o' the Year.

The flowers that bloom in the spring, Tra la,
Have nothing to do with the case.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act II.

STAGE

Stage

1—Stage: Apothegms

No play would I have rather seen. (Nullo his mallem ludos spectasse.)

MORACE, Satires. Bk. II, sat. 8, l. 79. Referring to a banquet which a friend was describing.

As good as a play!

CHARLES II, while listening to the debate in Parliament on Lord Ross's Divorce Bill.
(MACAULAY, Essays: The Life of Sir William Temple.)

Drama—what literature does at night.

GEORGE JEAN NATHAN, Testament of a Critic.

Great drama is the reflection of a great doubt in the heart and mind of a great, sad, gay man.

GEORGE JEAN NATHAN, Materia Critica.

The stage was unadorned. (Scena sine arte fuit.)

QVINT, Ars Amatoria. Bk. I, l. 106.

The play, I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas caviare to the general.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act II, sc. 2, l. 457.

The play's the thing.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act II, sc. 2, l. 633.

A hit, a very palpable hit.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 292.

When my cue comes, call me, and I will answer.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iv, sc. 1, l. 204.

Where they do agree on the stage, their unanimity is wonderful!

SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act II, sc. 2.

To have degenerated into theatrical arts. (Ad theatrales artes degeneravisse.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xiv, sec. 21.

Come, children, let us shut up the box and the puppets, for our play is played out.

TRACERAY, Family Fair. Conclusion.

II—Stage: Its Influence

Plays make mankind no better, and no worse.
BYRON, Hints from Horace, l. 370.

A moral expression at the close of a lewd play is much like a pious expression in the mouth of a dying man. . . . The doctor comes too late for the disease and the antidote is much too weak for the poison.

JEREMY COLLIER, The Immorality of the English Stage.

To me it seems as if when God conceived the world, that was Poetry; He formed it, and that was Sculpture; He colored it, and that was Painting; He peopled it with living beings, and that was the grand, divine, eternal Drama.

CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN. (STEPHENS, Charlotte Cushman.)

Keen satire is the business of the stage.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem: Prologue, l. 2.

There is nothing but heathenism to be learned from plays.

FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. III, ch. 11.

Life's moving pictures, well-wrought plays,
To others' grief attention raise:
Here, while the tragic fictions glow,
We borrow joy by pitying woe;
There gaily comic scenes delight,
And bold true mirrors to our sight.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 131.

Behind the curtain's mystic fold
The glowing future lies unrolled.

BRET HARTE, Address: Opening of the California Theatre, San Francisco, 19 Jan., 1870.

In all ages the drama, through its portrayal of the acting and suffering spirit of man, has been more closely allied than any other art to his deeper thoughts concerning his nature and his destiny.

LUDWIG LAWISOHN, The Modern Drama, p. 1.

It hath evermore been the notorious badge of prostituted strumpets and the lewdest Harlots, to ramble abroad to Plays, to Play-houses; whither no honest, chaste or sober Girls or Women, but only branded Whores and infamous Adulteresses, did usually resort in ancient times.

WILLIAM Prynne, Histrio-Mastix.

That popular Stage-plays are sinful, heathenish, lewd, ungodly Spectacles, and most pernicious Corruptions; condemned in all ages, as intolerable Mischiefs to Churches, to Republics, to the manners, minds and souls of men.

WILLIAM Prynne, Histrio-Mastix.

I have heard
That guilty creatures sitting at a play
Have by the very cunning of the scene
Been struck so to the soul that presently
They have proclaim'd their malefactions.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act II, sc. 2, l. 617.

A woman that hath made away her husband,
And sitting to behold a tragedy,
At Lynn, a town in Norfolk,
Acted by players travelling that way,—
Wherein a woman that had murder'd hers
Was ever haunted by her husband's ghost;
The passion written by a feeling hand,
And acted by a good tragedian,—

She was so moved with the sight thereof
As she cried out, "The play was made by her,"
And openly confess'd her husband's murder.

UNKNOWN, A Warning for Fair Women. (An Elizabethan drama sometimes ascribed to Shakespeare.)

III—Stage: Plays Good and Bad

The growing drama has outgrown such toys
Of simulated stature, face, and speech:
It also peradventure may outgrow
The simulation of the painted scene, . . .

And take for a worthier stage the soul itself,
Its shifting fancies and celestial lights,
With all its grand orchestral silences
To keep the pauses of its rhythmic sounds.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. v, l. 335.

We have the challenge of the mighty line—
God grant us grace to give the countersign.
JOHN DRINKWATER, Lines for the Opening of Birmingham Repertory Theatre.

There is a mode in plays as well as clothes.
DRYDEN, Rival Ladies: Prologue.

Prologues precede the piece in mournful verse,
As undertakers walk before the hearse.

DAVID GARRICK, The Apprentice: Prologue.

Prologues, like compliments, are loss of time;
Tis penning bows and making legs in rhyme.

GARRICK, Prologue to Crisp's Virginia.

If it be true that good wine needs no bush, 'tis true that a good play needs no epilogue.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It: Epilogue, l. 3.

The observance or violation of the three unities of time, place, and action.

HARLETT, Table Talk. Essay 22.

The unities, sir [said Mr. Curdell], are a completeness—a kind of a universal dovetailedness with regard to place and time—a sort of a general oneness. . . . I take those to be the dramatic unities, so far as I have been enabled to bestow attention upon them.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 24.

If you fashion a fresh character, have it kept to the end as it was in the beginning, consistent with itself. (Personam formare novam, servetur ad imum, qualis ad incepto processerit, et sibi constet.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 126. Of play-writing.

Nor let Medea slaughter her children in the sight of the audience. (Nec pueros coram populo Medea trucidet.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 185.

1 The last act crowns the play.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Respice Finem. (Emblems. Bk. i, No. 15.) See 1125:5.

The first Act's doubtful, but we say
It is the last commends the Play.

ROBERT HEZICK, The Plaudite.

Act first, this Earth, a stage so gloom'd with woe
You all but sicken at the shifting scenes.

And yet be patient. Our Playwright may show

In some fifth act what this wild Drama means.

TENNYSON, The Play.

ALL THE WORLD'S A STAGE, see under WORLD.

2 Theseus: Is there no play
To ease the anguish of a torturing hour? . . .
Philstrate: A play there is, my lord, some ten words long,

Which is as brief as I have known a play;

But by ten words, my lord, it is too long,

Which makes it tedious; for in all the play

There is not one word apt, one player fitt'd.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.

Act v, sc. 1, l. 61.

3 Through all the drama—whether damn'd or not—

Love gilds the scene, and women guide the plot.

R. B. SHERRIDAN, The Rivals: Epilogue, l. 5.

4 Lo, where the Stage, the poor, degraded Stage,
Holds its warped mirror to a gaping age!

CHARLES SPRAGUE, Curiosity, l. 127.

5 What are the plays of to-day? There're either so chock-full of intellect that they send you to sleep,—or they reek of sentiment till you

10 You know the rites to jocund Flora dear,

The festive quips and licence of the rout;

Why on the scene, stern Cato, enter here?

Did you then enter only to go out?

¹ Like hungry guests, a sitting audience looks:
Plays are like suppers: poets are the cooks.
The founder's you: the table is this place:
The carvers we: the prologue is the grace.
Each act, a course; each scene, a different dish.

FARGUEAR, The Inconstant: Prologue, l. 1.

When first upon the stage a play appears
'Tis not the multitude a poet fears,
Who, from example, praise or damn by rote,
And give their censure as some members vote.
But if in the expecting box or pit
The wretch discerns one true, substantial wit,
Tow'rd's him his doubtful sight he'll still direct,
Whose very looks can all his faults detect.

ANN FINECH, COUNTESS OF WINCHELSEA, Aristomenes: Prologue, l. 1.

² The stage but echoes back the public voice:
The drama's laws, the drama's patrons give,
For we that live to please, must please to live.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Prologue at the Opening of the Drury Lane Theatre, l. 57.

³ Would you were come to hear, not see a
play. . .

The maker . . . he'd have you wise,
Much rather by your ears than by your eyes.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News: Prologue.

⁴ I don't think the audience noticed it.

GEORGE KELLY, The Torch-Bearers. Act ii.

⁵ Fit audience find, though few.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 31.

⁶ 'Tis ten to one this play can never please
All that are here: some come to take their ease,

And sleep an act or two; . . . others to hear the city

Abused extremely, and to cry "That's witty!"

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII: Epilogue, l. 1.

⁷ In other things the knowing artist may

Judge better than the people; but a play,

(Made for delight, and for no other use)

If you approve it not, has no excuse.

What are ye orbs?

The words of God? the Scriptures of the skies?

P. J. BAILEY, Pastus: Everywhere.

⁸ The pale populace of Heaven.

ROBERT BROWNING, Salustian's Adventure, l.
205.

¹⁰ Ah! the lamps numberless,

STARS

The mystical jewels of God,
The luminous, wonderful,
Beautiful lights of the Veil!

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Book of Orm: First Song.

¹¹ Flowers of the sky! ye, too, to age must yield,
Frail as your silken sisters of the field!

ERASMUS DARWIN, Economy of Vegetation.
Canto iv.

Silently one by one, in the infinite meadows of
heaven,

Blossomed the lovely stars, the forget-me-nots of the angels.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. i, sec. 3.

Stars are the Daisies that begem

The blue fields of the sky,

Beheld by all and everywhere,

Bright prototypes on high.

DAVID MACBETH MOIR, The Daisy. St. 5.

Wide are the meadows of night

And daisies are shining there,

Tossing their lovely dew,

Lustrous and fair;

And through these sweet fields go,

Wanderers amid the stars—

Venus, Mercury, Uranus, Neptune,

Saturn, Jupiter, Mars.

WALTER DE LA MARE, The Wanderers.

The stars

That nature hung in Heav'n, and fill'd their lamps

With everlasting oil, to give due light

To the misled and lonely traveller.

MILTON, Comus, l. 197.

And made the stars,
And set them in the firmament of Heav'n
To illuminate the earth, and rule the day
In their vicissitude, and rule the night.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 348.

Who rounded in his palm these spacious orbs. . .
Numerous as glittering gems of morning dew,
Or sparks from populous cities in a blaze,

And set the bosom of old night on fire?

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 1275.

1 There's husbandry in heaven;

Their candles are all out.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 89.

2 The stars are mansions built by Nature's hand,

And, haply, there the spirits of the blest
Dwell, clothed in radiance, their immortal vest.

WORDSWORTH, Sonnets. Pt. ii, Sonnet 25.

Brightest seraph, tell

In which of all these shining orbs hath man

His fixed seat, or fixed seat hath none,

But all these shining orbs his choice to dwell.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 667.

3 'Tis Nature's system of divinity,
And every student of the night inspires.
'Tis elder scripture, writ by God's own hand:
Scripture authentic! uncorrupt by man.

III—Stars: Their Beauty

15 The Spacious Firmament on high,

With all the blue Ethereal sky,

And spangled Heav'ns, a shining Frame,

Their great Original proclaim.

ADAMS, Ode. (The Spectator. No. 465. 23
Aug., 1712. Suggested by the 19th Psalm. See 1834:18.)

In Reason's ear they all rejoice,
And utter forth a glorious voice;
For ever singing as they shine.

"The Hand that made us is divine."

ADAMS, Ode.

16 And you, ye stars,

Who slowly begin to marshal,
As of old, in the fields of heaven,
Your distant, melancholy lines!
MATTHEW ARNOLD, Empedocles on Etna, l. 276.

1 The stars,
Which stand as thick as dewdrops on the fields
Of heaven.

P. J. BAILEY, Faustus: Heaven.

2 Behind the western bars
The shrouded day retreats,
And unperceived the stars
Steal to their sovran seats.

ROBERT BROWNE, The Clouds Have Left the Sky.

3 Sky—what a scowl of cloud
Till, near and far,

Ray on ray split the shroud:
Splendid, a star!

ROBERT BROWNING, Two Poets of Croisic, l. 5.

4 The sad and solemn Night
Hath yet her multitude of cheerful fires;
The glorious host of light.

BRYANT, Hymn to the North Star, l. 1.

The number is certainly the cause. The apparent disorder augments the grandeur, for the appearance of care is highly contrary to our idea of magnificence. Besides, the stars lie in such apparent confusion, as makes it impossible on ordinary occasions to reckon them. This gives them the advantage of a sort of infinity.

EDMUND SPENCER, On the Sublime and the Beautiful: Magnificence.

5 Every sphere
That gems the starry girdle of the year.
CAMPELL, Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 193.

6 There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars; for one star differeth from another star in glory.

New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 41.

The stars that have most glory, have no rest.
SAMUEL DANIEL, History of the Civil War.
Bk. viii, st. 104.

7 Teach me your mood, O patient stars!
Who climb each night the ancient sky,
Leaving on space no shade, no scars,
No trace of age, no fear to die.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, The Poet.

8 Two things fill the mind with ever new and increasing wonder and awe—the starry heavens above me and the moral law within me.

IMMANUEL KANT, Critique of Pure Reason:
Conclusion. See also 1345:5.

No sight that the human eyes can look upon is more provocative of awe than is the night sky scattered thick with stars.

BUTLER, Hudibras, Pt. iii, canto i, l. 17.

Ye stars! which are the poetry of Heaven!
If in your bright leaves we would read the fate

Of men and empires,—'tis to be forgiven,
That in our aspirations to be great,
Our destinies o'erleap their mortal state,
And claim a kindred with you; for ye are
A beauty and a mystery, and create
In us such love and reverence from afar,
That fortune, fame, power, life, have named themselves a star.

BYRON, Childe Harold, Canto iii, st. 88.

So may we read, and little find them cold:
Not frosty lamps illumining dead space,
Not distant aliens, not senseless Powers.
The fire is in them whereof we are born;
The music of their motion may be ours.

Old Testament: Judges, v, 20.

Thus some, who have the stars survey'd,
Are ignorantly led

To think those glorious lamps were made
To light Tom Fool to bed.

NICHOLAS ROWE, On a Fine Woman Who Had a Dull Husband.

This is the excellent foppery of the world, that,
when we are sick in fortune,—often the surfeit of our own behaviour,—we make guilty of our disasters the sun, the moon, and the stars: as if we were villains by necessity; fools by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves, and treachery, by spherical predominance; drunkards, liars, and adulterers by an enforced obedience of planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on: an admirable evasion whoremaster of man, to lay his goatish disposition to the charge of a star!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, Act i, sc. 2, l. 128.

When Princes meet, astrologers may mark it
An ominous conjunction, full of boding,
Like that of Mars with Saturn.

SCOTT, Quentin Durward, Ch. 31. Quoted as from "An old play."

Eat, speak, and move, under the influence of the most received star; and though the devil lead the measure, such are to be followed.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, Act
ii, sc. 1, l. 55.

The stars above us govern our conditions.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, Act iv, sc. 3, l. 35.

A breath thou art,
Servile to all the skyey influences.
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, Act iii,
sc. 1, l. 9.

There's some ill planet reigns:
I must be patient till the heavens look
With an aspect more favourable.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, Act ii, sc. 1, l. 105.

A man gazing at the stars is proverbially at the mercy of the puddles on the road.

Star that bringest home the bee,

And sett't the weary labourer free!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Song to the Evening Star.

¹ The morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy.

Old Testament: Job, xxxviii, 7.

² There is no light in earth or heaven

But the cold light of stars;

And the first watch of night is given

To the red planet Mars.

LONGFELLOW, The Light of Stars. St. 2.

³ The star that bids the shepherd fold,

Now the top of Heav'n doth hold.

MILTON, Comus, l. 93.

Off till the star that rose, at ev'ning bright, Toward Heav'n's descent had slop'd his westering wheel.

⁸ That full star that ushers in the even.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxxxii.

⁹ Many a night from yonder ivied casement,

ere I went to rest,

Did I look on great Orion sloping slowly to

the west.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 7.

Many a night I saw the Pleiads, rising thro'
the mellow shade,

Glimmer like a swarm of fireflies tangled in a silver braid.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 9.

VI—Stars: "My Star"

¹⁰ What matter to me if their star is a world?

Mine has opened its soul to me; therefore I love it.

ROBERT BROWNING, My Star.

My star, God's glow-worm!

ROBERT BROWNING, Popularity.

¹¹ I await my star. (J'attends mon astre.)

CARLO ALBERTO, King of Sardinia. Adopted as the motto of his house, the House of Savoy.
When Victor Emmanuel opened the first parliament in Rome, Nov., 1871, the common people peered all day into an unclouded sky searching for the Star of Savoy.

¹² "If thou," he answered, "follow but thy star,
Thou canst not miss at last a glorious haven."

(Ed egli a me: "Se tu segui tua stella,

Non puoi fallire al glorioso porto."

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xv, l. 55. (Cary, tr.)

Courage, brother! do not stumble,

Though thy path be dark as night;

There's a star to guide the humble,

Trust in God and do the Right.

NORMAN MACLEOD, Trust in God.

¹³ A man must stoop sometimes to his star, but he must never lie down to it.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 238.

¹⁴ My good stars, that were my former guides,
Have empty left their orbs, and shot their fires

Into the abyss of hell.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii,
sc. 13, l. 145.

¹⁵ What different lots our stars accord!

This babe to be hail'd and woo'd as a Lord!

And that to be shunned like a leper!

One, to the world's wine, honey, and corn,

Another, like Colchester native, born

To its vinegar, only, and pepper

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansiegg: Her Birth,
l. 93.

¹⁶ Our Jovial star reign'd at his birth.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 4, l. 105.

I find my zenith doth depend upon

A most auspicious star, whose influence

If now I court not but omit, my fortunes

Will ever after droop.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 181.

¹⁷ Grapples with his evil star.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Sec. lxdv.

VII—Stars and Love

¹⁸ Surely the stars are images of love.

P. J. BAILLY, *Festus: Garden and Bower by
the Sea*.

¹⁹ When stars are in the quiet skies,

Then most I pine for thee;

Bend on me then thy tender eyes,

As stars look on the sea.

BULWER-LYTTON, When Stars Are in the Quiet Skies.

1 The stars of the night
Will lend thee their light,
Like tapers clear without number.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Night-Piece to Julia.

2 When sunset flows into golden glows,
And the breath of the night is new,
Love finds afar eve's eager star—
That is my thought of you.

ROBERT UNDERWOOD JOHNSON, Star Song.

3 Stars of the summer night!

Far in yon azure deeps

Hide, hide your golden light!

She sleeps! My lady sleeps!

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student: Serenade.
Act i, sc. 3.

4 When twilight dews are falling soft
Upon the rosy sea, love,

I watch the star, whose beam so oft

Has lighted me to thee, love.

THOMAS MOORE, When Twilight Dews.

5 Thou lookest on the stars, my Star? Would I were heaven, to look on thee with many eyes!

And like a fiery planet mount and burn.

N. P. WILLIS, Parthasius.

10 Like the lost pleiad seen no more below.

BRON, Beppo. St. 14.

Why, who shall talk of thrones, of sceptres given?

Bowed be our hearts to think of what we are,
When from its height afar

A world sinks thus—and yon majestic heaven

Shines not the less for that one vanished star!

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEIMANS, The Lost Pleiad.

The line from Byron quoted above is used as a motto for this poem.

All for Love, or the Lost Pleiad.

STIRLING COYNE. Title of play, produced in London, 16 Jan., 1838.

10 A wise man,

Watching the stars pass across the sky,

Remarked:

In the upper air the fireflies move more slowly.

sc. 1, l. 88.

STATE

See also Government, Nation

14 Not stones, nor timber, nor the art of building constitute a state; but wherever men are who know how to defend themselves, there is a city and a fortress.

ALCÆUS, Ode. Fragment. (ARISTIDES, Orations.

Vol. ii.) Only a single line remains of the ode, of which Aristides gives this summary:

Fighting men are the city's walls.

What constitutes a State?

Not high-crown'd battlement or labour'd mound,

Thick wall or moated gate;

Not cities proud with spires and turrets
crown'd;

No:—men, high-minded men, . . .

Men who their duties know,

But know their rights, and, knowing, dare maintain . . .

These constitute a State.

BENITO MUSSOLINI. (GENERAL SMEDLEY E. BUTLER, Address, before the Contemporary Club, Phila., 19 Jan., 1931.) The Navy Department ordered General Butler court-martialed for making this speech, in which he accused Mussolini of not stopping when his automobile ran down a child, but the order was afterwards countermanded. Mussolini denied that such an incident had ever occurred.

I heard a shriek, . . . a shapeless little form lying in the road back of us. "Look, Your Excellency!" I cried. "Never look back, my friend, always look forward," he [Mussolini] answered without turning, and we roared ahead.

20 A constitutional statesman is in general a man of common opinions and uncommon abilities.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Biographical Studies, p. 2.

1 It is strange so great a statesman should
Be so sublime a poet.

BULWER-LYTTON, Richelieu. Act I, sc. 2.

2 A disposition to preserve, and an ability to improve, taken together, would be my standard of a statesman.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

The three ends which a statesman ought to propose to himself in the government of a nation, are—1. Security to possessors; 2. Facility to acquirers; and 3. Hope to all.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, 25 June, 1831.

3 Who's in or out, who moves this grand machine,

Nor stirs my curiosity nor spleen:

Secrets of state no more I wish to know

Than secret movements of a puppet-show:

Let but the puppets move, I've my desire,

Introduction.

7 The world is wearied of statesmen whom democracy has degraded into politicians.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 17.

A statesman makes the occasion, but the occasion makes the politician.

G. S. HILLARD, Life and Services of Daniel Webster.

A statesman is a successful politician who is dead.
THOMAS B. REED. (LODGE, The Democracy of the Constitution, p. 191.) Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, in a magazine article, told the story of the editor who thereupon telegraphed Reed, "Why don't you die and become a statesman?" To which Reed wired back, "No; fame is the last infirmity of a noble mind."

8 His life has been one great Appropriation Clause. He is a burglar of others' intellects.

... There is no statesman who has committed political petty larceny on so great a scale.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 15 May, 1846, referring to Sir Robert Peel.

9 Art thou a statesman,
And canst not be a hypocrite? Impossible!
Do not distrust thy virtues.

DRYDEN, Don Sebastian. Act II, sc. 1.

10 It is the duty of a minister to stand like a wall of adamant between the people and the sovereign.

GLAUSTON, Speech, at Carston, 14 Nov., 1808.

11 There is one statesman of the present day of whom I always say that he would have escaped making the blunders that he has made if he had only ridden more in omnibuses.

SIR ARTHUR HELPS, Friends in Council. Ser.
II, ch. 17.

12 D'ye think that statesmen's kindnesses proceed

From any principles but their own need?

SIR ROBERT HOWARD, The Vestal Virgin.

A genuine statesman should be on his guard,
If he must hev beliefs, not to b'lieve 'em tu

them.

THOMAS MOORE, Corruption and Intolerance:
Preface.

15 You can always get the truth from an American statesman after he has turned seventy, or given up all hope of the Presidency.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech, 7 Nov., 1860.

16 Statesmen are not only liable to give an account of what they say or do in public, but there is a busy inquiry made into their very meals, beds, marriages, and every other

Demosthenes retorted, "Yes, but your lamp and mine, my friend, do not witness the same labors." (PLUTARCH, Lives: Demosthenes: Sec. 8.) In his Life of Timoleon, Plutarch applies the expression to over-finished paintings, as well as to labored writing. The Latin proverb is, "Lucernam olet."

The saying of Pytheas is common and much spoken of, that the orations of Demosthenes smelled all of the candle, for that the same did in the night season write and record such things as he had to say to the people in the day time.

IV—Study: Its Faults

6 To spend too much time in studies is sloth.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Studies.

7 Who studies ancient laws and rites, Tongues, arts and arms, and history, Must drudge, like Selden, days and nights, And in the endless labour die.

RICHARD BENTLEY, Who Strives to Mount Parnassus' Hill.

8 Much study had made him very lean, And pale, and leaden-eyed.

HOOD, The Dream of Eugene Aram, l. 20.

9 We learn our lessons not for life, but for the lecture-room. (Non vitæ sed scholæ decimus.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epis. cvi, 12.

The studious class are their own victims; they are thin and pale, their feet are cold, their heads are hot, the night is without sleep, the day a fear of interruption,—pallor, squior, hunger, and egotism.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne.

10 Study is like the heaven's glorious sun

That will not be deep-search'd with saucy looks:

Small have continual plodders ever won

Save base authority from others' books.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, i, 1, 84.

So study evermore is overshot:

While it doth study to have what it would

It doth forget to do the thing it should,

And when it hath the thing it hunteth most,

'Tis won as towns with fire, so won, so lost.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, i, 1, 143.

17 Nature delights in punishing stupid people.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. v, p. 238.

18 I don't know what a moron is,

And I don't give a damn.

I'm thankful that I am not one—

My God! Perhaps I am.

HENRY PRATT FAIRCHILD, The Great Economic Paradox. (Harper's Magazine, May, 1932.)

See the happy moron,

He doesn't give a damn.

wish I were a moron;
My God, perhaps I am!

UNKNOWN, The Moron. (Quoted in the Journal of Heredity by its editor, Robert Cook, who states that he "lifted" the stanza from some British publication.) Often attributed to Dorothy Parker, who writes the compiler, "I never saw it before." See also 2295.9.

Allow me to offer my congratulations on the admirable skill you have shown in missing the mark. Not to have hit once in so many trials, argues the most splendid talents for missing.
EMPEROR GALERIUS, to a soldier who had missed the mark many times in succession. (Quoted by DE QUINCEY, Works, xiv, 161.)

The fault rests with the gods, who have made me so stupid. (La faute en est aux dieux, qui la firent si bête.)
JEAN DE GRESSET, Méchant. Act ii, sc. 7.

Dull as an alderman at church, or a fat lapdog after dinner.
THOMAS HOLCROFT, Duplicity. Act i, sc. 1.
He must be dull as a Dutch commentator.
SOAME JENYNS, Imitation of Horace, ii, 1.

You would swear that he was born in the oggy air of Bœotia. (Bœotum in crasso urares are natum.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, l. 244. Bœotia was proverbial for the stupidity of its inhabitants, as the city of Kampen is in Holland.

An Athenian blockhead is the worst of all blockheads.
SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1729.)

Why, Sir, Sherry is dull, naturally dull; but it must have taken him a great deal of pains to become what we now see him. Such an excess of stupidity, Sir, is not in Nature.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, referring to Sheridan. (BOSWELL, Life, 1763.)

He is not only dull himself, but the cause of dullness in others.
SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1784.)

I'm the safest o' the fam'ly!
I'm the simple Johnnie Raw!
HARRY LAUDER AND BOB BRATON, The Safest o' the Fam'ly. (1904)

It is the dull man who is always sure, and the sure man who is always dull.
H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. II, p. 101.

Obstinacy and heat of opinion are the surest proof of stupidity. Is there anything so assured, resolved, disdainful, contemplative, solemn, and serious, as the ass?
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 8.

Dulness! whose good old cause I yet defend,

With whom my Muse began, with whom shall end.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. i, l. 165.

10 And gentle Dulness ever loves a joke.
POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. ii, l. 34.

Too dull for laughter, for reply too mad.
POPE, Epigram.

11 Much was believ'd, but little understood,
And to be dull was construed to be good.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 130.

12 Against stupidity the very gods
Themselves contend in vain.
SCHILLER, The Maid of Orleans. Act iii, sc. 6.

13 You have been a boggler ever.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, iii, 13, 110.
And duller shouldst thou be than the fat weed
That roots itself in ease on Lethe wharf.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 32.
A dull and muddy-mettled rascal.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 594.

14 Peter was dull—he was at first
Dull,—Oh, so dull—so very dull!
Whether he talked, wrote, or rehearsed—
Still with his dulness was he cursed—
Dull—beyond all conception—dull.
SHELLEY, Peter Bell the Third. Pt. vii, st. 11.

15 It is to be noted that when any part of this paper appears dull, there is a design in it.
RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 38.

A late facetious writer who told the public that whenever he was dull they might be assured there was a design in it.
FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. v, ch. 1.

A thick head can do as much damage as a hard heart.
HAROLD WILLIS DODDS.

18 I have a great admiration for stupidity.
OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act II.
Whenever a man does a thoroughly stupid thing, it is always from the noblest motives.
OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 6.

STYLE

I—Style: Definitions

19 The style is the man himself. (Le style est l'homme même.)

BUFFON, Discourse, at reception into French Academy, 1753.

The style is the man; and some will add that, thus unsupported, it does not amount to much of a man. It is a sort of fighting and profane parody of the Old Testament.

G. K. CHESTERTON, The Victorian Age in Literature, p. 185. Referring to Swinburne.

It is most true, stylus virum arguit,—our style betrays us.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

A chaste and lucid style is indicative of the same personal traits in the author.

HOSKA BALLOU, Sermons.

And, after all, it is style alone by which posterity will judge of a great work, for an author can have nothing truly his own but his style.

ISAAC D'ISRAËLI, Literary Miscellanies: Style.

A man's style is his mind's voice.

EMERSON, Journals, Vol. x, p. 457.

The style of an author should be the image of his mind, but the choice and command of language is the fruit of exercise.

EDWARD GIBBON, Miscellaneous Works, Vol. I, p. 145.

Form is the Golden Vase wherein Thought, that fleeting essence, is preserved to Posterity.

ANATOLE FRANCE, (COURANOS, Modern Plutarch, p. 29.)

What is called style in writing or speaking is formed very early in life, while the imagination is warm and impressions are permanent.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings, Vol. v, p. 185.

Style! style! why, all writers will tell you that it is the very thing which can least of all be changed. A man's style is nearly as much a part of him as his physiognomy, his figure, the throbbing of his pulse,—in short, as any part of his being is at least subjected to the action of the will.

FENELON, Dialogues sur l'Eloquence.

Master alike in speech and song
Of fame's great antiseptic—Style,
You with the classic few belong
Who tempered wisdom with a smile.

J. R. LOWELL, To Oliver Wendell Holmes on His Seventy-fifth Birthday. St. 15.

Wit belongs to the man, style to the author.

MAUPASSANT, Letter to Frederick the Great, 19 Nov., 1745.

For style beyond the genius never dares. (Che stile oltra l'ingegno non si stende.)

PETRARCH, Morta di Laura, Sonnet 68.

Expression is the dress of thought, and still appears more decent as more suitable.

FOZZ, Essay on Criticism, Pt. II, l. 118. (1712)

Style is the dress of thoughts.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 24 Nov., 1749.

Dress covers the mortal body and adorns it, but style is the vehicle of the spirit.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to Miss Harcourt, 1842.

Style is what gives value and currency to thought.

AMIEL, Journal: Introduction.

Style, after all, rather than thought, is the immortal thing in literature.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: On the Writing of Essays.

II—Style: Good Style

Sound words, I know, Timothy is to use,
And old wives' fables he is to refuse;
But yet grave Paul him nowhere did forbid
The use of parables; in which lay hid
That gold, those pearls, and precious stones that were

Worth digging for, and that with greatest care.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress: The Author's Apology for His Book.

May I not write in such a style as this?

In such a method, too, and yet not miss

My end—thy good?

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress: The Author's Apology for His Book.

Nor can one word be chang'd but for a worse.

HOMER, Odyssey, Bk. viii, l. 192. (Pope, tr.)

A strict and succinct style is that, where you can take away nothing without loss, and that loss to be manifest.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Consuetudo.

Clear arrangement. (Lucidus ordo.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 41.

With a nice taste and care in weaving words together, you will express yourself most happily, if a skillful setting makes a familiar word new. (In verbis etiam tenuis cautusque serendis Dixeris egregie, notum si callida verbum Reddiderit junctura novum.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 46.

It has ever been, and ever will be, permitted to issue words stamped with the mint-mark of the day. (Licuit semperque licbit Signatum præsentis nota producere nomen.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 58.

A man coins not a new word without some peril and less fruit; for if it happen to be received, the praise is but moderate; if refused, the scorn is assured.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: De Oratoris Dignitate.

Well-rounded phrase. (Ore rotundo.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 323. The words are applied to style, not utterance, although commonly quoted as referring to the latter.

Your language is that of the toga, skilled in clever phrasing, rounded but not full-mouthed. (Verba togæ sequeris junctura callidus acris, Ore teres modico.)

PRÆTUS, Satires. Sat. v, l. 14. That is, the language of the cultivated class.

1 The chief virtue of a style is perspicuity, and nothing so vicious in it as to need an interpreter. Words borrowed of antiquity do lend a kind of majesty to style, and are not without their delight sometimes. For they have the authority of years, and out of their intermission do win themselves a kind of grace-like newness. But the eldest of the present, and newest of the past language, is the best.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Consuetudo.

2 Before employing a fine word, find a place for it. (Avant d'employer un beau mot, faites-lui une place.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 302.

3 I think that too many stops stop the way, and that every sixth or seventh is uncalled for.

W. S. LANDOR, Letter to John Forster, 1854. Of punctuation.

4 A careful felicity of style. (Curiosa felicitas.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 118.

5 When an old phrase fits the occasion, it's well used. (Scitumst, per tempus si obviamst, verbum vetus.)

PLAUTUS, Pænulus, l. 135. (Act i, sc. 1.)

6 Style has no fixed laws; it is changed by the usage of the people, never the same for any length of time. (Oratio certam regulam non habet; consuetudo illam civitatis, quæ nunquam in eodem diu stetit, versat.)

SENeca, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. cxiv, 13.

7 The word is well culled, chose, sweet and apt, I do assure you, sir, I do assure.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 1, 98.

Proper words in proper places.

SWIFT, Definition of a Good Style.

As to the Adjective: when in doubt, strike it out.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

8 Clearness ornaments profound thoughts. (La clarté orne les pensées profondes.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions et Maximes. No. 4.

When things are small the terms should still be so, For low words please us when the theme is low.

VIDA, De Arte Poetica. (Pitt, tr.)

Abstruse and mystic thoughts you must express With painful care, but seeming easiness; For truth shines brightest thro' the plainest dress.

WENTWORTH DILLON, Essay on Translated Verse, l. 216.

Clarity, the greatest of legislative and judicial virtues, like the sunshine, revealing and curative.

CHARLES E. HUMPHREY, Address, Feb., 1931.

9 All styles are good except the tiresome kind. (Tous les genres sont bons, hors le genre ennuyeux.)

VOLTAIRE, L'Enfant Prodigue: Preface.

10 That graceful manner of thinking in Virgil seems to me to be more than style, if I do not refine too much: and I admire, I confess, Mr. Addison's phrase, that Virgil "tossed about his dung with an air of majesty."

WALFORD, Letter to Pinkerton, 26 June, 1785.

III—Style: Bad Style

11 That's not good language that all understand not.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jocunde Prudentum.

That must be fine, for I understand nothing of it. (Où, ça est si beau, que je n'y entends goutte.)

MOULIERE, Le Médecin Malgré Lui. Act II, sc. 4.

12 We say it is a fleshy style, when there is much periphrasis and circuit of words; and when, with more than enough, it grows fat and corpulent; artina orationis, full of suet and talow.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Carnosa.

The fleshy gentlemen [Swinburne, Baudelaire and Rossetti] have bound themselves by solemn league and covenant to extol fleshiness as the distinct and supreme end of poetic and pictorial art.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Fleshy School of Poetry.

13 The gloomy companions of a disturbed imagination; the melancholy madness of poetry, without the inspiration.

JUNIUS, Letters. No. 7, 3 March, 1769.

14 It frequently happens that where the second line is sublime, the third, in which he meant to rise still higher, is perfect bombast.

LONGINUS, On the Sublime. Sec. 3. Referring to Lucan's style.

That passage is what I call the sublime dashed to pieces by cutting too close with the fiery four-in-hand round the corner of nonsense.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk. 20 Jan., 1834.

15 Ornate rhetoric taught out of the rule of Plato.

MILTON, Treatise of Education.

Taffeta phrases, silken terms precise, Three-piled hyperboles, spruce affectation, Figures pedantical; these summer-flies Have blown me full of maggot ostentation.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 407.

Flowers of rhetoric, in sermons and serious discourses, are like the blue and red flowers in corn, pleasing to them who come only for amusement, but prejudicial to him who would reap the profit.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

The flowery style is not unsuitable to public speeches or addresses, which amount only to compliment. The lighter beauties are in their place when there is nothing more solid to say; but the flowery style ought to be banished from a pleading, a sermon, or a didactic work.

VOLTAIRE, Philosophical Dictionary: Style.

Some by old words to fame have made pretence,

Ancients in phrase, mere moderns in their sense;

Such labour'd nothings, in so strange a style,
Amaze the unlearn'd, and make the learned smile.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 124.

In a style, to be sure, of remarkable fullness,
But which nobody reads on account of its dullness.

J. G. Saxe, Pyromus and Thisbe.

It is no less degenerate to use no words except those which are striking, high-sounding, and poetical, avoiding what is familiar and usual. (Quam nolle nisi splendidis uti ac sonantibus et poeticis, necessaria atque in usu posita vitare.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliūm. Epis. cxiv, 14.

It begins to hunt for novelties in speech, summoning and displaying obsolete and old fashioned words, or coining and misshaping unknown words.

SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliūm. Epis. cxiv, 10.

With others it is not so much an arrangement of words, as it is a setting to music, so wheedling and soft is their gliding style.

SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliūm. Epis. cxiv, 16.

Base is the style and matter mean withall.

SPENSER, Mother Hubbards Tale, l. 44.

His style is chaos illumined by flashes of lightning. As a writer, he has mastered everything except language.

OSCAR WILDE, The Decay of Lying. Referring to George Meredith.

SUCCESS

I—Success: Definitions

Have little care that Life is brief,
And less that Art is long.

Success is in the silences
Though Fame is in the song.

ELIAS CARMAN, Songs from Vagabondia: Epave.

In all things, success depends upon previous preparation, and without such preparation there is sure to be failure.

MRS. A. J. STANLEY, What Constitutes Success.

Only he is successful in his business who makes that pursuit which affords him the highest pleasure sustain him.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 10 Jan., 1851.

Success, a sort of suicide, Is ruin'd by success.

YOUNG, Resignation. Pt. ii, l. 299.

Success shall be in thy courses tall,
Success in thyself, which is best of all,
Success in thy hand, success in thy foot,
In struggle with man, in battle with brute.

SVEND VONVED, Ancient Norse ballad.

II—Success: Apothegms

'Tis not in mortals to command success,
But we'll do more, Sempronius; we'll deserve it.

ADOLSON, Cato. Act i, sc. 2.

But though the place I never gain,
Herein lies comfort for my pain:

I will be worthy of it.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, I Will be Worthy of It.

Success in men's eyes is God and more than God. (Τὸ δ' εὐτυχεῖν, ὅδ' ἐν ἰσότητι θεῶν καὶ θεῶν ἰσότης.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Chæphoroi, l. 59.

I have found it! I have found it! (Eureka! Eureka!)

ARCHIMEDES. (VITRUVIUS, De Architectura, ix, 215.)

When the idea flashed across his mind, the philosopher sprang out of the bath, exclaiming, "Heureka! heureka!" and without waiting to dress himself, ran home to try the experiment.

VITRUVIUS, of Archimedes, who discovered a method of testing the purity of Hiero's crown, while in the bath.

Success is full of promise till men get it; and then it is a last-year's nest from which the birds have flown.

III—Success: How It Is Won

⁶ Those things which are not practicable are not desirable. There is nothing in the world really beneficial that does not lie within the reach of an informed understanding and a well-directed pursuit.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on the Plan for Economical Reform, 11 Feb., 1780.

⁷ Presence of mind and courage in distress
Are more than armies to procure success.

DRYDEN, Aureng-Zebe. Act II.

⁸ The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, neither yet bread to the wise, nor yet riches to men of understanding, nor yet favour to men of skill; but time and chance happeneth to them all.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, ix, 11.

Not to the swift, the race;

Not to the strong, the fight;

Not to the righteous, perfect grace:

Not to the wise, the light.

But often faltering feet

Come surest to the goal;

And they who walk in darkness meet

The sunrise of the soul.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Reverence.

With shining gifts that took all eyes.

EMERSON, In Memoriam, l. 60.

¹¹ Be studious in your profession, and you will be learned. Be industrious and frugal, and you will be rich. Be sober and temperate, and you will be healthy. Be in general virtuous, and you will be happy. At least, you will, by such conduct, stand the best chance for such consequences.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to John Allyn.

If you want to know whether you are destined to be a success or a failure in life, you can easily find out. The test is simple and it is infallible. Are you able to save money? If not, drop out. You will lose.

JAMES J. HILL.

¹² If you can dream—and not make dreams
your master;

If you can think—and not make thoughts
your aim;

If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster
And treat those two impostors just the same; . . .

If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And—which is more—you'll be a Man, my
son!

RUDYARD KIPPLING, If—Said to have been written with George Washington in mind.

However see 1298j:2.

There are only two ways of getting on in the world: by one's own industry, or by the stupidity of others. (Il n'y a au monde que deux manières de s'élever, ou par sa propre industrie, ou par l'imbécillité des autres.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Biens de Fortune.

¹³ The talent of success is nothing more than doing what you can do well; and doing well whatever you do, without a thought of fame.

Success, the mark no mortal wit,
Or surest hand, can always hit:
For whatsoever we perpetrate,
We do but row, we're steer'd by Fate,
Which in success oft disinherits,
For spurious causes, noblest merits.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 879.

III—Suicide: Its Wisdom

1 We are in the power of no calamity while death is in our own.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. 1, 44.

The sweetest gift nature has bequeathed us . . .
is that she has left us the key of the fields.
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. II, ch. 3.

Happy men that have the power to die.

But now that refuge of despair is shut,
For other lives have twined themselves with mine.

JOHN DAVIDSON, Lammals.

2 What, does he who is at liberty to leave the banquet when he will, and play the game no longer, keep on annoying himself by staying?
EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. II, ch. 16, sec. 37.

3 If suicide be supposed a crime, it is only cowardice can impel us to it. If it be no crime, both prudence and courage should engage us to rid ourselves at once of existence when it becomes a burden. It is the only way that we can then be useful to society, by setting an example which, if imitated, would preserve every one his chance for happiness in life, and would effectually free him from all danger or misery.

DAVID HUMF, Essays: Suicide.

4 Just as I shall select my ship when I am about to go on a voyage, or my house when I propose to take a residence, so I shall choose my death when I am about to depart from life.

SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliūm. Epist. lxx, 11.

5 Tranquillity can be purchased at the cost of a pin-prick. (Puncto securitas constat.)
SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliūm. Epist. lxx, 16.

6 He is truly great who has not only given himself the order to die, but has found the means.

tum imperavit, sed invenit.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliūm. Epist. lxx, 25.

7 That self hand,
Which writ his honour in the acts it did,
Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it,
Splitted the heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v,
sc. 1, l. 21.

Bravest at the last,
She levell'd at our purposes, and, being royal,
Took her own way.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 338.

She drank Prussic acid without any water,
And died like a Duke-and-a-Duchess's daughter!
R. H. BARHAM, The Tragedy.

8 You good gods, give me
The penitent instrument to pick the bolt,
Then, free for ever!

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 4, l. 9.

9 To be, or not to be: that is the question:
Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And by opposing end them?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act III, sc. 1, l. 56.

For who would bear the whips and scorns of
time,
The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's con-
tumely,

The pangs of despised love, the law's delay,
The insolence of office, and the spurns
That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he himself might his quietus make
With a bare bodkin?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act III, sc. 1, l. 70.

10 But life, being weary of these worldly bars,
Never lacks power to dismiss itself.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act I, sc. 3, l. 96.

He that cuts off twenty years of life
Cuts off so many years of fearing death.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act III, sc. 1, l. 101.

11 Let it not be call'd impiety,
If in this blemish'd fort I make some hole
Through which I may convey this troubled soul.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece. St. 168.

12 Why should I, beastlike as I find myself,
Not manlike end myself?—our privilege—

What beast has heart to do it?

TENNYSON, Lucretius, l. 231.

Again the voice spake unto me:
"Thou art so steep'd in misery, Surely 't were better not to be."

TENNYSON, The Two Voices, l. 46.

Though the Garden of thy Life be wholly waste, the sweet flowers withered, the fruit-trees barren, over its wall hang ever the rich dark clusters of the Vine of Death, within easy reach of thy hand, which may pluck of them when it will.

SUMMER

I—Summer: Apothegms

Summer has set in with his usual severity.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Letter to Charles Lamb, May, 1826.

If that the summer is not too severe.

BYRON, The Vision of Judgment. St. 55. A note to this passage says, "An allusion to Horace Walpole's expression in a letter," but Charles Lamb, in a letter to Bernard Barton (16 May, 1826), states that a letter received by him from Coleridge began with this phrase.

Summer, as my friend Coleridge waggishly writes, has set in with its usual severity.

LAMB, Letter to V. Novello, 9 May, 1826.

Summer is gone on swallow's wings.

THOMAS HOOD, The Departure of Summer.

There is something of summer in the hum of insects.

W. S. LANDOR, Letter to Southey, 1810.

Do what we can, summer will have its flies.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.

Expect Saint Martin's summer, halcyon days.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VI. Act i, sc. 2, l. 131.

The middle summer's spring.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 82.

The Indian Summer, the dead Summer's soul.

The present time of the year has been named the 'silly season'

UNKNOWN, Article, London Punch, 9 Sept., 1871. Referring to August and September, when newspapers, for lack of real news, fill their columns with trivialities.

II—Summer: Its Beauty

Bring back the singing; and the scent
Of meadowlands at dewy prime;—
Oh, bring again my heart's content,
Thou Spirit of the Summertime!

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Song.

Now summer blinks on flowery braes,
And o'er the crystal streamlet plays.

BURNS, The Birks of Aberfeldy.

I question not if thrushes sing,
If roses load the air;

Beyond my heart I need not reach
When all is summer there.

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, Love's World.

Here is the ghost Of a summer that lived for us,

Here is a promise Of summers to be.

W. E. HENLEY, Rhymes and Rhythms. No. 8.

All labourers draw hame at even,
And can to others say,
"Thanks to the gracious God of heaven,
Whilk sent this summer day."

ALEXANDER HUME, Evening. St. 2.

O summer day beside the joyous sea!
O summer day so wonderful and white,
So full of gladness and so full of pain!

Forever and forever shalt thou be
To some the gravestone of a dead delight,
To some the landmark of a new domain.

LONGFELLOW, A Summer Day by the Sea.

Where'er you walk cool gales shall fan the
glade;

Trees, where you sit, shall crowd into a shade;
Where'er you tread, the blushing flowers shall rise,

And all things flourish where you turn your eyes.

POPE, Pastorals: Summer, l. 73.

Rough winds do shake the darling buds of May,
And summer's lease hath all too short a date.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xviii.

In the good old summer time,
In the good old summer time,

Strolling thro' the shady lanes,
With your baby mine;

You hold her hand and she holds yours,
And that's a very good sign

That she's your tootsey-wootsey
In the good old summer time.

REN SHIELDS, In the Good Old Summer Time.

(1902) Music by George Evans. Sung by Blanche King in The Defender.

Then came the jolly Summer, being dight
In a thin silken cassock, coloured green,
That was unlined all, to be more light.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. vii, canto vii, st. 29.

Pale in her fading bowers the Summer stands,
Like a new Niobe with clasped hands,
Silent above the flowers, her children lost,
Slain by the arrows of the early Frost.

RICHARD HENRY STODDARD, Ode.

Fride of summer passing by
With lordly laughter in her eye.

SWINBURNE, The Tale of Balen. Pt. ii, st. 1.

Strong summer, dumb with rapture, bound
With golden calm the woodlands round.

SWINBURNE, The Tale of Balen. Pt. vii, st. 14.

The Summer looks out from her brazen tower,
Through the flashing bars of July.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, A Corymbus for Autumn.

From brightening fields of ether fair-disclosed,
Child of the sun, refulgent Summer comes.

THOMPSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 1.

O, softly on yon banks of haze,
Her rosy face the Summer lays!

J. T. TROWBRIDGE, Midsummer.

Summer is icumen in,
Lhude sing cuccu!

UNKNOWN, Cuckoo Song. The oldest song in the English language, written, probably in 1226, by a monk at Reading Abbey, somewhat questionably identified as John of Fornssete. Original in the Harleian MS., No. 978. The music to which it was sung still survives.

III—Summer: Its Heat

¹
O thou who passest thro' our valleys in Thy strength, curb thy fierce steeds, allay the heat

That flames from their large nostrils! Thou,
O Summer,

Of pitched'st here thy golden tent, and oft
Beneath our oaks hast slept, while we beheld
With joy thy ruddy limbs and flourishing hair.

WILLIAM BLAKE, To Summer.

²
O for a lodge in a garden of cucumbers!
O for an iceberg or two at control!
O for a vale that at midday the dew cumbers!
O for a pleasure trip up to the pole!

ROSSITER JOHNSON, Ninety-Nine in the Shade.

As a lodge in a garden of cucumbers.

Old Testament: Isaiah, i, 8.

³
But sec, the shepherds shun the noonday heat,
The lowing herds to murmuring brooks retreat,

To closer shades the panting flocks remove:
Ye Gods! and is there no relief for love?

Pope, Pastorals: Summer, l. 85.

⁴
Summer's parching heat
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, Act i, sc. 1, l. 81.

⁵
Heat, ma'am! It was so dreadful here that I found there was nothing left for it but to take off my flesh and sit in my bones

SYDNEY SMITH (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir, Ch. 9.)

⁶
The dogged dog-days had begun to bite.
JOHN TAYLOR, *A Very Merry-Wherry-Ferry
Voyage*, l. 6

⁷
All-conquering heat, oh, intermit thy wrath!
And on my throbbing temples potent thus
Beam not so fierce! Incessant still you flow,
And still another fervent flood succeeds,
Pour'd on the head profuse. In vain I sigh,
And restless turn, and look around for night:
Night is far off; and hotter hours approach.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 451.

SUN

I—Sun: Apothegms

⁸ Fabricius finds certain spots and clouds in
the sun.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, Pt. ii, sec. ii, mem. 3.

The sun is not all spots.

AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Obiter Dicta, Second Series: John Milton.

⁹
Make hay while the sun shines,
CERVANTES, Don Quixote, Pt. i, ch. 11.

¹⁰
As thick as motes in the sun-beam.
CHAUCER, Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 12.

As thick and numberless
As the gay motes that people the sunbeams.
MILTON, II Penitence, l. 7.

¹¹
The sun shines on both sides of the hedge.
DENHAM, Proverbs, 49.

The vernal sun new life bestows
Even on the meanest flower that blows.
SCOTT, Marmion: Canto i, Introduction, l. 63.

The religious sun that shines upon his court
Hides not his visage from our cottage but Looks on alike.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, Act iv, sc. 4, l. 454.

¹²
Stand a little out of my sun. (Μικρὸν ἐκ τοῦ ἡλίου μεταστρέψι.)

DIAGENES to Alexander, when the latter asked if there was anything he could do for him.
(PLUTARCH, Lives: Alexander, Ch. 14, sec. 2.)

¹³
The sun, too, visits cesspools and is not defiled. (Ἡ αἰὼς εἰς τοὺς ἀναράτους, ἀλλ' οὐ μιασμεύει.)

DIAGENES. (DIAGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes, Bk. vi, sec. 63.)

The sun, which passeth through pollutions and itself remains as pure as before.

FRANCIS BACON, Advancement of Learning, Bk. ii (1623)

The sun his fairness never he tines,
Though he on the muck heap shines.

ROBERT MANNING (or ROBERT DE BRUNNE),
Handlyng Synne, l. 2299. (1303)

The sun shineth upon the dunghill and is not corrupted.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 43. (1579)

As sunshine, broken in the rill,

Though turn'd aside, is sunshine still!

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Fire-Worshippers.

The sun reflecting upon the mud of strands and shores is unpolluted in his beam.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living, Ch. i, sec. 3.
(1650)

¹⁴
Out of the solar walk and Heaven's highway.
DRYDEN, Threnodia Augustalis, l. 353.

In climes beyond the solar road.

¹⁵
Let not the sun look down and say, Inglorious
here he lies.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

¹⁶
In every country the sun rises in the morning.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Sad soul, take comfort, nor forget
That sunrise never failed us yet.

CELIA THAXTER, *The Sunrise Never Failed Us
Yet*.

¹ The sun, too, will blind you if you persist in gazing at it. (Sol etiam cecat, contra si tendere pergas.)

LUCRATIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, l. 326.

But who can gaze upon the sun in heaven?

TENNISON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 123.

² Suppose the chariot of the sun were given you: what would you do? (Finge datos currus: quid ages?)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 74. Apollo's question to Phaëton.

Why, so this gallant will command the sun.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 198.

³ The sun is a faithful artist, but his choice of emphasis is often too ironical to be intelligible to human faculty.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH THE YOUNGER, Oxford Poetry 1914: Preface.

⁴ He that walks in the sun, though he walk not for that purpose, must needs become sunburned. (Qui in solem venit, licet non in hoc venerit, colorabitur.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Luciliam. Epis. cxiii, 4.

To be still hot summer's tanning.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 29. (1610)

He that walketh in the sun shall be tanned.

DAVID TUVILL, Vade Mecum, p. 56. (1638)

⁵ I 'gin to be aweary of the sun.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 5, l. 49.

⁶ Written as with a sunbeam.

TERTULLIAN, De Resurrectione Carnis. Ch. 47.

Such words fall too often on our cold and careless ears with the triteness of long familiarity; but to Octavia . . . they seemed to be written in sunbeams.

F. W. FARRAR, Darkness and Dawn. Ch. 46.

The great duties of life are written with a sunbeam.

JOHN JORTIN, Sermons. (1751)

⁷ Who would dare say the sun is false? (Solem quis dicere falsum Audeat?)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. i, l. 463.

⁸ Whose dwelling is the light of setting suns.

WORDSWORTH, Lines Composed a Few Miles Above Tintern Abbey, l. 97. A line described by Tennyson as "almost the grandest in the English language."

⁹ A sunbeam took human shape when he was born.

ISRAEL ZANGWILL, The Melting-Pot. Act I.

II—Sun: Its Praises

¹⁰ The sun, centre and sire of light,

The keystone of the world-built arch of heaven.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Heaven.

See the sun!

God's crest upon His azure shield, the Heavens.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Mountain.

See the gold sunshine, patching,
And streaming and streaking across
The grey-green oaks; and catching,
By its long brown beard, the moss.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Earth's Surface.

¹¹ And if the sun would ever shine, there would I dwell.

ANNE BRADSTREET, Contemplations.

¹² Pleasantly, between the petting showers, the sunshine gushes down.

BRYANT, The Cloud on the Way, l. 18.

¹³ The God of life and poesy and light,—
The Sun.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 161.

And representative of the Unknown—
Who chose thee for His shadow!

BYRON, Manfred. Act iii, sc. 2.

¹⁴ The glorious lamp of Heav'n, the radiant sun,
Is Nature's eye.

DRYDEN, The Fable of Acts, l. 165. (OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xiii.)

Thou sun, of this great world both eye and soul.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 171.

Lamp of the world, light of this universe.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, The Chariot of the Sun.

¹⁵ High in his chariot glow'd the lamp of day.

FALCONER, The Shipwreck. Canto i, pt. 3, l. 3.

¹⁶ The great luminary
Aloof the vulgar constellations thick,
That from his lordly eye keep distance due,
Dispenses light from far.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 576.

¹⁷ O thou that with surpassing glory crown'd,
Look'st from thy sole dominion like the God
Of this new world; at whose sight all the stars

Hide their diminish'd heads!

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 32.

Ye little stars, hide your diminish'd rays.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 282.

¹⁸ Blest power of sunshine!—genial Day,
What balm, what life is in thy ray!
To feel thee is such real bliss,
That had the world no joy but this,
To sit in sunshine calm and sweet,—
It were a world too exquisite
For man to leave it for the gloom,
The deep, cold shadow, of the tomb.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Pre-Worshippers, Third Day, l. 342.

1 The glorious sun,
Stays in his course and plays the alchemist,
Turning with splendour of his precious eye
The meagre cloddy earth to glittering gold.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 77.

Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchemy.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xxxiii.

2 That orb'd continent the fire
That severs day from night.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act v, sc. 1, l. 278.

3 In the warm shadow of her loveliness,
He kissed her with his beams.

SHILLY, The Witch of Atlas. St. 2.

4 Fairest of all the lights above,
Thou sun, whose beams adorn the spheres,
And with unwearied swiftness move,
To form the circles of our years.

ISAAC WATTS, Sun, Moon and Stars, Praise Ye the Lord.

5 Give me the splendid silent sun with all his beams full-dazzling!

WALT WHITMAN, Give Me the Splendid Silent Sun.

6 The sunshine seemed to bless,
The air was a caress.

WHITTIER, The Maids of Attitash. St. 24.

7 The sun's gold would not seem pure gold
Unless the sun were in the sky:
To take him thence and chain him near
Would make his beauty disappear.

WILLIAM WINTER, Love's Queen.

III—Sun: Rising and Setting

8 Men rather honour the sun rising than the sun going down.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Alphonsus. Act i, sc. 1.

Most men worship the rising sun.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3470.

Welcome, young Sunrise, since Voltaire is about to set!

FREDERICK THE GREAT, to Baculard d'Arnaud.
Frederick wrote, "Voltaire est à son couchant, Vous êtes à votre aurore." The rendering is Carlyle's.

9 Let others hail the rising sun;
I bow to that whose course is run.

DAVID GARRICK, On the Death of Mr. Pelham.

10 More worship the rising than the setting sun.
(Τὸν ἥλιον ἀνατῆλασσαν ἡλιότερον ἢ δυσμενέον προσκυνοῦσιν.)

POMPEY, to Sulla. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Pompey. Ch. 14, sec. 3.)

You forsake the setting to court the rising sun.
TIBULLUS, to Macro, when the latter seemed favoring Caligula. (TACITUS, Annals. Bk. vi, sec. 46.)

11 Men shut their doors against a setting sun.
SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 2, l. 150.

12 The Sun came up upon the left,
Out of the sea came he!
And he shone bright, and on the right
Went down into the sea.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. 1.

The Sun now rose upon the right:

Out of the sea came he,

Still hid in mist, and on the left

Went down into the sea.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. II.

So sinks the day-star in the ocean bed,
And yet anon repairs his drooping head,
And tricks his beams, and with new spangled ore
Flames in the forehead of the morning sky.

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 168.

13 When the sun shines let foolish goats make sport,

But creep in crannies when he hides his beams.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act II, sc. 2, l. 30.

IV—Sun: Sunrise

See also Dawn, Morning

14 And led by silence more majestic
Than clash of conquering arms, He comes! He Comes!

And strikes out flame from the adoring hills.

ALICE BROWN, Sunrise on Mansfield Mountain.

15 The sun is bright on heaven's brow;

The world's fresh blood runs fleet;

Time is as young as ever now,

Nature as fresh and sweet.

JOHN DAVIDSON, A Ballad of Euthanasia.

16 And all the small fowls singing on the spray

Welcome the lord of light, the lamp of day.

GAVIN DOUGLAS, Morning in May.

17 I saw myself the lambent easy light

Gild the brown horror, and dispel the night.

DRYDEN, Hind and Panther. Pt. II, l. 658.

18 Now from the smooth deep ocean-stream
the sun

Began to climb the heavens, and with new rays

Smote the surrounding fields.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vii, l. 523. (Bryant, tr.)

19 Father of rosy day,
No more thy clouds of incense rise.
But waking flow'rs,
At morning hours,

Give out their sweets to meet thee in the skies.

THOMAS HOOD, Hymn to the Sun. St. 4.

¹ Night's son was driving
His golden-haired horses up;
Over the eastern firths
High flashed their manes.
KNOXLEY, The Longbeards' Saga, l. 122.

² Thou shalt sleep in thy clouds, careless of the voice of the morning.
MACINTYRE, Ossian: Address to the Sun.

³ The east is blossoming! Yea, a rose,
Vast as the heavens, soft as a kiss,
Sweet as the presence of woman is,
Rises and reaches, and widens and grows
Large and luminous up from the sea,
And out of the sea, as a blossoming tree,
Richer and richer, so higher and higher,
Deeper and deeper it takes its hue;
Brighter and brighter it reaches through
The space of heaven and the place of stars,
Till all is as rich as a rose can be.
And my rose-leaves fall into billows of fire.
JOAQUIN MILLER, Sunrise in Venice.

⁴ Right against the Eastern gate,
Where the great Sun begins his state.
MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 59.

⁵ Whether the sun, predominant in Heav'n,
Rise on the earth, or earth rise on the sun, . . .
Solicit not thy thoughts with matters hid,
Leave them to God above, him serve and fear.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 150.

"But," quoth his neighbour, "when the sun
From East to West his course has run,
How comes it that he shows his face
Next morning in his former place?"
"Ho! there's a pretty question, truly!"
Replied our wight, with an unruly
Burst of laughter and delight,
So much his triumph seemed to please him.
"Why, blockhead! he goes back at night,
And that's the reason no one sees him!"
HORACE SMITH, The Astronomical Alderman.

⁶ And see—the Sun himself!—on wings
Of glory up the East he springs.
Angel of Light! who from the time
Those heavens began their march sublime,
Hath first of all the starry choir
Trode in his Maker's steps of fire!
THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Five-Worshippers, Second Day, l. 25.

⁷ Wake! for the Sun, who scatter'd into flight
The Stars before him from the Field of Night, Drives Night along with them from Heav'n,
and strikes

The Sultan's Turret with a Shaft of Light.
OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubáiyát. St. 1. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

⁸ The morning sun has now smiled upon the roofs. (Matutinus sol tectis arisit.)
PETRONIUS, Fragmentis. No. 5.

⁹ Day, peeping from the east, makes the sun turn from black to red, like a boiled lobster.
RABELAIS, Works. Bk. v, ch. 7.

The sun had long since, in the lap
Of Tbetis, taken out his nap,
And, like a lobster boil'd, the morn
From black to red began to turn.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 2, l. 29.

¹⁰ Hark, hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings,
And Phoebus 'gins arise.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 21.

¹¹ The hour before the heavenly-harness'd team
Begins his golden progress in the east.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 221.
An hour before the worshipp'd sun
Peer'd forth the golden window of the east.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 125.

¹² For night's swift dragons cut the clouds full fast,
And yonder shines Aurora's harbinger:
At whose approach, ghosts, wandering here
and there,
Troop home to churchyards.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iii, sc. 2, l. 379.

He fires the proud tops of the eastern pines
And darts his light through every guilty hole.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 42.
As when the golden sun salutes the morn,
And, having gilt the ocean with his beams,
Gallops the zodiac in his glistening coach,
And overlooks the highest-peering hills.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 5.
¹³ At last, the golden oriental gate
Of greatest heaven 'gan to open fair,
And Phoebus, fresh as bridegroom to his mate,
Came dancing forth, shaking his dewy hair.
SPENNER, Faerie Queene. Bk. I, canto v, st. 2.

¹⁴ And yonder fly his scattered golden arrows,
And smite the hills with day.
BAYARD TAYLOR, The Poet's Journal: Third Evening: Morning.

But yonder comes the powerful King of Day,
Rejoicing in the east.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 81.

¹⁵ See how there The cowl'd Night
Kneels on the Eastern sanctuary-stair.
FRANCIS THOMPSON, A Corymbus for Autumn.
¹⁶ It is true, I never assisted the sun materially in his rising; but, doubt not, it was of the last importance only to be present at it.

HENRY DAVID THOREAU, Walden, Ch. 1.

First gilds the clouds, then shows his globe of light.

At such a distance from our eyes, as though He knew what harm his hasty beams would do.

EDMUND WALLER, To the King, Upon His Majesty's Happy Return, l. 1.

V—Sun: Sunset

See also Evening, Twilight

² Come watch with me the azure turn to rose
In yonder West: the changing pageantry,
The fading alps and archipelagoes,
And spectral cities of the sunset-sea.

T. B. ALDEN, Miracles.

³ The sun had gone down fiery red;
And if, that evening, he laid his head
In Thetis's lap beneath the seas,
He must have scalded the goddess's knees.

R. H. BARRAM, The Witches' Frolic.

As far as Phœbus first doth rise,
Until in Thetis' lap he lies,

SIR ARTHUR GORCE, Ode.

⁴ The sun descending in the west,
The evening star does shine;
The birds are silent in their nest,
And I must seek for mine.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Night.

⁵ The sacred lamp of day
Now dipt in western clouds his parting ray.
WILLIAM FALCONER, The Shipwreck. Canto ii,
l. 27.

⁶ For the Elysians the sun seems always to have just set.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, The Infernal Marriage.
Pt. iv, ch. 2.

⁷ Behold him setting in his western skies,
The shadows lengthening as the vapours rise.
DRYDEN, Abdolon and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 268.

⁸ Oft did I wonder why the setting sun
Should look upon us with a blushing face:
Is't not for shame of what he hath seen done,
Whilst in our hemisphere he ran his race?

LYMAN HEATH, On the Setting Sun.

⁹ A late lark twitters from the quiet skies;
And from the west,
Where the sun, his day's work ended,
Lingers as in content,
There falls on the old, grey city
An influence luminous and serene,
A shining peace.

W. E. HENLEY, Margarita Sorori. St. 1.

The smoke ascends

In a rosy-and-golden haze. The spires
Shine, and are changed. In the valley
Shadows rise. The lark sings on. The sun,
Closing his benediction,
Sinks, and the darkening air
Thrills with a sense of the triumphing night—
Night with her train of stars
And her great gift of sleep.

W. E. HENLEY, Margarita Sorori. St. 2.

¹⁰ Now deep in ocean sunk the lamp of light,
And drew behind the cloudy veil of night.

HOMER, Iliad, Bk. viii, l. 605. (Pope, tr.)

¹¹ The sun is a-wait at the ponderous gate of the West.

SIMNEY LANIER, The Marshes of Glynn.

¹² Down sank the great red sun, and in golden,
glimmering vapors
Veiled the light of his face, like the Prophet descending from Sinai.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. i, sec. 4.

After a day of cloud and wind and rain
Sometimes the setting sun breaks out again,
And, touching all the darksome woods with light,
Smiles on the fields, until they laugh and sing,
Then like a ruby from the horizon's ring,
Drops down into the night.

LONGFELLOW, Hanging of the Crane. Pt. vii.

¹³ The sun is set; and in his latest beams
Yon little cloud of ashen gray and gold,
Slowly upon the amber air unrolled,
The falling mantle of the Prophet seems.

LONGFELLOW, A Summer Day by the Sea.

¹⁴ The west is broken into bars
Of orange, gold, and gray;
Gone is the sun, come are the stars,
And night infolds the day.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Songs of Summer Nights.

¹⁵ And the gilded car of day,
His glowing axle doth allay
In the steep Atlantic stream.

MILTON, Comus, l. 95.

¹⁶ The skies yet blushing with departing light.
When fallen dews with spangles deck'd the
glade,
And the low sun had lengthen'd ev'ry shade.

POPE, Pastorals: Autumn, l. 98.

¹⁷ Long on the wave reflected lustres play,
SAMUEL ROGERS, Pleasures of Memory. Pt. i, l. 94.

¹⁸ God is at the anvil, beating out the sun;
Where the molten metal spills,
At His forge among the hills
He has hammered out the glory of a day done.

LEW. SARETT, God Is at the Anvil.

¹ No pale gradations quench his ray,
No twilight dews his wrath allay;
With disk like battle-target red
He rushes to his burning bed,
Dyes the wide wave with bloody light,
Then sinks at once—and all is night.
SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto vi, st. 21.

² The lonely sunsets flare forlorn
Down valleys dreadfully desolate;
The lonely mountains soar in scorn
As still as death, as stern as fate.
ROBERT W. SERVICE, Land That God Forgot.

³ The west yet glimmers with some streaks of day.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 5.

⁴ The setting sun, and music at the close,
At the last taste of sweets, is sweetest last.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 12.

⁵ When the sun sets, who doth not look for night?
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 34.

⁶ The weary sun bath made a golden set,
And, by the bright track of his fiery car,
Gives signal of a goodly day to-morrow.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 3, l. 19.

⁷ The beams of sunset hung their rainbow hues
High 'mid the shifting domes of sheeted spray
That canopied his path o'er the waste deep.
SHREVELEY, Alastor, l. 334.

When, as a token at parting, munificent Day, for remembrance,
Gives, unto men that forget, Ophirs of fabulous ore.
WILLIAM WATSON, Hymn to the Sea. Pt. iii,
l. 15.

Touched by a light that hath no name,
A glory never sung,
Aloft on sky and mountain wall
Are God's great pictures hung.
WHITTIER, Sunset on the Bearcamp. St. 3.

⁸ There sinks the nebulous star we call the sun.
TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. iv, l. 1.

⁹ Nobody of any real culture ever talks nowadays about the beauty of a sunset. Sunsets are quite old-fashioned. They belong to the time when Turner was the last note in art.
OSCAR WILDE, The Decay of Lying.

VI—Sun and Moon

¹⁰ That hour of the day when, face to face, the rising moon beholds the setting sun.
LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. ii, ch. 16.

¹¹ Courses even with the sun
Doth her mighty brother run.
BEN JONSON, The Gipsies Metamorphosed.

¹² And God made two great lights, great for their use

To man, the greater to have rule by day,
The less by night altern.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 346.

¹³ The sun to me is dark
And silent as the moon,
When she deserts the night
Hid in her vacant interlunar cave.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 86.

¹⁴ And teach me how
To name the bigger light, and how the less,
That burn by day and night.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 334.

¹⁵ L'Abbé de Ville proposed a toast.
His master, as the rising Sun;
Reishach then gave the Empress Queen,
As the bright Moon, and much praise won.
The earl of Stair, whose turn came next,
Gave for his toast his own King Will,
As Joshua, the son of Nun,

Who made both Sun and Moon stand still.
UNKNOWN, (Anecdote Library, 1872.) The Empress Queen was Maria Theresa. The same anecdote is related of other men, notably of Benjamin Franklin, who, at a banquet in England, after toasts to Great Britain as the sun which gives light to the whole earth, and to France as the moon whose magic rays move the earth's tides, is said to have toasted Washington "the Joshua of America, who commanded the sun and moon to stand still —and they obeyed."

SUN-DIAL

I—Sun-Dial: Its Mission

¹⁶ Think: the shadow on the dial
For the nature most undone,
Marks the passing of the trial,
Proves the presence of the sun.
E. B. BROWNING, The Fourfold Aspect, l. 107.

¹⁷ The dial tells the golden-lighted hours
In gardens fair with roses.
DOROTHY COOPER JOHNSON, Country Gardens.

¹⁸ The old dial . . . stood as the garden god of Christian gardens. . . . It spoke of moderate labours, of pleasures not protracted after sunset, of temperance, and good hours. . . . The shepherd "carved it out quaintly in the sun";
and, turning philosopher by the very occupation, provided it with mottoes more touching than tombstones.

CHARLES LAMB, *Essays of Elia: The Old
Bencher of the Inner Temple*.

Thou breathing dial! since thy day began
The present hour was ever mark'd with shade.
W. S. LANDOR, The Sun-Dial.

1 Carve out the dials quaintly, point by point,
Thereby to see the minutes how they run,
How many make the hour full complete;
How many hours bring about the day.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act II, sc. 5, l. 24.

2 A sun-dial which keeps very good time.

MARK TWAIN, Autobiography. Vol. II, p. 222.

II—Sun-Dial Mottoes

2a I am a Shade: a Shadowe too arte thou:
I marke the Time: saye, Gossip, dost thou so?
AUSTIN DOBSON, The Sundial.

3 Once at a potent leader's voice I stayed;
Once I went back when a good monarch prayed;

Mortals, howe'er we grieve, howe'er deplore,
The flying shadow will return no more.

WILLIAM HAMILTON, Sun-dial Motto. (CHALMERS, Poets of Scotland, xv, 620.)

4 Plant the seed of time so deep—
Time that shall outgrow all flowers—
That you shall forget to weep,
Beholding such a host of hours.

ROBERT HUNT, Legend for a Sun-dial.

5 A lumine motus. (I am moved by the light.)
MATTERLINCKX, Measure of the Hours' Motto.

6 I mark my hours by shadow;
Mayest thou mark thine by sunshine.
C. B. HILTON-TURVEY, The Sundial. (The Van Heavens.)

7 Time can never take
What Time did not give;
When your shadows have all passed,
I shall live.

HENRY VAN DYKE, The Dial.

8 Hours fly, Flowers die.
New days, New ways,
Pass by. Love stays.
HENRY VAN DYKE, For Katrina's Sun-Dial.

9 Time is Too Slow for those who Wait,
Too Swift for those who Fear,
Too Long for those who Grieve,
Too Short for those who Rejoice,
But for those who Love
Time is not.

HENRY VAN DYKE, For Katrina's Sun-Dial.

10 With warning hand I mark Time's rapid flight
From life's glad morning to its solemn night;
Yet, through the dear God's love, I also show
There's Light above me by the Shade below.
WERTZEL, *Inscription on a Sun-dial for Dr.
Henry I. Bowditch.*

11 He knows but from its shade the present hour.
WORDSWORTH, An Evening Walk, l. 42.

12 Horas non numero nisi serenas. (I count only the hours that are bright.)

UNKNOWN. Ancient sun-dial inscription.

Horas non numero nisi serenas is the motto of a sun-dial near Venice. There is a softness and harmony in the words and in the thought unparalleled. Of all conceits it is surely the most classical. "I count only the hours that are serene."

WILLIAM HAZLITT, On a Sun-Dial.

There stands in the garden of old St. Mark
A sun-dial quaint and gray.

It takes no heed of the hours which in dark
Pass o'er it day by day.

It has stood for ages amid the flowers
In that land of sky and song.

"I number none but the cloudless hours,"
Its motto the live day long.

WILLIAM C. DOANE, Of a Sun-Dial in Venice.

Let others tell of storms and showers,
I'll only mark your sunny hours.

UNKNOWN. A variation of the foregoing.

13 The Natural Clock-work by the mighty ONE
Wound up at first, and ever since have gone.
Inscription on sun-dial on south porch of Seaham church, Durham, England.

14 Our life's a flying shadow, God the pole,
The index pointing to Him is our soul;
Death the horizon, when our sun is set,
Which will through Christ a resurrection get.
Inscription on sun-dial, Glasgow cathedral.

15 Give God thy heart, thy service, and thy gold;
The day wears on, and time is waxing old.
Inscription on sun-dial in the cloister garden of cathedral at Gloucester, England.

16 Hours are Time's shafts, and one comes winged with death.
Inscription on the clock at Keir House.

17 Amende to-day and slack not,
Deythe cometh and warneth not,
Tyme passeth and speketh not.
Inscription on ancient sun-dial at Moccas Hall, near Hereford, England.

18 Vivite, ait, fugie. (Live ye, he says, I flee.)
Motto on sun-dial of Bishop Francis Atterbury, at Rochester, England.

19 As the long hours do pass away,
So doth the life of man decay.
Inscription on sun-dial in garden of Royal Hotel, Sevenoaks, Kent, England.

SUNFLOWER

20 Ah sunflower, weary of time,
Who countest the steps of the Sun,
Seeking after that sweet golden clime
Where the traveller's journey is done.
WILLIAM BLAKE, The Sunflower.

1
The seal a sun-flower; "Elle vous suit partout,"
The motto, cut upon a white cornelian.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 198. Elle vous suit partout: She follows you everywhere.
As the sunflower turns on her god when he sets,
The same look which she turn'd when he rose.

THOMAS MOORE, Believe Me, if All Those Endearing Young Charms.

In the course of the evening, you find chance for certain

Soft speeches to Anne, in the shade of the curtain:
You tell her your heart can be likened to one flower,

"And that, O most charming of women, 's the
sunflower,

Which turns"—here a clear nasal voice, to your terror,

From outside the curtain, says, "That's all an error!"

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 266.

2
Light-enchanted Sunflower, thou
Who gazest ever true and tender
On the sun's revolving splendour!

CALDERON, Magico Prodigioso. Sc. 3, l. 66.
(Shelley, tr.)

Restless Sunflower, cease to move.

CALDERON, Magico Prodigioso. Sc. 3, l. 76.
(Shelley, tr.)

3
The Sunflower, thinking 'twas for him foul shame

To nap by daylight, strove t' excuse the blame;
It was not sleep that made him nod, he said,
But too great weight and largeness of his head.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Poppy, l. 102.

4
With zealous steps he climbs the upland lawn,
And bows in homage to the rising dawn;
Imbibes with eagle eye the golden ray,
And watches, as it moves, the orb of day.

ERASMUS DARWIN, Loves of the Plants. Canto
i, l. 225.

5
Eagle of flowers! I see thee stand,
And on the sun's noon-glory gaze;
With eye like his, thy lids expand,
And fringe their disk with golden rays:
Though fix'd on earth, in darkness rooted
there,

Light is thine element, thy dwelling air,
Thy prospect heaven.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Sun-Flower.

Heavily hangs the broad sunflower
Over its grave in the earth so chilly.

TENNISON, Song.

6
But one, the lofty follower of the sun,
Sad when he sets, shuts up her yellow leaves,
Drooping all night; and, when he warm returns,

Rejoice her enamour'd bosom to his ray.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 216.

SUPERSTITION

I—Superstition: Definitions

7
Superstition is the reproach of the Deity.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Superstition.

The master of superstition is the people; and in all superstition, wise men follow fools.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Superstition.

There is a superstition in avoiding superstition.
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Superstition.

8
Superstition, that poisons and destroys all peace of mind. (Superstitio, qua qui est imbutus quietus esse numquam potest.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. i, ch. 18, sec. 60.

9
A superstition is a premature explanation that overstays its time.

GEORGE ILES, Jottings.

10
The greatest burden in the world is superstition, not only of ceremonies in the church, but of imaginary and scarecrow sins at home.

MILTON, Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce.

11
It was necessary to succumb to superstitions, which are, more than ourselves, the kings of nations. (Il fallut succomber aux superstitions, qui sont, bien plus que nous, les rois des nations.)

VOLTAIRE, Eryphile. Act iii, sc. 2.

II—Superstition: Its Folly

12
I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious.

NEW TESTAMENT: Acts, xvii, 22.

All superstition from thy breast repel.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. i, l. 175.

Better be dumb than superstitious.

BEN JONSON, Elegy on My Muse, l. 73.

13 Sickness and sorrows come and go, but a superstitious soul hath no rest.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
iii, sec. iv, mem. 1, subs. 3.

14 Superstition, which is widespread among the nations, has taken advantage of human weakness to cast its spell over the mind of almost every man. (Superstitio, fusa per gentis, oppressit omnium fere animos atque hominum imbecillitatem occupavit.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 72, sec. 148.

15
All people have their blind side—their superstitions.

CHARLES LAMB, *Essays of Elia: Mrs. Battle's
Opinions on Whist*.

For not to rank nor sex confined
Is this vain age of the mind.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto ii, st. 11.

16
Look, how the world's poor people are amazed

At apparitions, signs and prodigies!

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 925.

No natural exhalation in the sky,
No scope of nature, no distemper'd day,
No common wind, no custom'd event,
But they will pluck away his natural cause
And call them meteors, prodigies and signs,
Abortives, presages and tongues of heaven.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 153.

Ghost, kelpie, wraith,

And all the trumpety of vulgar faith.

CAMPBELL, The Pilgrim of Glencoe, l. 188.

He put this engine [a watch] to our ears, which made an incessant noise like that of a water-mill;
and we conjecture it is either some unknown animal or the god that he worships, but we are more inclined to the latter opinion.

SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels: Voyage to Lilliput.

1 A pupil in the many-chambered school
Where superstition weaves her airy dreams.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 609.

III—Superstition and Religion

2 A great fear . . . is the parent of superstition;
but a discreet and well-guided fear produced religion.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living, p. 317.

I can hardly think there was ever any scared into Heaven.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 59.

3 Superstition is the religion of feeble minds.
EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

Superstition is the only religion of which base souls are capable. (La superstition est la seule religion dont soient capables les âmes basses.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 27.

4 Foul Superstition! howsoever disguised,
Idol, saint, virgin, prophet, crescent, cross,
For whatsoever symbol thou art prized,
Thou sacerdotal gain, but general loss!
Who from true worship's gold can separate thy dross?

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 44.

For superstition will survive,
Purer religion to perplex.

AFERA BERN, On Desire.

5 Superstition consists in a senseless fear of the gods, religion in the pious worship of them.
(Superstitio, in qua inest inanis timor Deorum; religio, quæ deorum pio cultu continetur.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. i, sec. 42.

The destruction of superstition does not mean the destruction of religion. (Superstitio tollenda religio tollitur.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 72, sec. 148.

6 O! Superstition is the giant shadow

Which the solicitude of weak mortality,
Its back towards Religion's rising sun,
Casts on the thin mist of th' uncertain future.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Fragment, No. 42.

7 Superstition is godless religion, devout impiety.

JOSEPH HALL, Of the Superstitious.

8 A foolish superstition introduces the influences of the gods even in the smallest matters.
(Minimis etiam rebus prava religio inserit deos.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxvii, sec. 23.

9 Superstition is related to this life, religion to the next; superstition is allied to fatality, religion to virtue; it is by the vivacity of earthly desires that we become superstitious; it is, on the contrary, by the sacrifice of these desires that we become religious.

MADAME DE STAËL. (ABEL STEVENS, Life of Madame de Staël. Ch. 34.)

10 Crush the infamous thing! (Écrasez l'infâme!)

VOLTAIRE, Letter to d'Alembert, 23 June, 1760.
"By infâme," he wrote, "you will understand that I mean superstition: as for religion, I love and respect it as you do." Voltaire adopted this phrase as his motto.

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. i, ch. 52, sec. 118.

Coming events cast their shadows before.

CAMPBELL, Lochiel's Warning, l. 56.

Often do the spirits

Of great events stride on before the events,
And in to-day already walks to-morrow.

SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Tod. Act v, sc. 1.
(Coleridge, tr.)

Against ill chances men are ever merry;
But heaviness foreruns the good event.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 81.

And in such indexes, although small pricks
To their subsequent volumes, there is seen
The baby figure of the giant mass
Of things to come at large.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act i, sc. 3, l. 343.

14 Nay I have had some omens: I got out of bed backwards too this morning, without premeditation; pretty good that too; but then I stumbled coming down stairs, and met a weasel; bad omens those: some bad, some good, our lives are checquer'd.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act II, sc. 2.

Alas! you know the cause too well;
The salt is spilt, to me it fell;
Then to contribute to my loss,
My knife and fork were laid across:
On Friday, too! the day I dread!
Would I were safe at home in bed!
Last night (I vow to Heav'n 'tis true)
Bounce from the fire a coffin flew.
Next post some fatal news shall tell:
God send my Cornish friends be well!

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Farmer's Wife and the Raven.

1 Send a bird of omen; . . . let him appear upon my right hand.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxiv, l. 310.

How happily rose I on my right side to-day.

2 The menacing gods filled earth, sky, and sea with portents. (Prodigiis terras impleverunt, æthera, pontum.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. 1, l. 525.

3 It is a bad sign; a Roman would have turned back.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, when his horse stumbled and threw him as he was about to cross the Nieman on his invasion of Russia, 24 June, 1812. (LOCKHART, Life.) Malsherbes had said it before him.

4 There is something in omens. (Omina sunt aliqualia.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. 1, eleg. 12, l. 3.

5 You shall be rewarded for that omen, Sir Omener! (Ob istuc omen, ominator, capies quod te condecet.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 722. (Act II, sc. 2.)

6 It's a bad sign when a man in a sweat shivers. (Pro monstro extemplo est, quando qui sudat tremat.)

PLAUTUS, Astinaria, l. 289. (Act II, sc. 2.)

7 This day black omens threat the brightest fair, That e'er deserv'd a watchful spirit's care.

Pope, The Rape of the Lock. Canto II, l. 101.

8 Midnight hags,
By force of potent spells, of bloody characters,
And conjurations horrible to hear,
Call fiends and spectres from the yawning deep,
And set the ministers of hell at work.

NICHOLAS ROWE, Jane Shore. Act IV, sc. 1, l. 240.

9 Release, ye gods, release the mind from such omens. (Solvite tantis animum monstria, Solvite Superi!)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 1063.

10 Some devils ask but the parings of one's nail,
A rush, a hair, a drop of blood, a pin,
A nut, a cherry-stone;
But she, more covetous, would have a chain.
Master, be wise; an if you give it her,
The devil will shake her chain and fright us with it.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act IV, sc. 3, l. 72.

11 In what particular thought to work I know not:

But in the gross and scope of my opinion,
This bodes some strange eruption to our state.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act I, sc. 1, l. 67.

12 The graves stood tenantless, and the sheeted dead

Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets:
As stars with trains of fire and dews of blood,
Disasters in the sun.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act I, sc. 1, l. 113.

Fierce fiery warriors fought upon the clouds,
In ranks and squadrons and right form of war,
Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act II, sc. 2, l. 19.

And ghosts did shriek and squeal about the streets.

O Cæsar! these things are beyond all use,
And I do fear them.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act II, sc. 2, l. 24.

13 At my nativity
The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes,
Of burning cressets; and at my birth
The frame and huge foundation of the earth
Shaked like a coward.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act III, sc. 1, l. 13.

The owl shriek'd at my birth, an evil sign;
The night-crow cried, aboding luckless time.
Dogs howled.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act V, sc. 6, l. 47.

14 These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us: though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent effects: love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide: in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason; and the bond cracked 'twixt son and father.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act I, sc. 2, l. 112.

The night had been unruly: where we lay,
Our chimneys were blown down; and, as they say,
Lamentings heard i' the air; strange screams of death,
And prophesying with accents terrible

Of dire combustion and confused events
New hatch'd to the woeful time: the obscure bird

Claour'd the livelong night: some say, the earth

Was feverous and did shake.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 59.

Stones have been known to move and trees to speak.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 123.

The bay-trees in our country are all wither'd
And meteors fright the fixed stars of heaven;
The pale-faced moon looks bloody on the earth
And lean-look'd prophets whisper fearful change;
Rich men look sad and ruffians dance and leap,
The one in fear to lose what they enjoy,
The other to enjoy by rage and war:
These signs forerun the death or fall of kings.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 8.

By the pricking of my thumbs,
Something wicked this way comes.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 44.

Then it was not for nothing that my nose fell a-bleeding on Black-Monday.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
ii, sc. 5, l. 24.

If a man's nose bleeds one drop at the left nostril it is a sign of good luck, and vice versa.

SIR JOHN MELLTON, Astrologaster. (1620)

It is the part of men to fear and tremble,
When the most mighty gods by tokens send
Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act i, sc. 3, l. 54.

SURETY

Act as surety, and ruin is at hand. (Ἐγγύη, ῥάπα δ' ἄρα.)

CHILON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Chilon. Bk. i, sec. 73.) Diogenes Laertius states that this was Chilon's apothegm, but it has also been ascribed to Thales of Miletus. It was one of the three maxims inscribed upon the temple of Apollo at Delphi. See under MODERATION.

Act as surety, and ruin stands near you. (Ἐν ῥάπα δ' ἄρα, ῥάπα δ' ἄρα, ῥάπα δ' ἄρα, ῥάπα δ' ἄρα, Sponde, noxa set presto tibi.)

TRAIANUS. (AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum,
l. 180.)

I could give a thousand instances to prove that those who give bond or bail appear at the bar of regret. (Per mille possem currere exempla, ut propter Praedes vadesque penitendinis reos.)

AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 182.

Having consented to be one of three sureties, I was caught. So did the inscription at Delphi hold good for once, that suretyship is woe.

CRATINUS THE YOUNGER, Fragment.

Be surety for another and harm is at hand.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs, 20. (1539)

A person who can't pay gets another person who can't pay to guarantee that he can pay.

Like a person with two wooden legs getting another person with two wooden legs to guarantee that he has got two natural legs. It don't make either of them able to do a walking match.

DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Pt. i, ch. 23.

My son, if thou be surety for thy friend, if thou hast stricken thy hand with a stranger,
Thou art snared with the words of thy mouth.

Old Testament: Proverbs, vi, 1-2.

My son, if I, Hafiz, thy father, take hold of thy knees in my pain,

Demanding thy name on stamped paper, one day or one hour—refrain.

Are the links of thy fetters so light that thou cravest another man's chain?

RUDYARD KIPLING, Certain Maxims of Hafiz.
No. 19.

He that is surety for a stranger shall smart for it: and he that hateth suretyship is sure.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xi, 15.

He who is surety is never sure.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 4.

One of the greatest in the Christian world
Shall be my surety.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act
iv, sc. 4, l. 3.

Procure your sureties for your days of answer.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 159.

Have pity; I'll be his surety.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 473.

But yet I'll make assurance double sure,
And take a bond of fate.

Suspicion is the companion of mean soul.

THOMAS PAINE, Common Sense. Ch. iii.

14 All seems infected that th' infected spy,
As all looks yellow to the jaundic'd eye.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 358.

15 The losing side is full of suspicion. (Ad tristem partem strenua est suspicio.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 7.

16 All is not well; I doubt some foul play.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 255.

17 Suspicion all our lives shall be stuck full of eyes.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 2, l. 8.

See what a ready tongue suspicion hath!

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 1, l. 84.

Hath not the world one man but he will wear his cap with suspicion?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
i, sc. 1, l. 200.

18 Bid suspicion double-lock the door.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 448.

19 If I shall be condemn'd
Upon surmises, all proofs sleeping else
But what your jealousies awake, I tell you,
'Tis rigour and not law.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 112.

20 All persons, as they grow less prosperous, grow more suspicious. (Omnes, quibus res sunt minus secundæ magis sunt, nescio quo-modo. Suspiciosi.)

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 605. (Act iv, sc. 3.)

SWALLOW

I—Swallow: One Swallow Does Not Make
Summer

21 One swallow does not make spring, nor does one fine day. (Μία γὰρ χελιδὼν ἅπ' ὅναι, ὅσπερ μία ἡμέρα.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. i, ch. 7,
sec. 16.

One swallow does not make summer. (Una Golondrina sola no hace verano.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 13.

One swallow maketh not summer.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Bk. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

22 One foul wind no more makes a winter, than one swallow makes a summer.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 43.

23 One swallow proveth not that summer is near.
JOHN NORTHBROOK, Treatise against Dancing.
(1577)

¹ It's surely summer, for there's a swallow:
Come one swallow, his mate will follow,
The bird race quicken and wheel and thicken.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, A Bird Song. St. 2.

² The swallow follows not summer more willing than we your lordship.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 31.

³ It is not one swallow that bringeth in summer.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs, 25. (1539)

Nay soft (said the widow) one swallow makes not a summer, nor one meeting a marriage.

THOMAS DELONEY, Jacks of Newberie. Ch. 1.
(c. 1597)

II—Swallow: Description

⁴ In truth, I rather take it thou hast got
By instinct wise much sense about thy lot,
And hast small care
Whether an Eden or a desert be Thy home, so thou remain'st alive, and free
To skim the air.

JANE WELSH CARLYLE, To a Swallow Building under Our Eaves.

⁵ Down comes rain drop, bubble follows;

On the house-top one by one

Flock the synagogue of swallows,

Met to vote that autumn's gone.

THÉOPHILE GAUTIER, Life, a Bubble.

⁶ But, as old Swedish legends say,
Of all the birds upon that day,
The swallow felt the deepest grief,
And longed to give her Lord relief,
And chirped when any near would come.

"Hugsvala svala sval honom!"

Meaning, as they who tell it deem,

Oh, cool, oh, cool and comfort Him!

CHARLES GODFREY LELAND, The Swallow.

⁷ The swallow is come! The swallow is come!

O, fair are the seasons, and light

Are the days that she brings with her dusky

wings,

And her bosom snowy white!

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. ii, ch. 1.

⁸ The swallow is not ensnared by men because of its gentle nature. (At caret insidiis hominum, quia mitis, hirundo.)

OVID, Art Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 149.

⁹ Come, summer visitant, attach

To my reed roof your nest of clay,

And let my ear your music catch,

Low twittering underneath the thatch

At the grey dawn of day.

CHARLOTTE SMITH, The First Swallow.

¹⁰ Swallow, my sister, O sister swallow,

How can thine heart be full of the spring?

A thousand summers are over and dead.
What hast thou found in the spring to follow?
What hast thou found in thy heart to sing?
What wilt thou do when the summer is shed?

SWINBURNE, Itylus. St. 1.

For where thou fliest I shall not follow,

Till life forget and death remember,

Till thou remember and I forget.

SWINBURNE, Itylus. St. 5.

¹¹ Nature's licensed vagabond, the swallow.

TENNYSON, Queen Mary. Act v, sc. 1, l. 12.

¹² The swallow sweeps

The slimy pool, to build his hanging house.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 654.

SWAN

See also GOOSE

¹³ A swan swam in a silver lake,

And gracefully swam the swan.

MRS. E. L. AVELINE, The Swan.

On thy fairy bosom, silver lake,

The wild swan spreads his snowy sail,

And round his breast the ripples break

As down he bears before the gale.

JAMES GATES PERCIVAL, To Seneca Lake.

¹⁴ And swans seem whiter if swart crows be by.

DUBARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week

i, day 1. (Sylvester, tr.)

Such as ne'er saw swans

May think crows beautiful.

MASSINGER, Great Duke of Florence. Act iii

¹⁵ There's double beauty whenever a swan

Swims on a lake, with her double thereon.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Honey- moon, l. 1852.

The swan on still St. Mary's Lake

Float double, swan and shadow!

WORDSWORTH, Yarrow Unvisited, l. 43.

¹⁶ As rare a bird upon the earth as a black swan.

(Rara avis in terris nigroque simillima cyano.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 165.

¹⁷ The swan, with arched neck

Between her white wings mantling proudly, rows

Her state with oary feet.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 438.

Like some full-breasted swan

That, fluting a wild carol ere her death,

Ruffles her pure cold plume, and takes the flood

With swarthy webs.

TENNYSON, The Passing of Arthur, l. 434.

¹⁸ I have seen a swan

With bootless labour swim against the tide,

And spend her strength with over-matching waves.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act i, sc. 4, l. 19.

All the water in the ocean

Can never turn the swan's black legs to white,

Although she lave them hourly in the flood.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, iv, 2, 101.

2 The stately-sailing swan
Gives out his snowy plumage to the gale,
And, arching proud his neck, with oary feet
Bears forward fierce, and guards his oster-isle,
Protective of his young.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 778.

II—Swans: Their Death-Song

8 The jealous swan, against his death that singeth.
CHAUCER, Parlement of Foules, l. 342. (c. 1370)
The yellow swan famous and agreeable,
Against his death melodiously singing.
JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 157. (c. 1430)
Thus, like a dying swan, to a sad tune, I sing my own dirge.

MASSINGER, Emperor of the East, v, 3. (1631)
Thus on Mæander's flowery margin lies
Th' expiring swan, and as he sings he dies.
POPE, The Rape of the Lock, Canto v, l. 65.
4 Not without cause is the swan dedicated to Apollo, because, foreseeing his happiness in death, he dies with a song of rapture.

CICERO, Tusculanorum Disputationum. Bk. I,
ch. 30, sec. 73.

The swan murmurs sweet strains with failing tongue, itself the minstrel of its own death. (Dulcia defecta modulatur carmina lingua Cantator, cygnus, funeris ipse sui.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xlii, epig. 77.

A Latin proverb, Cygnus cantio, which among the common people is termed a lightning before death.
THOMAS COGAN, Haven of Health, 135. (1584)
See 397:15.

The cock swan is an emblem or representation of an affectionate and true husband to his wife above all other fowls; for the cock swan holdeth himself to one female only, and for this cause nature hath conferred on him a gift before all others; that is, to die so joyfully, that he sings sweetly when he dies; upon which the poet saith:
*Dulcia defecta modulatur carmina lingua,
Cantator, cygnus, funeris ipse sui, etc.*

SIR EDWARD COKE, Decision, the Case of Swans, 1600. (4 Rep. 85.)

8 Death darkens his eyes, and unplumes his wings,

Yet the sweetest song is the last he sings:
Live so, my Love, that when death shall come,

Swan-like and sweet it may waft thee home.
GEORGE WASHINGTON DOANE, The Swan.

8 The immortal swan that did her life deplore.
GILES FLETCHER, Temptation and Victory of Christ.

7 The dying swan, when years her temples pierce,
In music-strains breathes out her life and verse,
And, chanting her own dirge, tides on her wat'ry hearse.

FERDINAND FLETCHER, Purple Island. Canto I.

8 'Tis strange that death should sing.
I am the cygnet to this pale faint swan,
Who chants a doleful hymn to his own death,
And from the organ-pipe of frailty sings
His soul and body to their lasting rest.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act v, sc. 7, l. 20.

8 He makes a swan-like end, Fading in music.
SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice, iii, 2, 44.

I will play the swan, and die in music.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 247.

There, swan-like, let me sing and die.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 66.

10 And now this pale swan in her watery nest
Begins the sad dirge of her certain ending.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1161.

11 Will you not admit that I have as much of the spirit of prophecy in me as the swans?
For they, when they perceive approaching death, sing more merrily than ever, rejoicing in the thought that they are going to the god they serve.

SOCRATES. (PLATO, Phædo. Sec. 84, fin.)

12 The wild swan's death-hymn took the soul
Of that waste place with joy
Hidden in sorrow. At first to the ear
The warble was low, and full and clear.

TENNISON, The Dying Swan. St. 3.

SWEARING

of taking an oath, see OATH, Vow

I—Swearing: Apothegms

12 'Tis strange—the Hebrew noun which means
"I am,"

The English always use to govern d—n.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 14.

Ethelberta breathed a sort of exclamation, not right out, but stealthily, like a parson's damn.
THOMAS HARDY, Hand of Ethelberta. Ch. 26.

Seeing would certainly have led to D—ing.
THOMAS HOOD, Legend of Navarre.

Jack was embarrassed—never hero more,
And as he knew not what to say, he swore.
BYRON, The Island. Canto iii, st. 5.

14 He that sweareth deep, sweareth like a lord.
SIR THOMAS ELYOT, The Governour, l. 26. (1531)

He swore like a trooper.
D. M. MOIR, Mamie Wauch. Ch. 14. (1824)

If you swear till you are black in the face, I shan't believe you.

FANNY BURNEY, Evelina, ii, 23. (1778)

I'd swear, till I was black in the face, he was innocent.

THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 55. (1859)

1 I'm Gormed--and I can't say no fairer than that!

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 63.

2 Most bitter Billingsgate rhetoric.

EDMUND GAYTON, Festivous Notes on Don Quixote, p. 60. (1654)

Such Billingsgate language as should not come out of the mouth of any man.

ROGER NORTH, Lives of the Norths, i, 288.

Muirhead (Blue Guide to London, p. 398) states that Billingsgate, as a synonym for coarse language, is an unjust aspersion on fish-porters.

Rather too close an imitation of that language which is used in the apostolic occupation of trafficking in fish.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letters to Archdeacon Singleton. No. 3.

3 Bad language or abuse

I never, never use,

Whatever the emergency;

Though "Bother it" I may

Occasionally say,

I never never use a big, big D.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act I.

One word alone is all that strikes the ear, One short, pathetic, simple word, . . .

"Oh, dear!"

ROBERT BLOOMFIELD, The Farmer's Boy: Autumn, l. 157.

4 It's most enough to make a deacon swear.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser II, No. 2.

5 When I swear after mine own fashion, it is only by God; the directest of all oaths.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. III, ch. 5.

6 He speaks Bear-garden.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 66. (1678)

This is brave Bear-garden language.

JEREMY COLLIER, Short View of the Immorality and Profaneness of the English Stage, p. 232. (1698)

He's as great a master of ill language as ever was bred at a Bear-garden.

EDWARD WARD, London Terrafluvius. No. III, p. 29. (1707)

7 He'll swear dagger out of sheath; he'll swear the devil out of hell.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 271.

When he's excited he uses language that would make your hair curl.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act I.

Full of strange oaths.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act II, sc. 7, l. 150.

Form'd at the mouth, and swore.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act V, sc. 5, l. 276.

8 Swear me, Kate, like a lady as thou art, A good mouth-filling oath, and leave "in sooth,"

And such protest of pepper-gingerbread, To velvet-guards and Sunday-citizens.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act III, sc. 1, l. 258.

9 Swearing till my very roof was dry.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, III, 2, 206.

10 You taught me language; and my profit on 't Is, I know how to curse.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act I, sc. 2, l. 363.

11 "Our armies swore terribly in Flanders," cried my Uncle Toby, "but nothing to this."

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. III, ch. 11.

12 A footman may swear, but he cannot swear like a lord. He can swear as often, but can he swear with equal delicacy, propriety and judgment?

SWIFT, Polite Conversation: Introduction.

II--Swearing: Its Virtues

13 Some fresh new oath that is not stale, but will rin round in the mouth.

ROGER ASCHAM, The Scholemaster.

14 Take not God's name in vain; select

A time when it will have effect.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary: The Decalogue Revised.

15 Damn braces. Bless relaxes.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

16 I confess to some pleasure from the stinging rhetoric or a rattling oath.

EMERSON, Journals, 1840.

17 Page . . . take my hat . . . and go down into the courtyard and swear for me for just a short half-hour. I will swear for you when you wish it. (Paige . . . tiens ici mon bonnet . . . et va en la basse court jurer une petite demie heure pour moy. Je jureray pour toy quand tu voudras.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. III, ch. 36.

18 A whoreson jackanapes must take me up for swearing; as if I borrowed mine oaths of him and might not spend them at my pleasure. . . . When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths, ha?

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act II, sc. 1, l. 4.

It comes to pass oft that a terrible oath, with a swaggering accent sharply twanged off, gives manhood more approbation than ever proof itself would have earned him.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act III, sc. 4, l. 196.

19 In certain trying circumstances, urgent circumstances, desperate circumstances, profanity furnishes a relief denied even to prayer.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

III—Swearing: Its Faults

1 The more you are averse to base actions, the more you should keep yourself from licence in language. (Quantum a rerum turpitudine abes, tantum te a verborum libertate sejungas.)

2 CICERO, Pro Caelo. Pt. iii, sec. 8.

3 But mutters coward curses as he goes.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 64.

4 Take not His name, who made thy mouth, in vain;

It gets thee nothing, and hath no excuse.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 10.

Lust and wine plead a pleasure, avarice gain;

But the cheap swearer through his open sluice

Lets his soul run for nought, as little fearing.

Were I an Epicure, I could bate swearing.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 10.

When thou dost tell another's jest, therein

Omit the oaths, which true wit cannot need.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 11.

5 Who spits against heaven, it falls in his face.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

6 Things past recovery

Because the insult 's not on man but God?

Pope, Epilogue to Satires. Dialogue ii, l. 195.

8 To swear at all, except when absolutely necessary, is unbecoming to a man of sense.

(In totum jurare, nisi ubi necesse est, gravi viro parum convenit.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. ix,

ch. 2, sec. 98.

9 Why, what an ass am I! This is most brave,

That I, the son of a dear father murder'd,

Prompted to my revenge by heaven and hell,

Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with words,

And fall a-cursing, like a very drab,

A scullion!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 611.

18 Sweet as love,

Or the remembrance of a generous deed.

WORDSWORTH, The Prelude. Bk. vi, l. 682.

II—Sweetness: Sweet and Sour

19 The bitter goes before the sweet. Yea, and for as much as it doth, it makes the sweet the sweeter.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. II.

The little sweet doth kill much bitterness.

KEATS, Isabella. St. 13.

20 No tasting earth's true food for men,

Its sweet in sad, its sad in sweet.

ROBERT BROWNING, His Aliter Vivum. St. 25.

21 The bud may have a bitter taste,

But sweet will be the flower.

COWPER, Light Shining Out of Darkness.

1 Much I muse,
How bitter can spring up, when sweet is sown.
(Come uscir può di dolce seme amaro.)

DANTE, Paradise. Canto viii, l. 93. (Cary, tr.)

2 He deserves not sweet that will not taste of sour.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1834.

He hath not deserved this sweet before he hath tasted some sour.

HENRY GOLDINGHAM, Garden Plot, p. 60. (c. 1575) stomach.

UNKNOWN, Politeuphonia, 172. (1669)

Good in the mouth and bad in the maw.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5511.

It is sweet in the mouth but bitter in the belly.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Westward Ho. Ch. 11.

12 Sweet is the rose, but grows upon a briar;
Sweet is the juniper, but sharp his bough;
Sweet is the eglantine, but pricketh near;
Sweet is the firbloom, but his branches rough;
Sweet is the cypress, but his rind is tough;
Sweet is the nut, but bitter is his pill;
Sweet is the broom-flower, but yet sour
enough;

And sweet is moly, but his root is ill.

So every sweet with sour is tempered still.

SPENSER, Amoretti. Sonnet xxvi.

Every excess causes a defect; every defect an excess. Every sweet hath its sour; every evil its good. . . . For every grain of wit there is a grain of folly. For everything you have missed, you have gained something else; and for every thing you gain, you lose something.

SWIMMING

14 It is one method to practise swimming with bladders, and another to practise dancing with heavy shoes.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

But swam, 'till Fortune threw a rope.

Buoyant on bladders filled with hope.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Speen, l. 51.

My whole life, since I was left to myself to swim, as they say, without bladders.

JAMES HOWELL, Pre-eminence of Parliament, 17.

Little wanton boys that swim on bladders.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 359.

I' th' lead o' th' current, were almost to sink.

BEAUMONT and FLETCHER, Two Noble Kinsmen. Act i, sc. 2.

16 He could, perhaps, have pass'd the Hellespont,
As once (a feat on which ourselves we prided)
Leander, Mr. Ekenhead, and I did.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 105.

I read it in the story-book, that, for to kiss his
dear,

Leander swam the Hellespont,—and I will swim
this here.

O. W. HOLMES, The Ballad of the Oysterman.

17 They told me you had been to her,
And mentioned me to him:

She gave me a good character,

But said I could not swim.

I can swim like a fish.
JOHN FLETCHER, The Sea-Voyage, i, 1. (1622)
- 7 A purer passion, a lordlier leisure,
A peace more happy than lives on land,
Fulfills with pulse of diviner pleasure
The dreaming head and the steering hand.
I lean my cheek to the cold grey pillow,
The deep soft swell of the full broad billow,
And close mine eyes for delight past measure,
And wish the wheel of the world would stand.
SWINBURNE, A Suckermor's Dream, Pt. v, st. 2.

SWINE

- 8 Root, hog, or die. This is the refrain of each of the nine verses of the Bull-Whacker's Epic.

- 9 Thus says the prophet of the Turk:
Good mussulman, abstain from pork;
There is a part in ev'ry swine
No friend or follower of mine
May taste, whate'er his inclination,
On pain of excommunication. . . .
But for one piece they thought it hard
From the whole hog to be debar'd. . . .
With sophistry their sauce they sweeten,
Till quite from tail to snout 'tis eaten.
COWPER, Love of the World Reproved, l. 2.
- 10 Though he love not to buy the pig in the poke.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. 1, ch. 9. (1546)

LINCOLN, First Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1861.

13
Children are to be deceived with comfits and men with oaths.

LYSANDER (Bacon, Advancement of Learning, bk. ii, refers to it as "that other principle of Lysander")

14
I know that he will rather believe me un-sworn than you upon oath. (Injurato scio plus credet mihi quam jurato tibi.)

PIAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 437. (Act i.)

15
You're a woman; you swear boldly. (Mulier es; audacter juras.)

PIAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 836. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

16
I write a woman's oaths in water.

SOPHOCLES, Fragmenta. No. 694.

A woman's oaths are wafers, break with making.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Chances. Act ii, sc. 1.

17
He that sweareth to his own hurt and changeth not.

Old Testament: Psalms, xv, 4.

18
Oaths are the fossils of piety.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Interpretations of Poetry, 148.

- 1 As false as dicers' oaths.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, Act iii, sc. 4, l. 45.
- For oaths are straws, men's faiths are wafer-cakes
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V., Act ii, sc. 3, l. 52.
- The strongest oaths are straw
To the fire i' the blood.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, Act iv, sc. 1, l. 54.
- 2 Thou swear'st thy goils in vain.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, Act i, sc. 1, l. 162.
- 3 Having sworn too hard a keeping oath,
Study to break it and not break my troth
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, Act i, l. 65.
- What fool is not so wise
To break an oath, to win a paradise?
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, Act iv, sc. 3, l. 72. Also The Passionate Pilgrim, l. 41.
- 4 An oath, an oath, I have an oath in heaven:
Shall I lay perjury upon my soul?
No, not for Venice.
SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice, iv, 1, 228.
- I'll take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath,
Who shuns not to break one will sure crack both
SHAKESPEARE, Pericles, Act i, sc. 2, l. 120.
- 5 If it be ne'er so false, a true gentleman may swear it in the behalf of his friend.
SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, Act v, sc. 2, l. 175.
- 7 Let my right hand forget her cunning . . .
Let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth.
Old Testament: Psalms, cxxvii, 5-6
- May my right hand forget her cunning, and my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth, if I hesitate or waver in the support I give him (Washington).
- DANIEL WEBSTER, Supposed Speech of John Adams
- When I cease to do that, may my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth, and my right hand forget its cunning.
- JAMES G. BLAINE, Speech, in U. S. Senate, 8
March, 1877, referring to his defence of Southern Unionists. (Cong. Record, 45th Cong., special session of Senate, p. 21.)

OBEDIENCE

I—Obedience: Apothegms

- 8 Obedience is the mother of success, the wife of safety. (Πειθαρχία γὰρ τὰν τῆς εὐτυχίας μήτηρ, γυνὴ σωτηρίας.)
ÆSCHYLUS, Seven Against Thebes, l. 224.
- 9 The fear of some divine and supreme powers keeps men in obedience.
BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sc.
iv, mem. 1, subs. 2.

- By contenting ourselves with obedience we become divine
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Spiritual Laws.
- 10 Obedience is the key to every door.
GEORGE MACDONALD, Marquis of Lossie. Ch. 53.
- We must do the thing we must
Before the thing we may;
We are unfit for any trust
Till we can and do obey.
GEORGE MACDONALD, Willie's Question. Pt. iv.
- 11 All the good of which humanity is capable is comprised in obedience
J. S. MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 3
- 12 Even though a goit, I have learnt to obey the times (Κατὰ δουλοῦμαι καὶ τοῖς ἄνθρωποις)
PALLAGAS, On a Statue of Hercules. (Greek Anthology Bk. ix, epig. 441.)
- 13 He who takes his orders gladly, escapes the bitterest part of slavery.—doing what one does not want to do. The man who does something under orders is not unhappy; he is unhappy who does something against his will.
SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucillum, Epist. lxi, sec. 3
- Let them obey our orders. (Jussisque nostri-parent.)
SENECA, Octavia, l. 459.
- 14 O calm, dishonourable, vile submission!
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 1, 76.
- Obedience,
Bane of all genius, virtue, freedom, truth,
Makes slaves of men, and, of the human frame,
A mechanized automaton.
SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Canto iii, l. 177.
- 15 Give obedience where 'tis truly owed.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, Act v, sc. 2, l. 26.
- 16 (One so small)
Who knowing nothing knows but to obey.
TENNYSON, Ginevere, l. 183.
- 17 Obedience is the courtesy due to kings.
TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 713.
- Obedience is the bond of rule.
TENNYSON, Morte d'Arthur, l. 145.
- 18 What the law demands, give of your own free will. (Quod vos vis cogit, id voluntate impetret.)
TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 490. (Act iii, sc. 4.)
- II—Obedience to God
- 19 I find the doing of the will of God, leaves me no time for disputing about His plans.
GEORGE MACDONALD, Marquis of Lossie. Ch. 72.
- 20 That thou art happy, owe to God;
That thou continuest such, owe to thyself,
That is, to thy obedience.
MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. v, l. 520.

1. Wouldst thou approve thy constancy, approve
First thy obedience.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 367.

2. Ascend, I follow thee, safe guide, the path
Thou lead'st me, and to the band of heav'n submit.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 371.

I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord,
O'er mountain or plain or sea;

I'll say what you want me to say, dear Lord,
I'll be what you want me to be.

MARY BROWN, I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go. The favorite hymn of William Jennings Bryan.

3. Henceforth I learn that to obey is best,
And love with fear the only God.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xii, l. 561.

III—Obedience and Command

4. The man who commands efficiently must have obeyed others in the past, and the man who obeys dutifully is worthy of being some day a commander. (Qui bene imperat, paruerit aliquando necesse est, et qui modeste paret, videtur, qui aliquando imperet, dig-nus esse.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. iii, ch. 2, sec. 5.

5. Obedience alone gives the right to command.
EMERSON, Lectures and Sketches: Perpetual Forces.

6. Who hath not served can not command.

JOHN FLOKID, First Fruits, Fo. 28. (1578)

7. I profess . . . so much of the Roman principle as to deem it honorable for the general of yesterday to act as a corporal today, if his services can be useful to his country.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiii, p. 186.

8. How fit he is to sway That can so well obey!

ANDREW MARVELL, *An Horatian Ode Upon
Cromwell's Return from Ireland*.

9. Who best
Can suffer, best can do; best reign, who first

Well hath obeyed.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iii, l. 194.

10. The worthiest and best science that may be, to wit, the knowledge how to obey, and the skill how to command.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 14.

11. There was neither command nor obedience.
(Nusquam imperium, nusquam obsequium.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. viii, epist.

14.

12. Obedience is yielded more readily to one who commands gently. (Remissius imperanti melius paretur.)

SENECA, De Clementia. Bk. i, sec. 24.

He that most courteously commandeth, to him
men most obey.

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibew. Sec. 77.
(Translation of above.)

13. No one can rule except one who can be ruled.
(Nemo autem regere potest, nisi qui et regni.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, sec. 15.

14. Let them obey that know not how to rule.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act v, sc. 1, l. 6.

15. No man can ever end with being superior who will not begin with being inferior.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy.
Lecture 9.

16. Learn to obey before you command. ("Ἀπὸ πρώτου μάθαι ὑπακούειν.")

SOLOM. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solon. Bk. i, 60.)

Through obedience learn to command.

PLATO, Leges. Sec. 762.

17. The common saying, "He was never good master that never was scholar, nor never good captain that never was soldier."

THOMAS STARKER, *England in the Reign of
Henry VIII*. Pt. i, ch. 1.

18. No man securely commands but he who has learned to obey.

THOMAS A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt.
i, ch. 20.

19. Taught to submit,
A harder lesson than to command.

JAMES THOMSON, Liberty. Pt. iii, l. 156.

OBLIVION

20. The iniquity of oblivion blindly scattereth her poppy, and deals with the memory of men without distinction to merit of perpetuity. Who can but pity the founder of the pyramids? . . . Oblivion is not to be hired.
The greater part must be content to be as though they had not been.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. 5, secs. 8, 9. See also MONUMENT.

21. Those sacred Powers Tread on oblivion.

WILLIAM BROWNE, Brianston's Pastorals. Bk.
ii, song 2, l. 435.

22. Without oblivion, there is no remembrance possible. When both oblivion and memory are wise, when the general soul of man is clear, melodious, true, there may come a modern Iliad as memorial of the Past.

CARLYLE, Cromwell's Letters and Speeches: Introduction.

Oblivion is the dark page whereon memory writes her lightbeam characters, and makes them legible; were it all light, nothing could be read there, any more than if it were all darkness.

CARLYLE, Essays: On History Again.

1 And o'er the past Oblivion stretch her wing.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xxiv, l. 557. (Pope, tr.)

1a And if I drink oblivion of a day,
So shorten I the stature of my soul.
GEORGE MEREDITH, Modern Love. St. 12.

2 Far off from these, a slow and silent stream,
Lethæ, the River of Oblivion, rolls
Her wat'ry labyrinth, whereof who drinks
Forthwith his former state and being forgets.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 582.

3 Cancell'd from Heav'n and sacred memory,
Nameless in dark oblivion let them dwell.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vi, l. 379.

4 Where dust and damned oblivion is the tomb
Of honour'd bones.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 147.

The dust of old oblivion.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 87.

Razure of oblivion.
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, v, 1, 12.
In the swallowing gulf Of . . . dark oblivion.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iii, sc. 7, l. 129.

5 And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iii, 2, 194.

A certain Pasha, dead five thousand years,
Once from his harem fled in sudden tears,
And had this sentence on the city's gate
Deeply engraven, "Only God is great." . . .

Lost is that city's glory. Every gust Lifts, with dead leaves, the unknown Pasha's dust,

And all is ruin, save one wrinkled gate
Whereon is written, "Only God is great."

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, A Turkish Legend.
For, to make deserts, God, who rules mankind,
Begins with kings, and ends the work by wind.
VICTOR HUGO, The Vanished City.

6 What 's past and what 's to come is strew'd with husks

And formless ruin of oblivion.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iv, 5, 166.

7 I met a traveller from an antique land
Who said: "Two vast and trunkless legs of stone

Stand in the desert. Near them, on the sand,

Half sunk, a shattered visage lies. . . .

And on the pedestal these words appear:

'My name is Ozymandias, king of kings:

Look on my works, ye Mighty, and despair!'

Nothing beside remains. Round the decay

Of that colossal wreck, boundless and bare

The lone and level sands stretch far away."

SHELLEY, Ozymandias of Egypt.

Sole Lord of Lords and very King of Kings,

He sits within the desert, carved in stone;

Inscrutable, colossal, and alone,

And ancienter than memory of things. . . .

Dazed camels pause, and mute Bedouins stare.

This symbol of past power more than man's

Presages doom.

LLOYD MITTLIN, Sesostris.

Where high the tombs of royal Egypt heave,

The vulture shadows with arrested wings

The indecipherable boasts of kings,

Till Arab children hear their mother's cry

And leave in mockery their toy—they leave

The skull of Pharaoh staring at the sky.

GEORGE STERLING, Three Sonnets on Oblivion.

8 Out of the world's way, out of the light,

Out of the ages of worldly weather,

Forgotten of all men altogether.

SWINBURNE, The Triumph of Time. St. 15. See

9 Once in Persia reigned a king

Who upon his signet ring

Graved a maxim true and wise,

Which if held before the eyes

Gave him counsel at a glance

Fit for every change and chance.

Solemn words, and these are they:

"Even this shall pass away."

THEODORE TYLTON, The King's Ring.

And let its meaning permeate

Whatever comes, This too shall pass away.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, This Too Shall Pass

Away.

10 Our name shall be forgotten in time, and no man shall have our works in remembrance, and our life shall pass away as the trace of a cloud, and shall be dispersed as a mist.

APOCRYPHA: Wisdom of Solomon, ii, 4.

OBSCURITY

I—Obscurity of Place

11 I give the fight up; let there be an end,

A privacy, an obscure nook for me,

I want to be forgotten even by God.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. v.

For the fellow lay safe

As his mates do, the midge and the nit,

—Through minuteness, to wit.

ROBERT BROWNING, Instantaneous Tyranny.

12 As night the life-inclining stars best shows,

So lives obscure the starriest souls disclose.
 GEORGE CHAPMAN, Hymns and Epigrams of Homer: The Translator's Epilogue, l. 74.

1 Thy greatest praise had been to live unknown.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 502.

2 Some village Hampden, that with dauntless breast

The little tyrant of his fields withstood;
 Some mute, inglorious Milton here may rest,
 Some Cromwell guiltless of his country's blood.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 57.

How many a rustic Milton has passed by,
 Stifling the speechless longings of his heart,
 In unremitting drudgery and care!

How many a vulgar Cato has compelled
 His energies, no longer tameless then,
 To mould a pin, or fabricate a nail!

SHELLEY, Queen Mab Pt. v, l. 137.

There are no mute, inglorious Miltons, save in the hallucinations of poets. The one sound test of a Milton is that he function like a Milton.
 H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iii, p. 89.

3 There is many a rich stone laid up in the bowels of the earth, many a fair pearl laid up in the bosom of the sea, that never was seen, nor never shall be.

¹³Satiety of all occupation causes satiety of life. (Studiorum omnium satietas vitæ facit satietatem.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xi, sec. 76.

Absence of occupation is not rest.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 623.

There is a restlessness in inactivity; we must find occupation for kings.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Diogenes and Plato.

¹⁴Oh, let us love our occupations,
Bless the squire and his relations,
Live upon our daily rations,
And always know our proper stations.

DICKENS, The Chimes: Second Quarter.

¹⁵What I advise is that each contentedly practise the trade he understands. (Quam scit uterque libens censebo exerceat artem.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 14, l. 44.

¹⁶"Let thine occupations be few," saith the sage,
"if thou wouldst lead a tranquil life." ("Ὁμῆρα πρῶτον, φησὶ, "εἰ μέλλεις εὐθυμῆσθαι.")

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec.

24. Referring to Democritus (STOBÆUS, l. 100). See SENECA, De Tranquillitate, sec. 12.

¹⁷Nothing is so certain as that the vices of leisure are dispersed by occupation. (Nihil tam certum est quam otii vicia negotio discuti.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. lvi, 9.

¹⁸Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 357.

¹⁹Thus Nero went up and down Greece and challenged the fiddlers at their trade, Æropus, a Macedonian king, made lanterns; Harca-tius, the king of Parthia, was a mole-catcher; and Biantes, the Lydian, filed needles.

OCTOBER

October turned my maple's leaves to gold;
The most are gone now; here and there one lingers;

Soon these will slip from out the twig's weak hold,

Like coins between a dying miser's fingers.
THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Maple Leaves.

And suns grow meek, and the meek suns grow brief,
And the year smiles as it draws near its
death.

BRYANT, October: A Sonnet.

The sweet calm sunshine of October, now
Warms the low spot; upon its grassy mould
The purple oak-leaf falls; the birchen bough
Drops its bright spoll like arrow-heads of gold.
BRYANT, October, 1866.

There is something in October sets the gypsy blood astir;

We must rise and follow her,
When from every hill of flame
She calls, and calls each vagabond by name.
BLISS CARMAN, Vagabond Song.

Hail, old October, bright and chill,
First freedman from the summer sun!
Spice high the bowl, and drink your fill!
Thank heaven, at last the summer's done!
THOMAS CONSTABLE, Old October.

There is no season when such pleasant and sunny spots may be lighted on, and produce so pleasant an effect on the feelings, as now in October.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, American Note-Books, 7 Oct., 1841.

The skies they were ashen and sober;
The leaves they were crisped and sere—
The leaves they were withering and sere;
It was night in the lonesome October
Of my most immemorial year.
EDGAR ALLAN POE, Ulaluma.

October's foliage yellows with his cold.
RUSKIN, The Months.

October in New England,
And I not there to see
The glamour of the goldenrod,
The flame of the maple tree!

October in my own land . . .

I know what glory fills
The mountains of New Hampshire
And Massachusetts hills.
ODELL SHEPARD, Home Thoughts.

And close at hand, the basket stood
With nuts from brown October's wood.
WHITTIER, Snow-Bound.

OFFENCE

Neither give offence to others, nor take offence from them.

ST. AMBROSE, Letter to St. Augustine. (TAY-LOR, Ductor Dubitantium, I, l. 5.)

She hugg'd the offender and forgave the offence.

DRYDEN, Cymon and Iphigenia, l. 367.

How shall I lose the sin, yet keep the sense,
And love th' offender, yet detest th' offence?
POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 191.

The offender never pardons.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

What dire offence from am'rous causes
springs.

POPE, Rape of the Lock. Canto I, l. 1.

No offence taken where none is meant.

W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 817.

If a man's armpits are unpleasant, art thou angry with him? If he has foul breath? What would be the use? The man has such a mouth, he has such armpits. Some such effluvium was bound to come from such a source.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. v, sec. 28.

A stumbling-stone and rock of offence.

New Testament: Romans, ix, 33; 1 Peter, ii, 8.

It is not well to see everything, to hear everything; let many causes of offence pass by us unnoticed. (Non expedit omnia videre omnia audire; multæ nos injuriæ transeant.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, sec. 11.

O, my offence is rank, it smells to heaven.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 36.

The rankest compound of villainous smell that ever offended nostril.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act iii, sc. 5, l. 94.

If their "offence be rank," should mine be ranker?

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Ras Wilson, l. 271.

In such a time as this it is not meet
That every nice offence should bear his comment.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 8.

All's not offence that indiscretion finds
And dotage terms so.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 199.

The very head and front of my offending
Hath this extent, no more.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 80.

Time to me this truth has taught,
(Tis a treasure worth revealing)

More offend from want of thought
Than from any want of feeling.

CHARLES SWAIN, Want of Thought.

There are offences given and offences not given but taken.

ISAAC WALTON, The Compleat Angler: Preface.

OPINION

I.—Opinion: Definitions

Opinion is the genius, and, as it were, the foundation of all temporal happiness.

OWEN FELLTHAM, Resolves: Of Opinion.

Opinion in good men is but knowledge in the making.

MILTON, Areopagitica.

It seems to me that the nursing mother of most false opinions, both public and private, is the too high opinion which man has of himself. (Il me semble que la mère nourrice des plus fausses opinions, et publiques et particulières, c'est la trop bonne opinion que l'homme a de soy.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 17.

Truth is one forever absolute, but opinion is truth filtered through the moods, the blood,
the disposition of the spectator.

WENDILL PHILLIPS, Idols.

Opinion is the mistress of fools.

W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 823.

Everything depends on opinion; ambition, luxury, greed, hark back to opinion. It is according to opinion that we suffer. (Omnia ex opinione suspensa sunt; non ambitio tan-tum ad illam respicit et luxuria et avaritia.
Ad opinionem colemus.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epist. 78, sec. 13.

Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan
The outward habit by the inward man.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 56.

All creeds and opinions are nothing but the result of chance and temperament.

J. H. SMOOTHOVE, John Inglesant.

Opinion is ultimately determined by the feelings, and not by the intellect.

HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. iii, ch. 30,
sec. 8.

"There are no diseases, but only persons who are diseased," some doctors say, and I say that there are no opinions, but only opining persons.

MICHEL DE UNAMUNO, Essays and Soliloquies,
p. 156.

II.—Opinion: Apothegms

He that complies against his will,
Is of his own opinion still,

Which he may adhere to, yet disown,
For reasons to himself best known.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto iii, l. 547.
Often misquoted, "A man convinced against his will." See also under ARGUMENT.

A difference of opinion, though in the merest trifles, alienates little minds.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Jan., 1753.

The only sin which we never forgive in each other is difference of opinion.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Clubs.

It were not best that we should all think alike;
it is difference of opinion that makes horse-races.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

His sole opinion, whatsoe'er befall,
Centring at last in having none at all.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 133.

Opinion says hot and cold, but the reality is atoms and empty space.

DEMOCRITUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pyrrho.
Bk. ix, sec. 72.)

"I never offered an opinion till I was sixty," said the old Turk, "and then it was one which had been in our family for a century."

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Iskander. Ch. 8.

Every opinion reacts on him who utters it.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

If thou art a person that hast good authority with the company, 'twere good to look confidently, yet not scornfully, and then mildly say, "This is my opinion."

THOMAS FULLER, Introductio ad Prudentiam.
Vol. i, p. 190.

Some men plant an opinion they seem to eradicate.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jucula Prudentum.

It is not often that an opinion is worth expressing, which cannot take care of itself.

O. W. HOLMES, Medical Essays, p. 211.

A man's opinions, look you, are generally of much more value than his arguments.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Professor at the Breakfast-
Table*. Ch. 5.

With effervescing opinions, as with the not yet forgotten champagne, the quickest way to let them get flat is to let them get exposed to the air.

JUSTICE O. W. HOLMES, Opinion, U. S. Supreme Court, 1920.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, Vol. xi, p. 36.

² Error of opinion may be tolerated where reason is left free to combat it.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, First Inaugural, 4 March, 1801.

³ I never had an opinion in politics or religion which I was afraid to own.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. vii, p. 299.

⁴ How long halt ye between two opinions?
Old Testament: I Kings, xviii, 21.

⁵ We find scarcely any persons of good sense save those who agree with us. (Nous ne trouvons guère de gens de bon sens que ceux qui sont de notre avis.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 347.

"My idea of an agreeable person," said Hugo Bohun, "is a person who agrees with me."

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 41.

"That was excellently observed," say I when I read a passage in another where his opinion agrees with mine. When we differ, then I pronounce him to be mistaken.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

⁶ New opinions are always suspected, and usually opposed, without any other reason, but because they are not already common.

JOHN LOCKE, An Essay Concerning Human Understanding: Dedicatory Epistle.

⁷ Men are never so good or so bad as their opinions.

JAMES MACKINTOSH, Ethical Philosophy.

⁸ Remember that to change thy mind and to follow him that sets thee right, is to be none the less a free agent.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. viii, sec. 16.

⁹ Each man's opinion freely is his own Concerning anything, or anybody.

MASINGER, The Fatal Dowry. Act ii, sc. 2.

¹⁰ Size is a matter of opinion.

GEORGE MEKINTH, Richard Feverel. Ch. 34.

¹¹ We can never be sure that the opinion we are endeavouring to stifle is a false opinion; and even if we were sure, stifling it would be an evil still.

JOHN STUART MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 2.

¹² Men are tormented by their own opinions of things, and not by the things themselves.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 40. Quoted as "an ancient Greek sentence."

¹³ Even opinion is of force enough to make itself to be espoused at the expense of life.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 40.

¹⁴ Some praise at morning what they blame at night,

But always think the last opinion right.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 230.

¹⁵ Vain Opinion all doth sway.

THOMAS CAMPION, Song: Whether Men.

¹⁶ I have bought

Golden opinions from all sorts of people.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 7, l. 33.

Fish not, with this melancholy bait,
For this fool gudgeon, this opinion.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 1, l. 101.

¹⁷ A plague of opinion! a man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 265.

¹⁸ Wind puffs up empty bladders; opinion, fools.

SOCRATES.

¹⁹ Following opinion, dark and blind,
That vagrant leader of the mind.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Ode to Dr. Wm. Sancroft.

²⁰ You, if you were here, would think otherwise.
(Tu, si hic sis, aliter sentias.)

TERENCE, Andria. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 10.

²¹ Inconsistencies of opinion, arising from changes of circumstances, are often justifiable.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, in Senate, 25 July, 1846.

III.—Opinion: So Many Men So Many Minds

²² For a thousand heads, a thousand tastes. (Quot capitum vivunt, totidem studiorum Milia.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 1, l. 27.

Count all the folks in the world, you'll find
A separate fancy for each separate mind.

HORACE, Satires, ii, l. 27. (Conington, tr.)

²³ There never were in the world two opinions alike, no more than two hairs or two grains; the most universal quality is diversity.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 37.

²⁴ So many men, so many minds. (Quot homines tot sententiae.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 454. (Act ii, sc. 4.)

As many heads, as many wits there been.

As the saying is, So many heads, so many wits.

QUEEN ELIZABETH, Godly Meditation of the Christian Soul. (1548)

IV—Opinion: Opinion Rules the World

Opinion governs all mankind,

Like the blind's leading of the blind.

BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l. 267. (1670)

We are all of us more or less the slaves of opinion.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Political Essays: On Court Influence.

Opinion can do much, and indeed she is that great lady which rules the world.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. II, No. 39.

Opinion is that high and mighty Dame Which rules the world.

JAMES HOWELL, Vocal Forest: Introduction.

The good opinion of mankind, like the lever of Archimedes, with the given fulcrum, moves the world.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiv, p. 222.

Yet it is but opinion, and that must be the world's master always.

GERVASE MARKHAM, English House-Wife, 70. (1515)

In politics it is almost a triviality to say that public opinion now rules the world.

JOHN STUART MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 3.

Opinion is the queen of the world. (L'opinion est la reine du monde.)

PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. v, No. 311.

V—Opinion: Stubborn Opinion

An illogical opinion only requires rope enough to hang itself.

AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Obiter Dicta: The Via Media.

The man who never alters his opinion is like standing water, and breeds reptiles of the mind.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

Stiff in opinions, always in the wrong.

DEVZEN, Abdalom and Achilophel. Pt. 1, l. 547.

Last of all, men vehemently in love with their own new opinions, though never so absurd, and obstinately bent to maintain them, gave those their opinions also that revered name of Conscience, as if they would have it seem unlawful to change or speak against them.

THOMAS HOBBES, Leviathan. Pt. 1, ch. 7.

People who hold such absolute opinions Should stay at home, in Protestant dominions.

Not travel like male Mrs. Trollopes.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 252.

Dogmatism is puppyism come to its full growth.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Man Made of Money. (Will and Opinions of Jerrold, p. 28.)

Those who never retract their opinions love themselves more than they love truth. (Ceux qui ne se rétractent jamais s'aiment plus que la vérité.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 161.

The foolish and the dead alone never change their opinion.

J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows: Abraham Lincoln.

His own opinion was his law.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 37.

UNKNOWN, Thoughts for the Cloister and the Crowd, p. 21. (Quoted by Mill, On Liberty.)

VI—Opinion: Other People's Opinion

We think as we do, mainly because other people think so.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Notes-Books, p. 328.

Stay at home in your mind. Don't recite other people's opinions.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims.

When private men shall act with original views, the lustre will be transferred from the actions of kings to those of gentlemen.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

That man is best who considers everything for himself. (ὁὗτος μὲν πάντων, ὃς αὐτὸς πάντα νοήσει φρονέμενος.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 293.

For the most part, we inherit our opinions. We are the heirs of habits and mental customs. Our beliefs, like the fashion of our garments, depend on where we were born.

R. G. INGERMOUTH, Why I Am an Agnostic.

¹ I very much suspect that if thinking men would have the courage to think for themselves, and to speak what they think, it would be found they do not differ in . . . opinions as much as is supposed.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiii, p. 349.

² Opinion! which on crutches walks,
And sounds the words another talks.

DAVID LLOYD, The Poet, l. 55.

¹² Happy those who are convinced so as to be of the general opinions.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 227.

Singularity in the right hath ruined many: happy those who are convinced of the general opinion.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1757.

¹³ I traversed a dominion
Whose spokesmen spake out strong
Their purpose and opinion
Through pulpit, press, and song. . . .
I saw, in web unbroken,
Its history outwrought
Not as the loud had spoken,
But as the mute had thought.

THOMAS HARDY, Mute Opinion.

¹⁴ Nothing is more unjust or capricious than public opinion.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 84.

Public opinion, a vulgar, impertinent, anonymous tyrant who deliberately makes life unpleasant for anyone who is not content to be the average man.

DEAN W. R. INGE, Outspoken Essays: Ser. I, Our Present Discontents.

¹⁵ The pressure of public opinion is like the pressure of the atmosphere; you can't see it—but, all the same, it is sixteen pounds to the square inch.

J. R. LOWELL, in interview with Julian Hawthorne. (BRANDER MATTHEWS, New York Times, 2 April, 1922.)

¹⁶ Public opinion has its natural flux and reflux.

MACAULAY, Essays: Machiavelli.

¹⁷ Popular opinions, on subjects not palpable to sense, are often true, but seldom or never the whole truth.

JOHN STUART MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 2.

¹⁸ To take by armed conquest is spasmodic and temporary, the conquest of public opinion alone is enduring.

DORA RUSSELL, Right to Be Happy, p. 112.

¹⁹ I know where there is more wisdom than is found in Napoleon, Voltaire, or all the ministers present and to come—in public opinion. (Je connais quelqu'un qui a plus d'esprit que Napoléon, que Voltaire, que tous les ministres présents et futurs: c'est l'opinion.)

TALLEYRAND, Speech, in French Senate, 1821.

OPPORTUNITY

I—Opportunity: Definitions

²⁰ Opportunity is whoredom's bawd.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 329. (1605)

Opportunity is the great bawd.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1735.

Thou strong seducer, Opportunity.

DAYDEN, II Conquest of Granada. Act 4, sc. 3.

²¹ What is opportunity to the man who can't use it? An unfecundated egg, which the waves of time wash away into nonentity.

GEORGE ELIOT, Scenes from Clerical Life: Amos Barton.

¹ Occasion is a great matter. Terence says well, "I came in time, which is the chief thing of all." Julius Caesar understood occasion: Pompey and Hannibal did not.

LUTHER, Table-Talk. No. 848.

² Opportunity is a god. (Τὸν Καὶρὸν θεὸς λέβν.)
PALLADAS, quoting Menander. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 52.)

³ O Opportunity, thy guilt is great!
'Tis thou that execut'st the traitor's treason:
Thou set'st the wolf where he the lamb may get;

Whoever plots the sin, thou point'st the season;

'Tis thou that spurn'st at right, at law, at reason;

And in thy shady cell, where none may spy
him,

Sits Sin, to seize the souls that wander by
him.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 876.

The opportunity for doing mischief is found a hundred times a day, and of doing good once in a year. (L'occasion de faire du mal se trouve cent fois par jour, et celle de faire du bien une fois dans l'année.)

VOLTAIRE, Zadig.

⁴ Opportunity is the best captain of all endeavor. (Καὶρὸς γὰρ, ὅταν ἀνδράσιν μέγιστος ἔργου παύσις ἐστ' ἐπιταράκη.)

SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 75.

II—Opportunity: Apothegms

⁵ A man must make his opportunity, as oft as find it.

FRANCIS BACON, Advancement of Learning:
Civil Knowledge. Sec. 3.

A wise man will make more opportunities than he finds.

BACON, Essays: Of Ceremonies and Respects.

⁶ Opportunity makes a thief.

FRANCIS BACON, Letter to the Earl of Essex, 1598. The earliest appearance of this axiom in English literature is in a manuscript of unknown authorship, Hall Meidenhad (Early English Text Society, 17), dating from about 1220: "Man saith that ease maketh thief."

Opportunity makes a man commit larceny.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruits, Fo. 169. (1591)

⁷ When one door is shut, another opens. (Donde una puerta se cierra, otra se abre.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Bk. i, ch. 21.

⁸ Small opportunities are often the beginning of great enterprises.

DEMOSTHENES, In Leptinem. Sec. 163.

⁹ Observe the opportunity.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, iv, 20.

¹⁰ No great man ever complains of want of opportunity.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. v, p. 534.

¹¹ Fortune once in the course of our life doth put into our hands the offer of a good turn.

SIR GEOFFREY FENTON, Bandello. Vol. ii, p. 148.

¹² Man's extremity is God's opportunity.

JOHN FLAVEL, A Faithful and Ancient Account of Some Late and Wonderful Sea Deliverances. (c. 1680) Quoted by Lord Belhaven in a speech to the Scottish Parliament, 2
Nov., 1706.

¹³ Seek not for fresher founts afar,
Just drop your bucket where you are.

SAM WALTER FOSS, Opportunity.

Let down your buckets where you are.

BOOKER T. WASHINGTON, Address, Atlanta Exposition.

¹⁴ Keep thou from the Opportunity, and God will keep thee from the Sin.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1744.

¹⁵ He who seizes the [right] moment is the right man. (Der den Augenblick ergreift Das ist der rechte Mann.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 4, l. 494.

¹⁷ We sail, at sunrise, daily, "outward bound."

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, Outward Bound.

¹⁸ To improve the golden moment of opportunity, and catch the good that is within our reach, is the great art of life.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. vi, p. 214.

¹⁹ The career open to talents, that was my principle.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. (O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile.) The same principle which he expressed in another phrase, "Every French soldier carries in his knapsack the baton of a marshal of France."

To the very last, he had a kind of idea; that, namely, of la carrière ouverte aux talents—the tools to him that can handle them.

JOHN GIBSON LOCKHART, referring to Napoleon. (Article on Sir Walter Scott in London and Westminster Review, 1838.) Carlyle, in his essay on Mirabeau (1837), quotes the phrase as from "a New England book."

²⁰ Opportunity has power everywhere; always let your hook be hanging; where you least expect it, there will swim a fish. (Casus ubique valet; semper tibi pendeat hamus: Quo minime credas gurgite, piscis erit.)

Ovid, Art Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 425.

1 Know your opportunity. (Καὶ πόρ γράβει.)

PITTACUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pittacus. Bk. i, sec. 79.) Diogenes Laertius says that this apothegm belongs to Pittacus, one of the seven wise men of Greece, who died about 570 B. C. The phrase is said to have been inscribed on the temple of Apollo at Delphi.

Know your opportunity. (Γινώσκου καὶ πόρ.)

PITTACUS. (AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 203.)

III—Opportunity: Its Knock

10 O, once in each man's life, at least,

Good luck knocks at his door;

And wit to seize the flitting guest

Need never hunger more.

But while the loitering idler waits

Good luck beside his fire,

The bold heart storms at fortune's gates,

And conquers its desire.

L. J. BATES, Good Luck.

As th' pote says, Opportunity knocks at ivry man's dure wanet. On some men's dures it hammers till it breaks down th' dure an' thin it goes in an' wakes him up if he's asleep, an' lver afterward it wurruks i' him as a night-watchman. On other men's dures it knocks an' runs away, an' on th' dures iv some men it knocks an' whin they come out it hits thim over th' head with an axe. But ivrywan has an opportunity. FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Mr. Carnegie's Gift.

71 Master of human destinies am I!
Fame, love, and fortune on my footsteps wait.
Cities and fields I walk; I penetrate

Deserts and seas remote, and passing by

Hovel and mart and palace, soon or late

I knock unbidden once at every gate!

If sleeping, wake—if feasting, rise before

I turn away. It is the hour of fate,

And they who follow me reach every state

Mortals desire, and conquer every foe

Save death; but those who doubt or hesitate,

Condemned to failure, penury and woe,

Seek me in vain and uselessly implore:

I answer not, and I return no more!

JOHN JAMES INGALLS, Opportunity. First published in Truth, New York, Feb., 1891.

With rustling wings, she swept from heaven and Beside me where I loitered in the way. . . [stood
Her brow was calm, and in her outstretched hand
She bore a gift—a virgin bud that blushed Disparting its green sheath. . . . She spake no word.

But paused a little space and looked at me
With silent scorn; then plumed her shining wings
In sudden flight, nor ever came again.

JAMES B. KEWON, Opportunity.

12 They do me wrong who say I come no more

When once I knock and fail to find you in;

For every day I stand outside your door

And bid you wake, and rise to fight and win.

Weep not for precious chances passed away!

Weep not for golden ages on the wane!

Each night I burn the records of the day—

At sunrise every soul is born again!

WALTER MALONE, Opportunity.

The actual fact is that in this dry Opportunity not only knocks at your door but is playing an anvil chorus on every man's door, and then lays for the owner around the corner with a club. . . . ELMER HUMPHREY, (The Philistines.)

IV—Opportunity: Its Forelock

1 Let nothing pass that will advantage you;
hairy in front, Opportunity is bald behind.
(Rem tibi quam nosces aptam dimittere noli; Fronte capillata, post est Occasio calva.)

DIONYSIUS CATO, Disticha de Moribus, ii, 26

In Roman mythology, Occasio (Occasion, or, in more idiomatic English, Opportunity) was personified as a god or goddess standing on a rotating wheel, the feet fitted with winged sandals, the head hairy in front but bald behind. Time (Saturnus) also had a character of Opportunity, as distinguished from Length of Years, and in this character (in Greek Kairos as distinguished from Chronos) was also represented as hairy in front and bald behind.

2 Who lets slip Fortune, her shall never find;
Occasion, once passed by, is bald behind.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Pyramus and Thisbe. St. 15. (1663)

Occasion . . . being bald can not easily be gotten again if she be once let slip.

WILLIAM PAINTER, Palace of Pleasure, i, 266. (1566)

3 Zeal and duty are not slow,
But on occasion's forelock watchful wait.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iii, l. 172.

4 Opportunity has hair on her forehead, but is bald behind. If you meet her seize her, for once let slip, Jove himself cannot bring her back. (Occasio prima sui parte comosa, posteriore calva. Quam si occupas, teneas elapsam. Non isse possit Jupiter reprehendere.)

PRÆDUS, Fables. Bk. v, fab. 8.

5 "And who art thou?" "Time who subdueth all things." "Why dost thou stand on tiptoe?" "I am ever running." "Why dost thou have a pair of wings on thy feet?" "I fly with the wind." . . . "Why does thy hair hang over thy face?" "For him who meets me to take me by the forelock." "And why is the back of thy head bald?" "Because none whom I have once raced by, though he sorely wishes it, may take hold of me from behind."

POSIMPIUS, On a Statue of Time by Lysippus. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xvi, epig. 275. The Planudean Appendix.) Time, here, it should be noted, is in his character of Opportunity, the word used being Kairos.

"Why hast thou hair upon thy brow?"

"To seize me by, when met."

"Why is thy head then bald behind?"

"Because men wish in vain,

When I have run past on winged feet

To catch me e'er again."

POSIMPIUS, On a Statue of Time by Lysippus.

A metrical version.

6 For occasion hath all her hair on her forehead;

when she is past, you may not recall her. She hath no tuft whereby you can lay hold on her, for she is bald on the hinder part of her head, and never returneth again.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 18.

Bold as an oracle.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act i, sc. 3, l. 192.

Thou shalt be my great Apollo. (Eris mihi magnus Apollo.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. iii, l. 104. Referring to the oracle of the temple of Apollo.

ORANGE

We squeeze an orange and throw away the rind.

FREDERICK THE GREAT, to La Mettrie, Sept., 1751, saying that he should want Voltaire only a year longer.

Is it where the flow'r of the orange blows?

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, The Better Land.

Yes, sing the song of the orange-tree,

With its leaves of velvet green;

With its luscious fruit of sunset hue,

The fairest that ever were seen.

J. K. HOYT, The Orange-Tree.

Orange bright,

Like golden lamps in a green night.

ANDREW MARVELL, Bermudas.

If I were yonder orange-tree

And thou the blossom blooming there,

I would not yield a breath of thee

To scent the most imploring air!

THOMAS MOORE, If I Were Yonder Wave.

Orange-trees

Whose fruit and blossoms in the breeze

Were wantoning together free,

Like age at play with infancy.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Paradise and the Peri.

Civil as an orange, and something of that jealous complexion.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 305.

And every day when I've been good,

I get an orange after food.

R. L. STEVENSON, System.

Lightnings and thunders from his mouth he hurled,

And made a chaos of the Grecian world.

("Hesperus", ἑσπέρης, ἑσπερία τῆς Ἑλλάδος.)

ARISTOPHANES, Acharnians, l. 531.

Solon compared the people unto the sea, and orators to the winds: for that the sea would be calm and quiet, if the winds did not trouble it.

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms, No. 232.

Solon wished everybody to be ready to take everybody else's part; but surely Chilo was wiser in holding that public affairs go best when the laws have much attention and the orators none.

REV. JOHN BEACON, Letter to Earl Grey, 1831.

Now your rater and debater

Is baulked by a mere spectator

Who simply stares and listens.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pacchiarotto. St. 7.

An orator is a man who says what he thinks and feels what he says.

W. J. BRYAN. (HUBBEN, The Peerless Leader, p. 118.)

For rhetoric, he could not ope

His mouth, but out there flew a trope.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 81.

His sober lips then did he softly part,

Whence of pure rhetoric whole streams outflow.

EDWARD FAIRFAX, Godfrey of Bullogne.

From whose mouth issu'd forth

Mellifluous streams that water'd all the schools

Of Academics old and new.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iv, l. 276.

None knew, nor how, nor why, but he entwined

Himself perforce around the hearer's mind.

BYRON, Lara. Canto i, st. 19.

Proud of his "Hear him," proud, too, of his vote

And lost virginity of oratory.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 91.

The Orator persuades and carries all with him, he knows not how; the Rhetorician can prove that he ought to have persuaded and carried all with him.

CARLYLE, Essays: Characteristics.

Little other than a red-tape talking-machine and unhappy bag of parliamentary eloquence.

CARLYLE, Letter-Day Pamphlets. No. 1.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. ii, l. 545.

If a man should be out and forget his last sentence . . . then his last refuge is to begin with an Utinque (howsoever).

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 23 Jan., 1661.

Very good orators, when they are out, they will spit.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 75.

He mouths a sentence as curs mouth a bone.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rascals, l. 322.

Nay, an thou 't mouth,

It'll rant as well as thou.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 306.

Let arms give place to the robe, and the laurel wreath [of the soldier] yield to the tongue [of the orator]. (Cedant arma togæ, concedat laurea linguae.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 22, sec. 77. This is the line as usually quoted, but Cicero really wrote laudi, not lingue.

The good orator is despised, the rude soldier loved. (Spernitur orator bonus, horridus miles amatur.)

ENNIUS. (AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. xx, ch. 10, sec. 4.)

Loud-bawling orators are driven by their weakness to noise, as lame men to take horse.

CICERO. (PLUTARCH, Roman Apophthegms.)

Fire in each eye, and papers in each hand, They rave, reckon, and madden round the land.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 5.

You'd scarce expect one of my age

To speak in public on the stage;

And if I chance to fall below

Demosthenes or Cicero,

Don't view me with a critic's eye,

But pass my imperfections by.

Large streams from little fountains flow,

Tall oaks from little acorns grow.

DAVID EVERETT, Lines Written for a School Declamation by a Little Boy of Seven. (Columbian Orator, Boston, 1797.)

Men of action intervene only when the orators have finished.

ÉMILE GABORIAU, Monsieur Lecoq. Pt. ii, ch. 7.

Frequent and soft as falls the winter's snow,

Thus from his lips the copious periods flow.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iii, l. 222.

It makes a vast difference whether a god or a hero speaks. (Interit multum, divuane loquatur an heros.)

HORACE, Art Poetica, l. 114.

There is no true orator who is not a hero.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Eloquence.

Like a rough orator, that brings more truth than rhetoric, to make good his accusation.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act v, sc. 3.

Thence to the famous Orators repair,

Those ancient, whose resistless eloquence

Wielded at will that fierce democratic,

Shook the Arsenal, and fulmin'd over Greece,

To Macedon, and Artaxerxes' throne.

MILTON, Paradise Regained, Bk. iv, l. 267.

What orators lack in depth they make up to you in length. (Ce qui manque aux orateurs en profondeur ils vous le donnent en longueur.)

MONTESQUIEU, Lettres.

The capital of the orator is in the bank of the highest sentimentalities and the purest enthusiasms.

EDWARD G. PARKER, The Golden Age of American Oratory. Ch. 1.

I never failed to convince an audience that the best thing they could do was to go away.

T. L. PRACOCK, Crochet Castle. Ch. 18.

The remark is just—but then you have not been under the wand of the magician.

WILLIAM PITT, in 1783, referring to the eloquence of Fox.

An orator's virtue is to speak the truth.

(Ἠράτος δὲ τἀληθὲ λέγειν.)

PLATO, Apologia of Socrates, sec. 18.

He possesses the utmost facility and copiousness of expression, and though always extempore, his discourses have all the propriety and elegance of the most studied and elaborate compositions.

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 3.

A man very skilled in moving to tears. (Vir movendarum lacrymarum peritissimus.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 11.

The orator is the mouth [os] of a nation.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest.

Pt. ii, No. 21.

A man becomes an orator; he is born eloquent.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest.

Pt. ii, No. 24.

Whose words all ears took captive.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act

v, sc. 3, l. 17.

List his discourse of war, and you shall hear

A fearful battle render'd you in music:

Turn him to any cause of policy,

The Gordian knot of it he will unloose,

Familiar as his garter: that, when he speaks,

The air, a charter'd libertine, is still,

And the mute wonder lurketh in men's ears,

To steal his sweet and honey'd sentences.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act i, sc. 1, l. 43.

I am no orator, as Brutus is;

But, as you know me all, a plain blunt

man, . . .

For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth,
Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech,
To stir men's blood: I only speak right on.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 221.

1
So on the tip of his subduing tongue,
All kinds of arguments and question deep,
All replication prompt, and reason strong,
For his advantage still did wake and sleep:
To make the weeper laugh, the laughter weep,
He had the dialect and different skill.

SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 120.

Aged ears play truant at his tales
And younger hearings are quite ravished;
So sweet and voluble is his discourse.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act ii,
sc. 1, l. 74.

A man in all the world's new fashion planted,
That hath a mint of phrases in his brain.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc.
1, l. 165.

2
Fear not, my lord, I'll play the orator.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 95.

More I could tell, but more I dare not say;
The text is old, the orator too green.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 805.

3
And with a sweeping of the arm,
And a lack-lustre dead-blue eye,
Devolved his rounded periods.

Most people have ears, but few have judgement; tickle those ears, and, depend upon it, you will catch their judgements, such as they are.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Dec., 1749.

7 Delivery is the management, with grace, of voice, countenance, and gesture. (Pronuntiatio est vocis, vultus, gestus moderatio cum venu-
state.)

Falls soporific on the listless ear.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 19.

The Chadband style of oratory is widely received and much admired.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 19.

10
Action! Action! Action!

DEMOSTHENES, when asked what three things made the perfect orator. See under ACT.

"Eloquence," replied the ancient orator, "is action, still action, and ever action." Action! what does that signify? Did he mean gesture? voice?
attitude? hearing? delivery? movement of ideas?
the vivacity of the images? . . . Yes, all this at once.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest.
Pt. ii, No. 30.

I asked of my dear friend Orator Prig:

"What's the first part of oratory?" He said, "A great wig."

"And what is the second?" Then, dancing a jig
And bowing profoundly, he said, "A great wig."

"And what is the third?" Then he snored like a pig,

And puffing his cheeks out, he replied, "A great wig."

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, Orator Prig.

Some, for fear their orations should giggle,
will not let them smile.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State, p. 169.

13
He needs to acquire the art of seeming to pluck, as he goes along in the progress of his speech, as by the wayside, some flower of rhetoric.

BENJAMIN HARRISON, Speech, at banquet of the New England Society of Pennsylvania,
22 Dec., 1893.

14
He lays aside bombast and many-syllabled words if he wishes to touch the heart of his hearer. (Proicit ampullas et sesquipedalia verba, Si curat cor spectantis tetigisse que-rella.)

HORACE, Art Poetica, l. 97.

15
Amplification is the vice of the modern orator. . . . Speeches measured by the hour die with the hour.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xvi, p. 30.

16
Oratory is the power of beating down your adversary's arguments, and putting better in their place.

MACAULAY, Essays: Athenian Orators.

Poured thick and fast the burning words which tyrants quake to hear.

MACAULAY, Virginia, l. 92.

⁴ Rhetoric, or the art of speaking, is an enchantment of the soul. (ὑποχρηστικὴν ὁύσαν.)
PLATO, Phædrus. Sec. 271.

Her chiefest business is a careful study of the affections and passions, which are, so to speak, strings and stops of the soul, requiring a very judicious fingering and striking.

PERICLES. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Pericles. Ch. 15, sec. 4.) After quoting Plato's phrase, given above.

There is a Truth and Beauty in Rhetoric; but it oftener serves ill turns than good ones.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude.

Rhetoric is very good or stark naught. . . . If I am not fully persuaded, I laugh at the orator.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Preaching.

⁵ Far more effective [than books] is the spoken word. There is something in the voice, the countenance, the bearing, and the gesture of the speaker, that concur in fixing an impression upon the mind, deeper than can even vigorous writings.

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. li, epist. 3.

⁶ It is a thing of no great difficulty to raise objections against another man's oration,—nay, it is a very easy matter; but to produce a better in its place is a work extremely troublesome.

PLUTARCH, Of Hearing. Sec. 6.

⁷ Few speeches which have produced an electrical effect on an audience can bear the colorless photography of a printed record.

LORD ROSSLYN, Life of Pitt. Ch. 13.

⁸ Nephew, what means this passionate discourse,

This peroration with such circumstance?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 104.

⁹ With mild heat of holy oratory.

Rhyme the pipe, and Time the warder,
The sun obeys them, and the moon.

EMERSON, Monadnock. St. 12.

¹⁷ Confusion heard his voice, and wild uproar
Stood rul'd, stood vast infinitude confin'd;
Till at his second bidding darkness fled,
Light shone, and order from disorder sprung.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 710.

¹⁸ Order is Heav'n's first law; and, this confest,
Some are and must be greater than the rest,
More rich, more wise: but who infers from hence

That such are happier, shocks all common sense.

PORR, Essay on Man. Epist. iv, l. 49.

² As an ox goeth to the slaughter.

Old Testament: Proverbs, vii, 22; Jeremiah, xi, 19.

³ Oxen that rattle the yoke and chain or halt in the leafy shade, what is that you express in your eyes?

It seems to me more than all the print I have read in my life.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself.

He has the night among the gentle trees,
The dark surrounds him, and the Pleiades
Swing steady lanterns high above his head. . . .
The day is dead that gave him aching knees,
The night is his among the gentle trees.

MARTHA BANNING THOMAS, The Ox.

⁴ The cattle are grazing,
Their heads never raising;
There are forty feeding like one!

WORDSWORTH, Written in March.

⁵ The ox has spoken. (Bos locutus est.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb, referring to the belief that the ox uttered omens from time to time, such as "Romans, beware!"

OYSTER

⁶ Nor brighter was his eye, nor moister
Than a too-long opened oyster.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Pied Piper. Sec. 4.

⁷ There are only two creatures I would envy—a horse in his wild state traversing the forests of Asia, and an oyster on some of the desert shores of Europe. The one has not a wish without enjoyment; the other has neither wish nor fear.

ROBERT BURNS. (R. W. CROMEK, Reliques of Robert Burns.)

⁸ The oyster is unseasonable and unwholesome in all months that have not the letter R in their name.

HENRY BUTTES, Dyets Dry Dinner. Sig N 1. (1599)

Oysters must not be eaten in those months, which in pronouncing want the letter R.

WILLIAM VAUGHAN, Directions for Health, p. 22. (1600)

A month without an R in it has nae richt being in the year.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosiana. No. 16.

⁹ But four young Oysters hurried up,
All eager for the treat:

Their coats were brushed, their faces washed,
Their shoes were clean and neat—
And this was odd, because, you know,
They hadn't any feet.

LEWIS CARROLL, Through the Looking-Glass.
Ch. 4.

¹⁰ Ah, hapless wretch! condemn'd to dwell
For ever in my native shell;
Ordain'd to move when others please,
Not for my own content or ease;
But toss'd and buffeted about,
Now in the water and now out.
'Twere better to be born a stone,
Of ruder shape, and feeling none,
Than with a tenderness like mine,
And sensibilities so fine!

COWPER, The Poet, the Oyster and Sensitive Plant, l. 5.

¹¹ Secret and self-contained, and solitary as an oyster.

DICKENS, A Christmas Carol. Stave 1.

¹² "It's a wery remarkable circumstance, sir," said Sam, "that poverty and oysters always seem to go together."

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 22.

¹³ "Very good power o' suction, Sammy," said
Mr. Weller the elder. . . . "You'd ha' made an uncommon fine oyster, Sammy, if you'd beeo born in that station o' life."

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 23.

¹⁴ He was a bold man who first swallowed an oyster.

JAMES I OF ENGLAND. See WARD, Diary, c. 1660.

He was a bold man that first eat an oyster.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial ii.

¹⁵ I will not be sworn but love may transform me to an oyster; but I'll take my oath on it, till he have made an oyster of me, he shall never make me such a fool.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 25.

¹⁶ It is the sick oyster which possesses the pearl.
JOHN A. SHEDD, Salt from My Attic, p. 30.

¹⁷ An oyster may be crossed in love!
SHERMAN, The Critic. Act iii, sc. 1.

"An oyster may be crossed in love,"—and why?
Because he mopeth idly in his shell,
And heaves a lonely subterraqueous sigh.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 81.

Then love was the pearl of his oyster,
